There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, marvin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for sprained or sweenied horse and mules, or for scalded sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & Co., 55 Broadway, New York.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in e xistence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and assiduous use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; restores vigor to the scalp, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brandy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually maintained for the period of twelve weeks or more within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

Local Matters.

Landscape Painting.

Somebody once said that among the things which human eye had never seen were dead donkeys and postboys, and until recently we imagined that the class of landscape painters who are best known by their works were included in the list of invisibles, with the defunct donkeys, etc.; for, though we had seen specimens innumerable of their handiwork, we had never seen them at work, (or heard of them as having been seen.) We had a shadowy idea that the modest announcements that "The Great Dr. de Murphy's Pittatyana is the Only Sure Remedy for Omnipotence and Eternity," or "Tragic Oil Cures Fame," grew on fences and walls, and barns and bridges, instantaneously and unseen, something as toadstools grow in pastures. But the discovery has at last been made that the quack-medicine puffs which disfigure public and private property to such a disgraceful extent all over the Union, are actually the work of men, two artists having been surprised recently while engaged at a late hour of the night in ornamenting a fence with a large-sized record of the virtues of Dr. Quack's extract of the genuine Cochin China ragibus weedee, or something else quite as valuable. The artists, in answer to the query of the owner of the premises as to what they were doing and who gave them permission to do it, replied that they had no one's permission and did not suppose it necessary to have, as they were engaged in a legitimate job; but the fence-owner considered the time selected for doing the job—the middle of the night—pretty good proof that the artists were either ashamed of their occupation or aware that they were breaking a law. A police officer happened along at that moment, and on being appealed to said the painters were liable to a big fine, but that he had no power to make a summary arrest; but a justice of the peace arrived a moment later, and in answer to a question as to what he would do to a man who should disfigure his property in such a manner, replied, "Lock him up; and if you want to put this matter through, I'll give Mr. —— the necessary authority to make an arrest in five minutes." But the artists (who were civil throughout) finally compromised matters by agreeing to give the whole fence a good coat of paint, of the color they had commenced to put on it, and after depositing ten dollars as security were allowed to withdraw. We think a prosecution would have been the better way to have settled the affair, for though that course might have borne harder upon men possibly not well able to stand it, it would have been more satisfactory to the many who are constantly disgusted and outraged with hideous and often indecent roadside advertisements, daubed on fences and rocks in defiance of laws to the contrary.

Another Summer Hotel.

On the 12th of June, 1871, the Sagamore House at Frost's Point was totally destroyed by fire, since which time that favorable location has been entirely neglected. Previous to that time, under the efficient management of Messrs. G. W. & J. S. Peirce, the house had won an extended and favorable reputation, its advantages of position, the richness of its fittings, the perfection of its cuisine and the attentive courtesy of the landlords having secured a large patronage of visitors who returned thither each summer, and drawn commendatory notices from many newspapers in a dozen different States. Among its other regular-returning guests were several noted military and masonic organizations, the big tent on the Point being called into requisition year after year to shelter Veterans and Knights Templar. It is singular that the site of the burned Sagamore should have lain unoccupied so long, as the harbor and ocean views are unsurpassed, the temperature is generally low, the facilities for bathing are good, ocean and smooth water boating and fishing can be had within a few rods of each other, and the place is easy of access either by water or over a good road, the longest route to it (that by water) being only three miles; but we learn that arrangements are now being completed for putting up a new Sagamore House on the location of the old one.

The new house is planned to be much larger than the old, and in fact larger than any other within many miles. Fronting the southwest, it will present a length of 288 feet, with a height of four stories (including Mansard roof), the lower two being each 13 feet in height, the third 11 feet and the upper one 10, which will put the eaves of the building over fifty feet from the ground. In the centre of the building will be a large tower 20 feet high from the roof, and at each end a smaller tower, 12 feet high. In the rear, an ell, 156 feet by 56 on the first floor, and 40 feet wide on the second, will extend from the middle of the building almost to the extremity of the point, and will contain the dining hall, 155 feet long by 42 feet broad, and 12 large bedrooms fronting the ocean; and beneath the eastern end of the ell will be the billiard room, the ground falling off in such a manner as to make that location most suitable for that purpose. The kitchen and carving room will be in another building, 40 feet by 36, connected with the main one only by a covered way; and the upper stories of this detached building will be fitted for a dance hall and servants' rooms. The house will contain 262 large bedrooms, and will easily accommodate 525 guests. We understand that work is to be commenced upon it very soon, in order that the building may be framed and boarded in before winter, in which case the house can be got ready for the reception of guests next season without any hurry in the matter.

Speed the Change.

[Boston Transcript.]

One of the changes sure to follow the rapid increase in the growth of a large town or small city is the abolition of the practice of tolling bells at funerals.

Smoke.

About three minutes before three o'clock this (Wednesday) morning, Dr. J. J. Page, who was sleeping in his office over the store of W. W. Henderson & Co., Daniel street, was awakened by a dense smoke which nearly suffocated him. Leaping from the bed he seized his boots, hat, pants, coat and writing desk and put out for the street in search of fresh air. On Market square he met the city and bank watchmen, and an alarm was given. Kearsarge steamer No. 3 was on hand in an incredible short space of time and with Sagamore No. 2 soon flooded the Doctor's room, in which but little trace of fire was found. Henderson's dry goods store remained locked and no goods were removed, Mr. Henderson being away. Very little fire was seen, but a great amount of smoke poured out of the building. But two-thirds of the stock in the store is badly damaged by water which was put into the upper story in great abundance. The loss will doubtless amount to several thousand dollars, principally by water. Odd Fellows Hall, in the upper story, was well smoked.

The eagerness with which some of our citizens urge us to "pitch in" to the water monopoly is only equalled by their unconcern when they are requested to attend a meeting called for the purpose of inaugurating measures calculated to relieve the suffering public.

It is said that Hon. E. H. Rollins is sharpening his scalping knife already for Senator Cragin's benefit, and that some of the politicians in the republican ranks hereabouts who have been on the top wave of success for a time and a half, are sorely perplexed and undecided which way to jump.

If there is plenty of water at Fountain Head, why does the aqueduct company delay laying more water mains for the purpose of supplying their customers? If the supply is not sufficient for the purpose, isn't it about time our citizens seriously considered the subject?

A correspondent of the Boston Herald recently accused Rev. B. F. Sanborn of Eliot, of certain scandalous conduct too indecent to describe at length. The members of his church publish a card denouncing the accusation as a gross falsehood and a malicious slander. Mr. Sanborn will proceed against the originator of the story for libel.

If the democrats will only be such goslings as to take Albert R. Hatch, Esq., for their gubernatorial candidate next winter, and the republicans are sufficiently wise to put Hon. William H. Y. Hackett at the head of their ticket, won't old Strawberry Bank just do her whole duty in the premises? Four hundred majority for Hackett will be about a fair thing under such favorable auspices.

The recent launch of the Grandee closes a list of ships which have been built on Noble's Island during the past 20 years by Messrs Tobey & Littlefield. The first ships built by this firm here in 1853, were the Brother Jonathan, for the late R. H. Tucker and others of Wiscasset, Me., and the Morning Light for Glidden & Williams of Boston. The celebrated ship Sierra Nevada, which created such a contest in the courts of England in a suit brought to recover damages against the Mersey Dock and Harbor Board, was also built on this spot. The yard will hereafter be occupied by the railroads for their purposes, and its career of shipbuilding now terminates.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

A Troublesome Hen.

A certain "Esquire Beasly," of Crockett County, Tenn., is in trouble. One of his hens persisted in going up a tree to lay her eggs, and, having laid them in that outrageous position, she added to her iniquity by hatching out a brood of chickens some sixty feet from terra-firma. How those chickens are to be got down is what is worrying the 'squire. He has tried splicing ladders, but the only result was that the splicing broke, and the best darkey boy in the place fell from the top—just as he was getting at the chickens—and broke both of his legs, one of his arms, his collar-bone, and also six of his ribs. He has tried taking down the lightning-rods about the house and poking at the nest with the points, but as this was done during a thunder-storm, three of his hands were killed by lightning, and the nest was not even budged. He has tried shooting at the nest from the garret window with a rifle, but he is not much at shooting, and did not come anywhere near it, while a spent ball knocked off the nose of his eldest son, who was ploughing in one of the back lots. He is thinking now of applying nitro-glycerine to that tree and blowing the whole thing to kingdom come.

GRANDEST SCHEME EVER KNOWN.

Fourth Grand Gift Concert

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE

PUBLIC LIBRARY OF KENTUCKY

12,000 CASH GIFTS $1,500,000

Every Fifth Ticket Draws a Gift

$250,000 for $50.

The Fourth Grand Gift Concert authorized by special act of the Legislature for the benefit of the Public Library of Kentucky, will take place in Public Library Hall, at Louisville, Ky.,

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3d, 1873.

Only sixty thousand tickets will be sold and one-half of these are intended for the European market, thus leaving only 30,000 for sale in the United States, where 100,000 were disposed of for the Third Concert. The tickets are divided into ten coupons, or parts, and have on their back the Scheme with an explanation of the mode of drawing.

At this concert, which will be the grandest musical display ever witnessed in this country, the unprecedented sum of divided into 12,000 cash gifts, will be distributed by lot among the ticket-holders. The number of the tickets to be drawn from one wheel by blind children and the gifts from another.

LIST OF GIFTS:

11,000 CASH GIFTS	50 each,	550,000
TOTAL, 12,000 GIFTS, ALL CASH, amounting to,		$1,500,000

The distribution will be positive, whether all the tickets are sold or not, and the 12,000 gifts all paid in proportion to the tickets sold—all unsold tickets being destroyed, as at the First and Second Concerts, and not represented in the drawing.

PRICE OF TICKETS:

Whole tickets, $50; Halves, $25; Tenths, or each Coupon, $5; Eleven Whole Tickets for $500; 22 Tickets for $1,000; 113 Whole Tickets for $5,000; 227 Whole Tickets for $10,000. No discount on less than $500 worth of Tickets at a time.

The unparalleled success of the Third Gift Concert, as well as the satisfaction given by the First and Second, makes it only necessary to announce the Fourth to insure the prompt sale of every Ticket. The Fourth Gift Concert will be conducted in all its details like the Third, and full particulars may be learned from circulars, which will be sent free from this office to all who apply for them.

Tickets now ready for sale, and all orders accompanied by the money promptly filled. Liberal terms given to those who buy to sell again.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been charged by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part lends me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

THIS Bank pays five per cent. per annum, free of all tax. A greater rate is prohibited by law.

Two dividends are made in the year,—in June and December; and an extra dividend of the surplus earnings every two years. The first extra will be in June, 1874.

Deposits go on interest on the FIRST day of every MONTH, and deposits made during the FIRST THREE days of each MONTH will draw interest from the FIRST day of that MONTH.

Dividends not withdrawn will be added to the principal, and draw interest from the time when declared.

Money is received on deposit, payable on checks at sight.

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.
COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.
We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

The Great South American Blood Purifier.
JURUBEBA
IS THE MOST POWERFUL CLEANSER, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.
IT IS SPECIALLY ADAPTED to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, &c., &c.
WHEN WEARY AND LANGUID from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, the system needs a TONIC to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.
IN THE HEAT OF SUMMER, frequently the LIVER and SPLEEN do not properly perform their functions; the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to bilious derangement.
DR. WELLS'
EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA
is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties; it will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthen the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED and ENFEEBLED Organs.
IT SHOULD BE FREELY TAKEN, as Jurubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

On the Trap.

[Aldine.]

I was only a clown, a painted, grinning clown, attached, on a small salary, to a theatre in the capital of one of the small duchies into which Germany was divided before the genius and ambition of Bismarck had affected its consolidation into the empire. My role was popular because everybody likes to laugh, and likes one who puts them in a laughing mood. My make-up was considered a marvel of perfection. My songs always took, and my gestures and grimaces never failed to elicit the most rapturous applause. It used to be said that my face must be made of India-rubber, it could be twisted and distorted into such strange expressions. But I hated the life, and my success made it more and more distasteful.

One night I went home completely worn out in body and mind. My little sister Ada, fifteen years old, and light and graceful as a sylph, who was engaged as a danseuse at the same theatre, also seemed dispirited and worn. The play had been running forty nights, and the whole company was heartily sick of it. But it was not this alone which exerted a depressing influence on my spirits that evening. For many weeks I had been losing my heart to Fraulein Dora, the principal danseuse of the theatre, who was no less lovely in mind and heart than in her person. She was the most beautiful woman I had ever seen; tall, well-formed, graceful, with a step like a fairy queen, large, thoughtful eyes, and a sweet winning smile. What first drew me to her was her kindness to my sister, whom she took every opportunity to befriend and assist in her profession. This was the more surprising, because Ada promised to become a dangerous rival in the theatrical profession. So I learned to like Dora, and then to love her. But so did everybody else. All the gentry of the place fell in love with her, and raved about her beauty and her dancing, in a way that nearly drove me wild with jealousy. I was in love in the old-fashioned way we read of in novels—I am not ashamed to confess it—eager to kiss the ground on which she trod, and would not believe that any one else could love and worship her with the same devotion. I must not omit to say that Dora, in the midst of all this adulation, displayed the most discreet and modest behavior. She was always attended, to and from the theatre, by her mother; and always returned the rich presents which were showered upon her.

Among all who paid court to Dora, I feared only one, the young, rich, handsome and accomplished Count Ernest von Walters, who pressed his suit with unremitting ardor. What chance had the poor clown against this man? Yet I fancied if he were only out of the way I need not despair of winning her. Did she not love my sister, and had she not often spoken kindly to me and praised my acting and singing? But this day I had learned the worst—that her kindness to me sprang only from a gentle and friendly feeling for the brother of the girl she had learned to love like a sister, and that she had promised to become the wife of Count von Walters. What wonder that I went to my lodgings with despair in my heart!

My little sister exerted herself to make things cheerful in our quiet sitting-room. She suspected nothing of the real cause of my downheartedness, for she, my confidant in everything else, had never been intrusted with the secret of my love for Dora; and in the hope of drawing me out of moody silence, prattled on about a number of unimportant matters. She was interrupted by a knock at the door, followed by the entrance of our landlady. The good soul apologized for coming in at so late an hour, but the postman had brought a letter for me just after we had left for the theatre, and as it bore a foreign postmark, she thought it might be important I should get it that evening. I thanked her mechanically, but a glance at the postmark caused me to tear the letter open with eager and trembling fingers; for I had often heard my father speak of an only brother who had settled in England in early youth, and from whom vague reports came, from time to time, of a successful mercantile career. The letter was postmarked London, and the heavy black border lines told the story before the seal was broken. My uncle was dead. He had never married, and on his death-bed, remembering his only brother, he had left all his wealth to him or his children. For a moment I felt stunned and faint; and Ada, throwing her arms about my neck, begged me to tell her what bad news was in my letter to make me look so strange and pale. I took her on my knee, and told her we were rich, and would have no more to act in the theatre. We would leave this miserable little town and go to Berlin.

To my surprise, Ada again put her arms about my neck, and whispered softly, "Need we leave the theatre immediately, dear brother?"

"No, child," said I, wondering what she could mean; "but tell me why you should want to stay another day, when you can leave at once and be free from this slavery?"

"Because, dear brother," she answered hesitating and blushing, "Fraulein Dora told me I was a great deal prettier than she was, and a better dancer; and that I should have the first place in the new dance they are to put on the stage next week. Oh, I would like to have such a triumph once! It would be such a pleasant way to say good-by to the stage."

I could deny her nothing, my little sister; and though for me it was like going into the torture-room of the Inquisition to enter the theatre and see Count Ernest on such familiar terms with Dora, I consented for the present to conceal my good fortune from our friends, and go on just the same as if nothing had happened.

The eventful evening came at length. The play was interspersed with ballet-dancing, and was to end with a grand transformation scene in which Ada and Dora were to rise as sea nymphs, in a shell-like car, from the waters of a mimic lake. It so happened that, just before the last scene, I went into the room underneath the stage, where the machinery for raising the car was placed, impelled by a strange foreboding of impending misfortune, to assure myself that everything was in order; and that no precaution against accident had been neglected. There I found the master machinist, a dark and gloomy visaged man, standing by the car, muttering to himself in an undertone. "Better she should die than marry the count. He has bewitched her, as he does all women. A little slit would—"

"What are you muttering to yourself," I asked him suddenly; "and what do you mean by these mysterious words?"

He faced me as if struck by an unexpected blow.

"I was only examining the machinery to see that everything was right," he answered, sullenly, and turned away.

I carefully examined the cords by which the car was raised. Everything appeared to be secure and in good order; and I went back to my place, trying to laugh myself out of my apprehensions. But though it was easy to argue that all was right, and that my fears arose merely from some inexplicable disorder of the brain, I could not feel secure. I was positive that some frightful misadventure would occur before the play was over; and every nerve was strained in the effort to maintain a calm exterior.

The play progressed. The curtain rose upon the magnificent transformation scene; and the plaudits of the audience grew tumultuous as the splendors unrolled before them. At length the car began to rise slowly and majestically, to low, sweet strains of music. I watched, with scarcely beating heart and bated breath, the first appearance of the beautiful vision—for like a vision it looked, rising and still rising, the car resplendent with all the tinsel which shone like gold, and silver, and diamonds. A sound as of many tinkling fountains mingled with the strains of delicious music; fairy-land seemed opening upon the sight, with arching bowers and far-reaching vistas, and myriads of elfin forms disporting on the ground and in the air. For a moment I was fascinated, when Ada and Dora, in all their beauty, rose above the lake; their stately car seemingly lifted by invisible hands. I forgot my apprehensions, and once more breathed freely.

Suddenly there was a dreadful crash, and a wild cry filled the house. The car had fallen. For an instant, I felt rooted to the spot where I was standing, and then recovering my senses, rushed forward to learn the worst. As I made my way through the narrow passage under the stage, I heard some one say in a pitying tone; "Poor thing, she will never dance again?" Which was it? Ada? Dora? I fought my way through the crowd of actors and attendants, and saw my little Ada lying senseless in Dora's arms. Throwing myself on my knees, I took her cold hands in both of mine. "My dear friend," said Dora, who was weeping silently, "she is not dead, though dreadfully hurt. The surgeon will be here directly. Compose yourself. She is reviving!"

My little darling opened her eyes, with a deep sigh, and looked about her with a bewildered gaze.

"Hush, little one," said Dora, softly, as she saw Ada was about to speak. "Lie still and be patient till the surgeon comes."

The gentle sufferer closed her eyes, and her little hands pressed mine with a tender grasp. The surgeon was soon on the spot. He assured me that Ada had sustained no fatal injury, but it was doubtful whether she would be able to walk again. With a piteous cry, she fell back in Dora's arms, and fainted dead away.

I had noticed no one but Ada and Dora, but at this moment I was conscious that the count was kneeling beside me, and had clasped Dora's hand. "Better she than you, my love!" he murmured.

Dora gave him a quick look of reproof. "This is no time for love-making," she answered, withdrawing her hand. "Have you no feeling for the poor girl lying here, whose whole life must be one of misery and sorrow?"

"What is this ballet girl to me?" answered the count, stung to the quick, and for a moment thrown off his guard. "Of course, I am sorry for her," he added the next moment, "but —"

At this moment Ada opened her eyes again, and a faint blush struggled with the paleness in her cheeks, as her gaze fell upon the count. A beautiful smile played on her trembling lips, and she reached her hand toward him. "Oh, my love," she said in a low whisper—a whisper which first sent the blood mantling into Dora's face and then left it paler than snow—"you are near and I —"

Something in the count's face stopped her words.

"The girl is wandering," he said, coldly. "She does not know what she is saying."

She had fainted again." Go, count," said Dora, hastily. "Your presence is not wanted here." Her manner was decided and even imperious, and the count did not venture to disobey; but as he left he cast upon Ada a look which caught the other's eye, and from the expression that came into her face I knew,—knew even then, that he would never more hold a place in her heart.

We carried Ada home, and through the long illness which followed, Dora was her constant nurse and companion. To this dear friend was confided with many tears the secret of her heart. The count had won her love, and had promised to ask my consent to their union. Unsuspecting and confiding, she knew nothing of his attentions to Dora, and it was by his wish that she had never mentioned his name to me. I heard afterward, that he and Dora met but once after the accident, and that he endeavored to defend his perfidy on the plea that he was only amusing himself with Ada, and never had seriously thought of making her his wife. "So much the worse for you, count," said the true-hearted woman. "I shall never be your wife, and never want to see your face again."

We are married now, Dora and I. From loving Ada she learned in time to love me, and the sweet and gentle invalid, who never again will walk until she steps upon the heavenly shore, is happy in our love. No murmur ever escapes her lips. Her sweet face is never clouded. Since Dora learned her sad story, the count's name has never passed my sister's lips, nor has she ever in any way alluded to him. But Dora found her one day weeping silently over a picture which she put away without its being seen.

I have not told how the accident happened. The master machinist, himself in love with Dora, had cut several strands of the cords by which the car was secured. He openly avowed his crime, and only regretted that Dora had not been killed. "She rejected me with scorn," he said on his trial. "I was resolved she should never give her hand to another." He was manifestly a maniac. I can never forgive myself for not watching him more closely after that encounter under the stage.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 28, 1873.

Benjamin.

The monotony of dog-days, accidents and fires is only relieved by the remarkable contest in Massachusetts, in which Gen. Benjamin F. Butler marshals his forces for a second attempt on the governorship, and the "eminent respectables" of the party unite in opposition to his claims. The unequal contest of two years ago, when the combined forces of the anti-Butlerites were barely able to wrench victory from his grasp, left Benjamin with his spurs trimmed a little and probably with a better appreciation of the power and capabilities of his enemies. Experience is a good teacher, and his experience of 1871 seemed to have taught him a lesson which he could improve to his advantage in 1873. Confessedly the ablest politician in Massachusetts, against whom no one man could successfully cope, Gen. Butler's accession to the gubernatorial chair was only a question of time. Coalitions are successful only as exceptions, and a repetition of 1871 was not down in the political prophecies of 1873. Opposition but added strength to Gen. Butler's desire to be Governor; his former enemies cooled when they looked with dread on the coming contest; and some who had previously been on the fence came to his relief. Just then, however, Benjamin made a mistake which, were he any one but Benjamin F. Butler, might have been the mistake of his life-time. He advocated and secured the passage of the infamous salary-grab and aroused a sentiment in opposition to his nomination for Governor which again encouraged his opponents.

Had Gen. Butler acted more wisely and with more policy, the mistake would not have been made and his course to the goal of his ambition might have been comparatively unobstructed. Two years ago, he boldly defied the controlling politicians of Massachusetts and the newspapers, and precipitated an attack on both, putting them on the defensive. The brief campaign was noted for its bitterness and personality. This year, Gen. Butler opened the campaign with a shrewd but unsatisfactory defence of the salary grab. His opponents, who control the State committee and designated the time of holding the State convention, forgot to be satisfied with a quiet expose of the fallacies of the defence, and initiated a campaign of vituperation and mis-statement which in damaging their own cause correspondingly aided the man of all others they wished to crush. Messrs. Hoar, Fay, Robinson and the Hamilton Hall managers opened on the candidate in the same style that he had adopted in 1871. The active wire-pullers of the party, understanding that sooner or later a man of Gen. Butler's indomitable energy and perseverance would achieve his ends, fell into the ranks in support of him, while the newspapers to whom he had especially paid his respects in 1871, began to show their great fears that he would win this time, by iterating and reiterating day after day that his doom was sealed. In these days of peace and rest, there is no more ludicrous exhibition than that shown by the Massachusetts press, who are constantly endeavoring to reassure each other that there is no danger of defeat. So sure are the "eminent respectables" that Gen. Butler cannot be nominated for Governor that they secured the postponement of the call of the convention, for the sole purpose of preventing his friends from immediately choosing delegates in the Butler towns, and so confident are they that they are in a large majority, they whine dismally because in the cities of Boston and Lynn, and in other places, caucuses are called for this week!

Gen. Butler's impudence of two years ago is more than rivalled by that of his opponents now. Following the attacks and sneers of the coalition formed to break him, Benjamin announced his determination to again take the stump, and on the 26th he spoke at Worcester. Judging by his opening address he intends to use the scalping knife freely. During his speech he declared that it was his belief that he was cheated out of the nomination two years ago. "Now Mr. Hoar and his brother go down to Boston in order to set up a State guardianship over the republican party. Oh, they forget about last year, when the republican party was in its death struggle, when there were so many elements opposing it, and Butler was patted on the back and told to go there, and make a speech to the people here, and sent to Michigan, sent to Pennsylvania, to Maine and Indiana, to sustain the republican party. I went, and the result you have heard. Why did not Mr. Hoar then go round and say, 'Mr. Butler has no business to sustain the republican party; indeed, I will go and do it all myself.' But no. I simply went on about my business."

Congressman Hoar divided his back-pay among five towns of his district. Gen. Butler said Mr. Hoar "has a right to do what he pleases with his money. Some like glory and he bought it with his share. I bought butcher's meat with mine, and that is why I wanted it. For that he comes up and makes an attack on on me personally, calling me a number of hard names and accusing me of being a failure and very quarrelsome, because having made an attack upon me I chose to answer him. I want Mr. Hoar to bear witness that he never found me attacking any man personally until I was attacked, and I challenge him to say that after I was attacked I ever gave up the contest until they said they were sorry."

Referring to other salary-grabs, Gen. Butler said:—

"Although I believe that the salary is rightfully mine as much as the coat on my back, yet if my colleagues, past and present, Mr. Hoar, Mr. Alley, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Dawes, Mr. Sumner, Mr. Boutwell, Mr. Washburn, will all pay back all the back salary they have got, I will pay all mine back. [Laughter and applause.] Nay my friends, I do not understand why all these gentlemen, in 1866, could take back pay, keep their perquisites and mileage and think themselves fit for heaven, while they brand me as one fit for the other place, because I took mine without any mileage, without any perquisites, in '73. Let me state some truths. There was on every leading committee in the House a newspaper correspondent, sometimes the editor himself, as clerk. When we passed this salary bill we raised all their pay back to the first day of the Congress as ours was raised, and every rascal of them took it and then went home and wrote against the back salary grab [laughter and applause], and especially the correspondent of the Springfield Republican, and especially the correspondent of the Boston Journal. I know whereof I affirm, and if any of them had ever paid back any portion of it or even given it to schools, he would have made himself visible to the naked eye.

Well, here is another thing. [Laughter.] You will remember that we had as clerk, Mr. William S. Robinson, the "Warrington" of the Springfield Republican. They have employed him to give a history of the salary grab. As he is a special friend of mine I have the advance copy. It is not out yet, but will be published soon. Here it is; eighty pages! Who pays for that, I wonder? Eighty pages of the history of the salary grab! No man more competent; for a more persistent salary grabber I never have known. I have here abstracts from the laws of Massachusetts. William Robinson was first clerk of the House in 1862, and his salary was $2000 a year. In 1864 a resolution was passed to raise his pay 20 per cent. backwards to the beginning of the session. In 1865 "20 per cent. the current year in addition to that now allowed, back to the beginning of this session." In 1865 W. A. Crafts was appointed assistant clerk. In '66, chapter 102, William Graves had his salary raised to $650. In '67, chapter 92, Crafts got another hoist of $50. In '67 the clerk of the House of Representatives was receiving an annual salary of $2200. That is the first. In the same chapter it says, "The clerk of the House of Representatives shall receive an annual salary of $2500." He got two raises that time. Let us go farther. In '69 the assistant clerk got a raise to $900. In '72 he got another raise. In 1873 we turned him out, or he would have gone on.

Now, my friends, I am spending too much time on this. But this is all I have got except that I am a failure in what I tried to do for my country. I agree that I am a failure but I can paint a failure better than that. Suppose I had been an attorney-general appointed by a man who did not know enough of me to call my name; and I had gone into the service and spent a few months, in which I quarrelled with every senator so that when I got nominated as judge I was rejected by the Senate of the United States, being the first and only man, except an insane man, that ever was rejected by the Senate of the United States; I could say that I was a failure, it I had done that; and the next time Mr. Hoar desires to paint the portrait of a failure he had better paint that family portrait. He admits that I governed New Orleans well with an army at my back. I did have a good one. I suppose if he had gone he could have done it alone. Why did he not go?"

Referring to the prohibitory law, Gen. Butler said that Governor Washburn in his inaugural "wished that his arm was long enough and strong enough to enforce the law. The legislature gave him $40,000 for policemen, and he could have had all he wanted, for the people wanted this law enforced—fairly, justly, impartially—so that they could be certain whether it was a law or only a mockery of a law. [Applause.] But it never was enforced, except in the Butler ward of Boston in the beginning of the campaign. No, my friends, the law is made sport of. You will see before you are many days older that they do not intend to enforce it. It is as I said two years ago, to tax the poor woman with her jug and let the man that sells by the hogshead go. [Applause.] If I have the power I shall enforce that law everywhere as the sun shines and the dews fall upon the great and small alike, so that the people of the Commonwealth shall ascertain just what sort of a law it is. And it will do good and if the people of the Commonwealth believe it when they see it enforced, they will sustain it and take it out of politics as it ought to be. But if they do not believe it, they will speak and we will get another that will carry on the cause of temperance which all men desire."

In the canvass as conducted thus far, it is evident that Gen. Butler has the advantage of his opponents in consistency.

The Washington Chronicle publishes a communication from Judge Advocate General Holt denying the assertion that he wilfully withheld the recommendation to mercy for Mrs. Surratt offered by the military commission which tried her and the other conspirators. Judge Holt contends that President Johnson received the whole of the records, and that his refusal to act on the recommendation of the court and to see the daughters of Mrs. Surratt, when she applied at the White House for an audience, was simply his own act, uncontrolled and unprejudiced by others.

A big stone fell off a pile into a slip up the river the other day, at Detroit, and a person who had seen an old man lurking around thought the splash occasioned by an attempted suicide. Poles and drags were brought out, but after an hour's search the stone was discovered at the bottom and the old man was found asleep behind a woodpile.

Fifty years ago a young married man, only twenty years of age, got a divorce in Shaftesbury, Vt., from his wife, who was only seventeen years old, went to Ohio, remarried, earned a competency, lost his second wife, married a third, lost her; and then, after half a century's absence, returned to the place of his birth, where he found his first and divorced wife still living single, and falling in love with her again, he proposed and was accepted, and they were recently re-married, some of their wedding guests being of the number that attended their first wedding in the year 1823.

S. B.

[Boston Advertiser.]

"Inquirer" wants to know why "N. B." should signify "take notice." Well, it's a long story, but we will try to explain it briefly. "N. B." is but an unauthorized contraction of "end bee," or the end of a bee whence the stings proceeds. Now, in good old times when they lived on locusts and wild honey, they had to look out sharp for the bees lest they should be stung by what has since been called their "business end." Thus it happened that the people began to warn each other of the end of the bees, which might light unknown, and the cry of "end bee" soon became a signal for all to take notice. Since that time the cry has been utilized to call attention to any matter requiring immediate notice. But although it has been thus perverted from its original design, and the two words of the cry are now indicated by two letters only, it has become so useful that no one wishes to see it drop from the language. P. S.—N. B. also stands for "New Bedford."

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

AN ALMANAC FOR 1767.—An Almanac is deemed almost indispensable in about every family. Without it the days of the month might not be known, nor indeed the months themselves. It is also wished to know the time of the moon's changes, when eclipses will occur, and especially what the weather is to be as predicted in the calendar pages. The weather prophecies are regarded as very valuable, although in a majority of cases they prove incorrect. Some have declared they want Almanacs that tell what the weather is likely to be, even if they do not get it right.

Few however preserve Almanacs; after the year is out they go with paper rags, or are destroyed. It ought not to be so. A file of them, running through 50 or 100 years and more, would be very valuable. The collection would be almost a library, containing a history of astronomical events and important miscellaneous matter, with valuable instruction. I have had the privilege of examining an Almanac for 1767, 106 years ago. Its title was "An Astronomical Diary." It was printed in Portsmouth, and calculated for the latitude and longitude of the place. The name of the author is not given, but it is probable it was Dr. Nathaniel Law, of Berwick, Me. It is known that Dr. Law was an astronomer; that in 1774, but seven years later, he proposed an Almanac, which was printed in Boston; and that he was a teacher of astronomy, and Benjamin Frye, one of his pupils, prepared and published an Almanac for 1796.

But the Almanac for 1767, how long ago in the history of our country! Two-fifths of the time since the first settlements commenced have passed. It was before the Revolutionary war. The first census of New Hampshire was taken that year and the number of inhabitants was 52,000, Portsmouth was a place of much business, had distinguished men and had a population of 4,466. John Wentworth, the last royal Governor, commenced this year. This Almanac had but little miscellaneous matter. How to find the main roads of travel was an important matter then, and the towns through which they passed, with the names of the tavern keepers in them where man and beast could have entertainment, are carefully put down. I give a few leading from Portsmouth, preserving the spelling of the inn-keepers. West from Portsmouth, Greenland, Folsom D. Clark; Stratham, Chase; Exeter, Folsom & Gilman; Kingston, Huntoons; Hawk, Tole. Road to Boston, Greenland, Folsom & Clark; North Hill, Lowet, Hampton, Louet; Hampton Falls, Sanborn & Davidson.

It is singular that the spelling of the two names in North Hill, (then and now North Hampton,) do not agree. In both cases it should have been Leavitt.

—One of those forty-foot snakes has been discovered out in Illinois, between Washington Township and Bloomington. It is a curious fact that the Washington people are obliged to go to Bloomington for their whiskey, and that the serpent is invariably seen on the return trips. To the philosophic mind there is, in this coincidence, food for speculation.

—The furious and frenzied rivalry of the St. Louis and Chicago census-takers is leaving but little population for the rest of the United States. It reminds one of the Kentucky farmers, each one of whom owns three hundred and sixty acres, regardless of the limited capacity of the United States.

—A tame mosquito, at the freight depot in Bridgeport is alleged by the Winsted Herald to be so big, that a large Newfoundland dog ran under him the other day after a wharf rat and never touched the mosquito at all.

—A farmer in Washington county, Ky., has found a practical use for a snake. For two years he has had one shut up in his corn-crib, and during all that time not a live mouse has been seen there.

Business Notices.

For loss of appetite, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in their various forms, FERRO-PHOSPHORATE ELIXIR OF CALISAYA made by CARSWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic. As a stimulant tonic for patients recovering from fever or other sickness, it has no equal. If taken during the season it prevents fever and ague and other intermittent fevers. ta28

Adopt the Preventive Policy.

Severe spells of billiousness, indigestion, chills and fever, diarrhœa, nervous headache and physical exhaustion are quite usual at this season. These are visitations which everybody is anxious to avoid, and as a course of Hostetter's Bitters will unquestionably fortify the system against them, the most valuable medical advice which can be offered at this time to persons subject to such complaints, or at all sensitive to atmospheric changes, is to commence taking this powerful vegetable alterative and invigorant without delay. Forty-eight hours will not have elapsed after the first dose before a marked change will have manifested itself in the condition of the system. The ultimate result will be a habit of body so regular, a genial condition so vigorous, that however unhealthy the season may chance to be, the system thus refreshed and reinforced will be in the best possible trim to encounter it.

Unlike other Cathartics, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets do not, after their operation, have a secondary tendency to render the bowels more costive. This is an important improvement, as all who have ever taken many pills or other cathartics for the purpose of overcoming constipation, know to their sorrow that the secondary effect of all such medicines has been to "render a bad matter worse." These Pellets produce such a secondary tonic effect upon the bowels as to bring about a permanent healthy action. Hence their great value, taken in small doses daily for any length of time, in habitual constipation and in Piles, attended and produced, as they generally are, by torpor of the liver and costiveness. Sold by Druggists at 25 cents a vial. 693

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non compliance with Section 1:

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

Per order

PROPOSALS

FOR

Building Sloop-of-War at Kittery Navy Yard.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Bureau of Construction and Repair,
July 26, 1873.

PROPOSALS will be received at this Bureau until 12 o'clock, M., on the FIRST DAY OF SEPTEMBER next, from builders or mechanics qualified to do the work, for the building of a sloop-of-war, ribbonding, planking from keel to rail, ceiling, including peelsons, clamps, spirketing and beams, to rail, putting in decks, including all bitts, etc., putting on mast and bulmarck rails, channels and chains, building store-room, magazines and lockers, other work inside and out, caulking and scraping, building stationary engines and setting head and painting complete, of a Sloop-of-War of about 640 tons. The materials, tools and facilities for doing the work will be furnished by the government.

The Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair will be at Kittery Navy Yard on WEDNESDAY, the 20th of August next, and in connection with the Naval Constructor of that yard will meet persons desiring to make proposals for the work above mentioned, and will give all necessary explanations concerning the work to be done, and in regard to the character of the materials, tools and facilities to be furnished by the Government.

Plans and specifications may be seen and examined on applying to the Commandant of the Kittery Navy Yard, after August 1st, 1873.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; restores the growth, and always a surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thin hair, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickened; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and speedy. It cures hair-druff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and healthy—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its genteel and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

A blind man was robbed at Hedding camp meeting on Wednesday and the police arrested a bootblack on suspicion of being the thief.

Miss A. N. Johnson wishes to express her regret that, owing to protracted indisposition, she is obliged to relinquish her plan of opening a school in Portsmouth.

There will be a dramatic and musical entertainment, followed by a social "hop," at the Oceanic Hotel, Star island, this evening. The exercises will commence at eight o'clock.

The citizens at the west end only learn of fire alarms by the steam whistles at the Eastern Railroad engine house and at the breweries, and when these hoarse monsters agitate the air, the individuals who continue reposing must be as unconscious as those who "sleep the sleep of death."

Horace B. Kent, son of J. Horace Kent, Esq., and Geo. W. Bartlett, son of James P. Bartlett, Esq., passed a successful examination for admission to Dartmouth College, Wednesday, and will enter the scientific department, Chandler Institute. The term commences to-day.

Dr. Page opines that the fire in his office was caused by a kerosene lamp which he left burning. The building was damaged to the extent of $500, the Odd Fellows suffering a similar loss. Mr. Henderson had but $4000 insurance on his stock, which was damaged to that extent.

Mr. Harrington, father of one of the boys who broke into Laighton's store, arrived here from East Boston, Wednesday, in search of the young rascal. The boys escaped from the House of Correction at Brentwood on Tuesday. Mr. Harrington has been tracking them from the west, and arrived one day too late to find his son.

The report of a fracas at the Bowdoin House, York beach, on Sunday, and the statement that Capt. George Bowden, the proprietor, had his ribs broken, are untrue. Capt. Bowden says there is no reason for a row, as he keeps a quiet boarding-house and sells no liquor. Our informant, a York man, was evidently mistaken in the locality.

We rise to correct you, Mr. Times, just for fun. We intended no "sneer" when we wrote that "a happy family now inhabits the custom-house." The "sneer" was in your mind only. You are always finding crab-apples under cherry trees; which shows your natural inclination. We shall be obliged to class you among "the weather-wise chaps, who guess at what they know nothing about," if you do not display more common sense. The custom house family were not happy a few months ago, you remember. Now everything is tranquil. See?

We hear that responsible parties have secured rooms here for the immediate establishment of a Conservatory of Music similar to those at Salem and Boston. Among the branches taught will be the formation and cultivation of the voices; singing in the English, German and Italian languages; harmony; counterpoint; imitation; canon; fugue; composition; the study of the German and Italian languages; the piano-forte, organ, brass and stringed instruments. It is the intention to make the Conservatory as complete in its details as that at Boston. We understand that Prof. E. S. Metcalf, director of the Salem Conservatory, will have charge of the vocal department. Circulars will be issued in a few days. We hope our citizens will aid in establishing and sustaining this new and desirable institution.

—A man from Detroit had about as lively a time, the other day, as can well be imagined. Striking across lots to visit a neighbor, he had reached the middle of the field when he remembered that it contained a specially uncivil bull, and received tangible proof thereof in the shape of the bull himself charging toward him at a terrible rate. No tree was in reach; the fence was rods away. So in default of a better refuge the farmer crept into a hollow log that lay in his path. The bull saw the man, saw the log, and to it transferred his attentions. Says the local chronicler, "The log was large, but old and tender, and every time the bull hauled back and jumped for it, he covered himself with glory and clouds of bark and wood. Sometimes he whirled one end, and then he gave the centre a heave, and then he knocked a foot off the other end." When the farmer was nearly convinced of the approaching end of his existence, the neighbors reached the scene and he was saved.

—Rev. Robert Collyer writes to the Chicago papers to defend the right of ministers to have self-respect and pay their way "one hundred cents on the dollar like sinners," and wants the railroads to stand by their order refusing half-fare passes to the clergy. He thinks ministers, if they are worth it, should be paid enough so that they can pay full prices for what they have; and if they are not, worth it, they should take their chances with other cheap laborers. Mr. Collyer seems to think a preacher as good as a "sinner" any day.

—The people of several Western cities who have been driven half crazy by the railroad whistles, have sued the companies, which now find that they must pay too dear for their whistles.

—A girl named Lucinda Smith, at a ball in Maysville, Ky., called a justice into the room and sighted a revolver at Charles Brown. They were married then and there.

—A gushing poet in Arkansas, being rudely advised by an editor to "dry up," replied: "I can't; I'm an involuntary warbler in the hands of destiny."

—What is the difference between a tube and a foolish Dutchman? One is a hollow cylinder and the other is a silly Hollander.

England's Rule in India.

The London Times of Aug. 12 says: "The letter from Calcutta which we publish this morning contains an explanation of a strange occurrence previously reported in a somewhat obscure form by successive telegrams. Pubna, a district of Central Bengal, has recently been the scene of what was called an agrarian insurrection, and it is a fact that the Ryots, or cultivators of the soil, assembled tumultuously in defense of rights which they believed to be in danger. But those who imagined—as, perhaps some did—that this was an outbreak of an oppressed peasantry against the tyrannical rule of a grasping and extravagant Government may learn from the correspondence how widely the superstition differs from the truth. The demonstration of the husbandmen was directed against their immediate landlords, and they appealed to the British authorities—not in vain—for the protection of their interests. The Zemindars had threatened to raise their rents, upon which the peasants invoked the aid of the Government, and even gave credit to a rumor that in future their dues would be paid directly to the Queen. An opportune illustration of the nature of our rule in India will be discovered in the proclamation addressed to the insurgents by the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal. Sir George Campbell, while warning them against violent or illegal acts, assures them, nevertheless, that they shall be defended against extortion, and that no advantage shall be taken of their position. The State, in fact, does interfere up to a certain point for the protection of the poor, and the quarrel between the land-owners and laborers of Pubna will probably be settled more or less by official direction."

—It has been found out why persons cannot sleep. It is because "there is an accumulation, mainly of carbonic acid, that accumulation being favored and controlled by reflex action of the nervous system, which thus protects the organism from excessive oxidation, and allows the organism to manifest its normal functional activity throughout a succeeding rhythmic period." We should not have thought a little thing like that would keep one awake. Persons who can't sleep, however, should put some of the above things into their organism before retiring.

—Kate Grant, an old Indian squaw, living at Grant, Wisconsin, has killed eight bears this summer. Kate is still unmarried. Many a bear has attempted to hug her, but she never permitted such familiarities. Like a lemon that is spoiled, or a pretty girl that becomes an ancient spinster, she was made to be squeezed and wasn't.

—A little four-year-old child in Portland told his father he was a fool. On being reprimanded by his mother, and required to say he was sorry, he toddled up to the insulted parent and exclaimed: "Papa, I'se sorry you's a fool."

—A Detroit wife wants to know if a husband has any business to mash his hot potatoes by putting them in her hand and then squeezing her fingers.

—"What's the use of trying to be honest?" asked a young man the other day of a friend. "Oh! you ought to try it once, to see," was the reply.

—A bashful young man of San Francisco made an elaborate bow on taking his leave after an evening call, recently, and backed into a china closet, mistaking it for the proper exit! It chanced that the family watch-dog had secretly crept in there for a doze, and he received the young man with all the ardency of his nature. The struggle was brief but decisive, and the young man will not call there again till that dog has been superseded.

—A Danbury young man who left on a far Western expedition, was bidding his friends good bye at the depot, when a young girl cried out, "Bring me the scalp of a Modoc, won't you?" The young man feeling a little hurt at her indifference to his departure and the dangers he was about to encounter, sadly replied, "No, Emma, you should not look for more hair until you have paid for that you now wear." The remark appeared to subdue her.

—"If poor George had not blowed into the muzzle of his gun," sighed a rural widow, at the funeral of her late husband, recently, "he might have got plenty of squirrels. It was such a good day for them."

GRANDEST SCHEME EVER KNOWN.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE

PUBLIC LIBRARY OF KENTUCKY

12,000 CASH GIFTS $1,500,000

Every Fifth Ticket Draws a Gift

$250,000 for $50.

The Fourth Grand Gift Concert authorized by special act of the Legislature for the benefit of the Public Library of Kentucky, will take place in Public Library Hall, at Louisville, Ky.,

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3d, 1873.

Only sixty thousand tickets will be sold and one-half of these are intended for the European market, thus leaving only 30,000 for sale in the United States, where 100,000 were disposed of for the Third Concert. The tickets are divided into ten coupons, or parts, and have on their back the Scheme with an explanation of the mode of drawing.

At the Concert, which will be the grandest musical display ever witnessed in this country, the unprecedented sum of divided into 12,050 cash gifts, will be distributed by lot among the ticket-holders. The number of the tickets to be drawn from one wheel by blind children and the gifts from another.

LIST OF GIFTS:

ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		$250,000
ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		100,000
ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		50,000
ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		25,000
ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		17,000
10 CASH GIFTS	$10,000 each	100,000
20 CASH GIFTS	5,000 each	150,000
30 CASH GIFTS	1,000 each	30,000
80 CASH GIFTS	500 each	40,000
100 CASH GIFTS	400 each	40,000
150 CASH GIFTS	300 each	45,000
250 CASH GIFTS	200 each	50,000
325 CASH GIFTS	100 each	32,500
11,000 CASH GIFTS	50 each	550,000
TOTAL, 12,000 GIFTS, ALL CASH, amounting to		$1,500,000

The distribution will be positive, whether all the tickets are sold or not, and the 12,050 gifts all paid in proportion to the tickets sold—all unsold tickets being destroyed, as at the First and Second Concerts, and not represented in the drawing.

PRICE OF TICKETS:

Whole tickets, $50; Halves, $25; Tenths, or each Coupon, $5; Eleven Whole Tickets for $500; 22 Tickets for $1,000; 113 Whole Tickets for $5,000; 227 Whole Tickets for $10,000. No discount on less than $250 worth of Tickets at a time.

The unparalleled success of the Third Gift Concert, as well as the satisfaction given by the First and Second, makes it only necessary to announce the Fourth to insure the prompt sale of every Ticket. The Fourth Gift Concert will be conducted in all its details like the Third, and full particulars may be learned from circulars, which will be sent free from this office to all who apply for them.

Tickets now ready for sale, and all orders accompanied by the money promptly filled. Liberal terms given to those who buy to sell again.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined, as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form it is energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.
COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL, FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL, SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL, SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL, NORTH FRANKLIN COAL, LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.
We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

The Great South American Blood Purifier.
JURUBEBA
IS THE MOST POWERFUL CLEANSER, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.
IT IS SPECIALLY ADAPTED to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, &c., &c.
WHEN WEARY AND LANGUID from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, its action upon the LIVER as a TONIC to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.
IN THE HEAT OF SUMMER, frequently the LIVER and SPLEEN do not properly perform their functions, the Excretive and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and indigestion and a predisposition to bilious derangement.
Dr. WELLS'
EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA
is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties. It will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthen the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED and ENFEEBLED Organs.
IT SHOULD BE FREELY TAKEN, as Jurubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

Daily Chronicle.

Interesting Social Experiment in South Carolina.

The Waterboro (S. C.) News prints the following account of a social organization among the blacks of that state, the result of which, the Charleston News thinks, will be productive of much good:

"In Colleton County the colored people own, and are successfully conducting some of the largest plantations. This is done under a sort of communism. A number of them, in some cases as many as fifty, form themselves into a society, elect their officers, and adopt by-laws. They have regular meetings, at which the officers report, and a specified amount is paid into the treasury by each member. When sufficient is accumulated in the treasury, a suitable plantation is selected and the purchase made; usually the payments are in one, two, or three years, a good portion being paid at the time of the purchase. The land is equally distributed by the officers elected for that purpose among the members of the society, or so much as they may wish to cultivate.

Each is free to work as suits him, and each can dispose of his crop as he deems proper. The only thing required is honesty and a prompt payment of all dues, which are usually very light. Any one willfully failing to meet his dues, or convicted of dishonesty, has all amounts previously paid by him for the purchase of the place refunded, and is required to move off the plantation, all his rights and claims having been forfeited. If, however, any one desires to leave the society, he is paid all amounts paid by him towards the purchase, and for all permanent improvements erected by him. No new member is admitted except by the consent of the whole society.

All sick are cared for by the society if unable to care for themselves, officers being elected to look after some cases and report their wants to the society at its weekly meetings, or at special meetings, if the exigency of the case requires it. All disputes arising between members are brought before the society, certain of the officers being designated to hear and endeavor to amicably arrange all dissensions, and it is very seldom, if ever, they fail. Petty litigation, that is the great bane of the colored people in many sections, is in this way avoided.

These societies are principally formed from people who work for hire, 50 cents per day being the sum generally paid; the plantation is usually bought as soon as sufficient funds are in the treasury to make the first payment; but few, if any, own any animals in that time, their small resources being expended in the purchase money and erection of houses. Still they have, in all cases where an exorbitant price was not paid for the land, proved successful, failures for a time occasionally arising where incompetent and unfaithful officers have been selected; but with their usual shrewdness these incompetent officers were soon detected, and others more capable were elected in their places. Upon those that have been in operation three or four years the land has been paid for, and the members have acquired considerable personal property, and are generally prosperous. A sort of rivalry seems to spring up between them, which is productive of economy and thrift.

These societies are located in the low country east of the Savannah and the Charleston Railroad. We do not presume to say that only the colored people who have formed themselves into these societies show thrift and the accumulation of property, for a number who, six or seven years ago, were not worth a dollar now carry on successfully large rice and cotton plantations and are becoming heavy tax-payers. But in the particular section in which these societies are formed, more property exists among their members than among those who are now fighting the battle of life and death on their own account, while from the formation of these societies they are enabled to purchase more valuable property and secure greater privileges than they could if each laid his money out in a separate purchase, in which case ten or twenty acres of poor land would be all he would be able to buy, as no planter would consent to cut off and sell small tracts of the best land and retain himself the poorest portion. This is undoubtedly one of the reasons of their success, as on nearly all the plantations in this section a large proportion of the land is almost valueless. By securing the whole plantation they obtain sufficient good land for their purposes, while he who purchases for himself generally gets such land that it is impossible to make more than a poor subsistence from."

—A new toy has just been introduced and will surely become very popular. It is a wax doll in a crib, the doll being dressed in night clothes and in a dainty lace cap. By some mechanism the doll baby at certain intervals, after being wound up, lifts itself up in the crib, puts out its arms, and distinctly calls "mamma." The inventor thinks "No family should be without one."

—A young man applied for a situation on a Western paper, stating that he had a great many years' experience in journalism. As he had good clothes and didn't look hungry enough to warrant his assertion, he received no encouragement; and it has since appeared that he had only "kept a journal ever since he was eleven years old."

—The hardest agriculture work on a farm —Raising a mortgage.

A very sad suicide was that of Dr. Samuel P. Van Holsen at Omaha, a few days ago. He formerly lived in Albany, where he was candidate for member of the Legislature, some years ago, and was so overcome by his defeat that he took to drink. Two years ago, in a fit of delirium tremens, he dashed out the brains of his wife with a skillet, for which he was detained in an insane asylum four months, and now he ends his blighted life by suicide.

A Montgomery, Ala., paper says this has been the coolest and most pleasant summer ever known in Alabama. The thermometer since the 1st of June has stood at an average not higher than 88°, and not a dozen times above that figure. The nights are refreshing, and there has been no sitting up until one and two o'clock in the morning, waiting for a cool time to retire. The dust which usually blinds every one from July to October has not been in the least troublesome. Taken altogether, those who remained at home this season have been rather better off than those who sought the comforts of the watering-places.

A little Biddeford girl, who saw a train coming in the dark, exclaimed, "Oh, father! The cars are coming and bringing the moon with them."

Judge J. W. Marston of Newburyport died on Thursday.

A dispatch from Waco, Texas, says a stage driver brings the news that a large body of Indians surprised and captured Fort Still in the Indian Territory, massacreing the women and children and nearly half of the 4th United States cavalry.

William Mathias, a young man aged 22, died, as was supposed at three o'clock on Sunday evening last, of brain fever at Westminster, Maryland. The body was placed on ice and remained there forty-eight hours. Wednesday the family assembled for the purpose of performing the funeral services, when it was noticed that the skin had assumed a natural appearance, and on examination it was found that life was not extinct. Physicians were called in, and at last accounts Mathias was doing well.

John Hester, while playing with other boys on a raft near the gas house on the river on Monday evening at Great Falls, fell into the water and was drowned. The body was recovered.

Hugh Cameron of Wells River, Vermont, fell from the steps of his son's house in Nashua on Monday, causing his death. His age was about 60 years.

State News.

Hon. John P. Hale is failing fast and cannot survive long. His voice and eyesight are gone.

Probably the oldest silver coin in the United States is in the posession of Mr. E. S. Knight of Nashua. It was found by a missionery in Asia Minor, and was coined during the reign of King Alexander the Great, who died 323 years before Christ. It contains the likeness of the king, with two Greek words signifying, "The King, his money."

Nashua has appropriated all its State bonds ($65,000) for the purpose of building a high school-house and a wooden building at the Harbor. It has also repealed a $12,000 appropriation for a soldiers' monument.

The following are the premiums which have been offered by the officers of the New Hampshire Agricultural Society at Manchester, for the finest children which are to be exhibited on the second day of the State fair. For the finest baby under six months old, a fine gold necklace; for the finest baby between the ages of twelve and twenty months old, a gold cup; for the most beautiful twins, a pair of gold mugs; for the child with the reddest hair, regardless of temper, a ten dollar gold piece. The following persons will act as judges: Governor Straw, ex-Governors Weston, Stearns, Harriman and Smyth, Judges Daniel Clark and J. E. Sargent, Drs. G. A. Crosby and E. Custer of Manchester, J. C. Eastman of Hampstead, F. B. Ayer of Nashua, and J. W. Barney of Concord, and their wives.

The Indian--A Texan's Views.

Messrs. Editors: In the Boston Journal of the 27th inst. appeared an article, entitled "Indian Affairs." It is refreshing to see that at times there are writers among us who understand the true position of Indian affairs, even at this late day. Yet the armed attack made on the Yellowstone expedition by a party of eight hundred Indians is merely a repetition of what has been occurring within the borders of this great and powerful republic for the past twenty years or more. Well may the writer remark in regard to Captain Jack and his party: "These men are murderers and will meet the fate of murderers."

Frontier-men everywhere will rejoice that the President of the United States, kind-hearted though he may be, has refused to listen to the protestations of mistaken humanitarians in declining to commute the sentence of the murderers of General Canby. This officer was much beloved both at the North and the South. A lady of my acquaintance, residing in the far southwest, remarked: "My brother George thought everything of Gen. Canby; for when wounded and a prisoner, in New Mexico, the General and Mrs. C. attended to him and took care of him as if he had been their own child, rebel though he was."

But many men, as good, if not so prominent as Gen. Canby, are set upon and horribly butchered upon the frontiers of our common country whenever the full moon comes. All along the vast line of the frontier of the United States arises the wail of the widow, lamenting the loss of one dear as life itself, and of her children, carried perhaps into a captivity worse than death. And occasionally the husband has to mourn the loss of her who is dear to his heart, murdered and violated by brutal savages.

"They are not devils; they are ghouls."

I append the article from the Journal to which I have referred above. If your space will allow, please publish it. It can not well be improved upon:

"If anything were needed to make the result of the Modoc trials perfectly satisfactory to the people, it would be found in the armed attack made on the Yellowstone expedition by a party of eight hundred Indians. The present time, with its numerous indications of unrest among the Indian tribes, and with its multiplied reports of Indian aggressions, is not well adapted to the bestowal of clemency upon Capt. Jack and those concerned with him in the murder of Gen. Canby. These men are murderers, and will meet the fate of murderers. The stoical Indian has little dread of death, but hanging is an ignominy from which he shrinks. The execution of these Modocs will be a warning to the ill-disposed among other Indian tribes. Further, there ought to be an immediate and searching investigation into the management of the agency from which the Indians, attacking the Yellowstone party, obtained their arms. It appears they were all well armed and some of them were exceedingly well dressed. It does not seem either wise, just or economical to put weapons into the hands of Indians only to be turned against our own troops. There should be greater vigilance exercised in regard to the distribution of such stores."

A letter from Wm. Adams to the writer, mailed at Dripping Springs, Hays county, Texas, on the 17th inst., contains the following remarks: "I have no news to communicate, only our general good health. Our crops of corn are fair. Cotton fine indeed. Our range is as fine as we could ask. The Indians are more troublesome on our frontier than for several years. Our frontiermen are blaming our legislature for giving no protection against the savages at its last session. Our taxes are $1.65 per $100, and $2.50 per poll. More dissatisfaction than you have ever seen in Texas in your time. I would not be surprised if Davis were our Governor again."

The writer of the above letter is a well-known Republican, to which persuasion your correspondent does not belong; yet he is always ready, in all fairness, to give credit to any administration, be it of whatever political faith it may, for whatever good it may do; as witness, for one good thing, the late raid of Gen. McKenzie, into Mexico, with such good effect. It is to be hoped that these measures will be followed up with equal success everywhere. It is a historical fact that our government once made war upon the Barbary powers for atrocities far less in their cruelty than what are being continually perpetrated within our own borders by a still more savage race.

Let us hope that the government of the United States will extend its strong arm in protection of all its people, and that the red man may be obliged to conduct himself properly, as well as the white or black man.

VIATOR.

Losses To Peach Growers.

The Baltimore Gazette says that the late disaster to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, and a break on the Delaware Railroad, has had the effect to cast a gloom over the peach-growers of that section. On Saturday beside the steamboats regularly engaged in the trade, several schooners arrived with cargoes, the whole aggregating many thousand boxes. The packers could not buy because the fruit would not keep over Sunday, and the entire dependence of the afternoon was the family demand. Peaches of the finest quality sold down to twenty-five cents per box, while the more inferior kinds brought only ten to fifteen cents per box, and many were given away upon the promise to return the boxes. Large quantities decayed on the wharves, and the Arabs huckstered them through the streets at ten cents per peck. A gentleman from Dorchester, which has been one of the heaviest peach growing counties of the State, on Saturday stated that his county alone will lose many thousands of dollars, and but few will come out even at the end of the season.

Circumventing a Swindler.

The other day a young man called at the Union Pacific general ticket office in Omaha, and requested a strictly private and confidential interview with the gentleman in charge. This being accorded to him, he mysteriously folded back the lappel of his vest and showed a small metallic shield with the word "Detective" on it in raised letters. Then he gravely pointed to a pair of handcuffs which he carried in his inside pocket. He explained that he was in the employ of the Government Secret Service and had started for a Western city on the line of the road. He had lost his wallet containing his money and his ticket! What should he do? Clearly there was but one way out. The Company must pass him, for justice could not be defrauded of her right. The man he was going for was "shoving the queer" up the road, and must be stopped. After consultation and some delay it was decided to issue the detective a pass, provided he would sign an order on the Secret Service Department for his pay. Of course he would, and he did. Then he took his pass and departed in a happy frame of mind. He had only left the office but a few minutes when a message went over the wires to Washington, and presently an answer came that no man of the name given was in the employ of the Secret Service. He was then on a westward bound train, happy with his pass in his pocket, but a telegram was sent ahead to the next station, directing the conductor to take up that pass and collect full fare, which was done. The fellow was lucky to be allowed to get off so easily.

Caricature.

The art of caricature says the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser is the reverse of one of Wendell Phillips' "Lost Arts." It is a just found art, at least in this country. Until a comparatively recent period, pictorial fun was comparatively lukewarm among us serious Americans, but with Tom Nast, Stephens, Bellew, Newman, Vanity Fair, Harper's Weekly, &c., a new era has been inaugurated, and satire with the pencil is almost as potent and as popular as satire with the pen.

Demand creates a supply in literature and art as well as in trade, and so the newly developed love of the American race for pictorial satire has, among other results, had the effect of bringing to our shore several foreign caricaturists of considerable eminence.

Matt Morgan, who, in the Tomahawk, rendered himself a power in London by his trenchant sketches, and by his attacks on the vices of royalty and aristocracy—notably the two sketches known as "Coming from the Derby" and "The Prince of Wales as Hamlet"—has become an American by adoption, and has recently, in his capacity as scene painter, done some excellent work for Niblo's Garden—having finished a superb transformation panorama for the spectacle of the "Black Crook." Morgan is also engaged upon a series of American caricatures, which embrace clever hits at all sorts of prominent people.

Mons. Collodion is another caricaturist of merit who has visited our shores, while, perhaps, our most famous importation of foreign caricature art is in the person of Regamey.

The history of Mons. Regamey is of interest. By birth he is a Frenchman of Frenchmen, a Parisian, and is descended from a good family—"good" in every sense of that term. He is but thirty years of age, and has already passed through a series of romantic adventures.

Of course, being a Frenchman, he became a politician, and being ardent and unpractical, like most artists, he became a Communist, though opposed to the extreme excesses of the commune. He had been an intimate personal friend of Henri Rochefort, and hated the Empire. Even after the restoration of order in Paris, President Thiers himself was too aristocratic for our "Red" Regamey, and so the latter caricatured the former with some wit, but without any mercy. Thiers did not relish being laughed at, and Regamey was officially "notified" to leave France.

Mons. Regamey is, in his "personality," frank, jovial, mercurial; in short, physically and nervously a Parisian. He does not talk a word of English, but is said by his friends to like this country amazingly, what he has seen of it.

His caricature sketches are said to be exceedingly clever. They certainly are so exceedingly rapid as to be practically instantaneous. They are announced to be executed in the sight of the audiences at the theatre at which he is engaged (Niblo's Garden,) and not to take over one minute and a half in their execution.

This "instantaneous caricature" is a comparatively "new thing"—somewhat of a "sensation," and if it proves successful, will open a new field for "funny" artists.

Lynch Law in Arizona.

[Tucson (Arizona) Citizen, August 9.]

On midnight of Wednesday, Vincente Hernandez, otherwise known as "Piedras Negras," pawnbroker, and his wife, were murdered by having their skulls crushed in with a club and their jugular veins cut with a knife. During the day $900 reward was subscribed by the citizens. Six men were arrested on suspicion and the citizens believing them to be criminals, proceeded to extort a confession. The principal murderer, a Mexican named Leonardo Cordova, confessed, fully exposing his associates, one of whom subsequently confessed. The three were compelled to disclose the hiding place of the plunder. Next morning a settled determination was expressed to hang the three murderers of Hernandez and wife, and also to hang John Willis who killed Robert Swope at Sanford, in November, 1872, and was indicted therefor in March, 1873. The trial was postponed until May, when he was found guilty of murder in the first degree and ordered to be hung, and the case was appealed to the Supreme Court.

The arrangements were completed next morning. Two posts forked at the top were planted in the ground near the jail door, and upon them was placed a stiff pole about twelve feet in length. To this pole four ropes were fastened, with nooses to each, and two wagons were drawn beneath. The Catholic priest, desiring to give consolation to the doomed men, was given the time asked for. The four men, John Willis, Leonardo Cordova, Clemente Lopez, Jesus Saquariba, were then brought out of jail with bandages over their eyes, put into the wagons the rope adjusted to their necks, the wagons, drawn out and all four hung side by side.

A coroner's inquest was held, and a verdict rendered that the men were hung by the people of Tucson en masse, in view of the terrible crimes and murders committed and the tardiness of justice—the inevitable result of allowing criminals to escape the penalties of their crimes.

For loss of appetite, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in their various forms, FERRO-PHOSPHATE ELIXIR OF CALISAYA made by CARTER, HAZARD & CO., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic. As a stimulant tonic for patients recovering from fever or other sickness, it has no equal. It taken during the season it prevents fever and ague and other intermittent fevers. ia28

Adopt the Preventive Policy.

Severe spells of biliousness, indigestion, chills and fever, diarrhœa, nervous headache and physical exhaustion are quite usual at this season. These are visitations which everybody is anxious to avoid, and as a course of Hostetter's Bitters will unquestionably fortify the system against them, the most valuable medical advice which can be offered at this time to persons subject to such complaints, or at all sensitive to atmospheric changes, is to commence taking this powerful vegetable alterative and invigorant without delay. Forty-eight hours will not have elapsed after the first dose before a marked change will have manifested itself in the condition of the system. The ultimate result will be a habit of body so regular, a genial condition so vigorous, that however unhealthy the season may chance to be, the system thus refreshed and reinforced will be in the best possible trim to encounter it.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a conservative, an all-healing antidote, reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the wrapper, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeniod horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. PROPOSALS will be received at this Bureau until 12 o'clock, M., on the FIRST DAY OF SEPTEMBER NEXT, from builders or mechanics qualified to do the work, for the making, framing and ribboning, planking from keel to rail, ceiling, including keelsons, clamps, spirketting and battery, to rail, putting in decks, including kirs, etc., ceiling on main and hammock rails, channels and chains, building store-rooms, magazines and lockers, joiner work inside and out, caulking and calking, building quarter-galleries and setting head, and painting complete, a sloop-of-War of about 1500 tons. The materials, tools and facilities for doing the work will be furnished by the government.

The Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair will be at Kittery Navy Yard on WEDNESDAY, the 20th of August next, and in conference with the Naval Constructor of that yard will meet persons desiring to make proposals for the work above mentioned, and will give all necessary explanations concerning the work to be done, and in regard to the character of the materials, tools and facilities to be furnished by the government.

Plans and specifications may be seen and examined on applying at the commandant of the Kittery Navy Yard, after August 1st, 1873.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves them in vigor and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strong; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; a thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Arrangements are nearly completed for the rebuilding of the Ocean House at Rye Beach on a new site.

The proprietors of the States and Union, of this city, have purchased the Dover Gazette, and in their next issue will consolidate the two papers.

Dr. Fitzgerald, the famous clairvoyant physician, will be at the Franklin House to-day and to-morrow. He has had wonderful success in curing disease.

Will the Haverhill Gazette please inform the public what railroads in New Hampshire the Eastern Railroad has been "spending its money foolishly to build?

A passenger train on the Boston & Maine Railroad had a collision with a gravel train at Biddeford at two o'clock, Thursday afternoon. One passenger was seriously injured, supposed fatally.

An important meeting of the Portsmouth Mercantile Library Association will be held this (Friday) evening at the hall, No. 5 Congress street, at 7 1-2 o'clock. Members are earnestly desired to be present.

The camp meeting at Wolfeboro' Bay commences next Sunday. Trains leave Portsmouth at 10.10 A. M. and 4.35 P. M., daily, Sundays excepted; returning, leave Wolfeboro' at 8.25 A. M. and 3.55 P. M.

The Times says the two boys who escaped from the Brentwood house of correction were at the Hedding camp meeting, Wednesday, and that a collection was taken up for them! Smart thing that; stick a pin "dar."

The train from Portland due here at 5.06 P. M., Thursday, had eleven passenger cars crowded, about 100 more passengers being taken here. The travel over the Eastern Railroad is much larger this summer than ever before.

There was a great rush to the Hedding camp meeting, Thursday. The accommodations on the Concord Railroad were not sufficient, and many who went to Newmarket Junction en route for Epping, went no further, returning in the morning train down.

It is said that Campo Bello, N. B., is now the sole property of Capt. James M. Hill of this city and Capt. Charles Emery of Boston. The island has 12,000 acres of land, two thirds of it forest land. A portion of it will be at once put into the market and a hotel will be built.

A good deal of interest is manifested among navy officials and ship builders concerning the award of contracts for which the bids are to be opened Monday, for labor on the sloop to be built by private parties of government materials at the navy yard. No vessels have ever been constructed for the navy on this cooperative plan, which practical mechanics and ship builders look upon with much favor, since they are required to furnish only labor, government providing the capital and materials.

At the National Temperance convention held on Wednesday at Saratoga, J. H. Kent was called upon to respond for New Hampshire. He briefly stated that a State Temperance Union had been formed, and had placed public speakers in the field, besides organizing auxiliary societies; that a large number had signed the pledge. He also spoke of the zeal and activity of the Washingtonian Society, the several temperance orders and the churches. The convention passed resolutions favoring the support of the political party now existing which favors prohibition most.

As every rose has its thorn, so does the increase of business facilities interfere with pleasure. With the largely increased and increasing number of railroad trains passing over Noble's Island, comes a general complaint that life is endangered when a person chooses to drive a horse to and from Kittery. Counting the vexatious delays, a half hour from Kittery depot to Concord Railway wharf is considered fast going. There seems to be no remedy for this, and the blockade promises to be perpetual. Perhaps, by-and-by, the present method of crossing the river will be discarded for the old-time and less risky ferry-boat.

Kearsarge S. F. E. Co. No. 3 went to Biddeford on Thursday in the 3.15 P. M. train, taking with them the U. S. Naval Band and invited guests. At Biddeford they were received by the Eben Simpsons and partook of a collation, after which they marched to Saco and returned. The Kearsarges are quartered at the Biddeford House. Last night, there was a grand ball at the City Hall, and a supper at midnight prepared by Fountain. This morning at 8.30, the companies will embark on steamer Augusta for Hill's beach, where a clam chowder and dancing are on the programme. The Kearsarges will leave for home at 6.30 P. M., arriving here at 7.50.

The Great Balloon Trip.

Geo. Ashton Lunt, who has charge of the Graphic balloon life boat, writes the Boston Advertiser from New York as follows:

The moment that all is ready, and the monster inflated, we shall go. Go, yes; but where? Will it be northward, through the fog banks of Newfoundland, to that frigid zone where, amid perpetual winter, the awful ice king binds captive in his life-chilling fetters the strong hands and brave hearts of those who dare his power; and is it our destiny to be enrolled among the victims of that glittering prison? Or westward, alighting disappointed and chagrined on some vast prairie, to startle into terrified flight the savage brute, and to live in the traditions of savage man as the fearful Great Spirit which descended from the skies to avenge its real children? Or southward, to sink into peninsular swamps, or, becalmed in our vessel, to swelter and scorch in equatorial heat? Or eastward! eastward, to fall with feather-like softness upon a smooth sea, and in our good boat make the nearest land; or to swoop, with a horrible speed, into the mighty Atlantic during one of its fierce autumnal convulsions; or eastward, skimming far above cloud-land, careless of the storms below, and verifying the theory of the hero of nearly five hundred ascensions, to Europe, to receive the applause of the world, to benefit science and establish forever the disputed westerly current.

Should we succeed, we shall live in history as those who dared all for science; and should we fail, we need expect no sympathy from others than our personal friends; for the world, which never forgives failure, will rank us among the many reckless adventurers who have rushed to destruction in foolhardy schemes for popularity. But we shall care for neither praise nor blame then.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—A correspondent says: "I have recently heard two stories about Israelites, which I know will be amusing, and which I hope will be new to your readers. The first is of Sir Moses Montefiore. When negotiating a loan on the Bourse, on which he was very 'keen,' a small knot of capitalists approached him. 'Oh, dear,' says one, 'he is going to swallow us all.' 'No, my dear sir,' said Sir Moses with a caustic smile, 'my religion forbids me that.' The second is of a German Israelite, who was eating a pork chop in a thunder storm. On hearing an unusually loud clap, he laid down his knife and fork, and observed, 'Vell, did any poty efer hear such a fuss about a liddle pid of pork?'"

—Every time they have a show at Granby, Mo., somebody gets killed. Their first show was three years ago, and it was enlivened by some excellent shooting; the next one visited there, last week, and the whites and the negroes got into a row. One of the performers, who was blacking up to appear as an ethiop, stuck his head out to see the fun and, being mistaken for a negro, was dropped in his tracks.

GRANDEST SCHEME EVER KNOWN.

Fourth Grand Gift Concert

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE

PUBLIC LIBRARY OF KENTUCKY

12,000 CASH GIFTS $1,500,000

Every Fifth Ticket Draws a Gift

$250,000 for $50.

The Fourth Grand Gift Concert authorized by special act of the Legislature for the benefit of the Public Library of Kentucky, will take place in Public Library Hall, at Louisville, Ky.,

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3d, 1873.

Only sixty thousand tickets will be sold and one-half of these are intended for the European market, thus leaving only 30,000 for sale in the United States, where 100,000 were disposed of for the Third Concert. The tickets are divided into ten coupons, or parts, and have on their back the scheme with an explanation of the mode of drawing.

At this concert, which will be the grandest musical display ever witnessed in this country, the unprecedented sum of divided into 12,000 cash gifts, will be distributed by lot among the ticket-holders. The number of the tickets to be drawn from one wheel by blind children and the gifts from another.

LIST OF GIFTS:

ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		100,000
ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		50,000
ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		25,000
ONE GRAND CASH GIFT		17,000
10 CASH GIFTS	$10,000 each	100,000
20 CASH GIFTS	5,000 each	100,000
50 CASH GIFTS	1,000 each	50,000
80 CASH GIFTS	500 each	40,000
100 CASH GIFTS	400 each	40,000
150 CASH GIFTS	300 each	45,000
250 CASH GIFTS	200 each	50,000
225 CASH GIFTS	100 each	22,500
11,000 CASH GIFTS	50 each	550,000
TOTAL, 12,000 GIFTS, ALL CASH, amounting to		$1,500,000

The distribution will be positive, whether all the tickets are sold or not, and the 12,000 gifts all paid in proportion to the tickets sold—all unsold tickets being destroyed, as at the First and Second Concerts, and not represented in the drawing.

PRICE OF TICKETS:

Whole tickets, $50; Halves, $25; Tenths, or each Coupon, $5; Eleven Whole Tickets for $500; 22 Tickets for $1,000; 113 Whole Tickets for $5,000; 227 Whole Tickets for $10,000. No discount on less than $500 worth of Tickets at a time.

The unparalleled success of the Third Gift Concert, as well as the satisfaction given by the First and Second, makes it only necessary to announce the Fourth to insure the prompt sale of every Ticket. The Fourth Gift Concert will be conducted in all its details like the Third, and full particulars may be learned from circulars, which will be sent free from this office to all who apply for them.

Tickets now ready for sale, and all orders accompanied by the money promptly filled. Liberal terms given to those who help to sell again.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an alkaline, easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 70 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. EDMUND BURKE,
Commissioner of Patents."

Late Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. CHARLES MASON,

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.
COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as coal inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no mines will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.
We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

The Great South American Blood Purifier.
JURUBEBA
IS THE MOST POWERFUL CLEANSER, Strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.
IT IS SPECIALLY ADAPTED to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the weakness of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, &c., &c.
WHEN WEARY AND LANGUID from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, the system needs a TONIC to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.
IN THE HEAT OF SUMMER, frequently the LIVER and SPLEEN do not properly perform their functions, the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to bilious derangement.
Dr. WELLS'
EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA
is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly adapted to all these difficulties: it will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthen the LIVING VITAL POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTING MOSS from IMPAIRED and ENFEEBLED Organs.
IT SHOULD BE FREELY TAKEN, as Jurubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.
JOHN Q. KELLOGG, 18 Platt St., New York.

Daily Chronicle.

The Shah a Dead-Beat.
[Henry Watterson in the Courier Journal.]
Briefly, the Shah is said to be a dead-beat. He is pronounced not only a dead-beat, but he is a dead-beat of genius. There are those who declare him a fraud—no Shah at all—only an advertising agent of Reuter. This, I take it, is a calumny. He may be the speculative baron's middle man, but he is still the ruler over the squalid, ice-covered and diseased country which is famous chiefly as having given the world Darius and the cholera. Hereafter it will be better known as the home of Nasr-ed-Deen, the peer of Victoria Woodhull and the superior of George Francis Train.

I will try to tell you the story as they are now telling it everywhere over here:

It seems that the Shah first showed his cloven paw at St. Petersburg. He was standing at a bay window with the Princess Dagmar. Her royal highness observed that the diamonds worn by her Asiatic companion were exceeding rich and rare. "Not so rich nor so rare," says the gallant Shah, "as yours," throwing his arm about the Princess' royal neck. Now a scientific princess is usually a woman of spirit, and, in addition to this professional character, the Princess Dagmar is a good girl. She raised a royal row about it, and among hands, they hustled the amorous Persian out of the country upon down grade. Wisely, however, they kept their mouths shut. They said, "He has sold us; we don't want to be the only dupes; let him go and sell our enemies." The ever ready Nasr-ed-deen was willing enough, and, emboldened by his escape, he augmented the measure of his daring. Ensconced in Buckingham Palace, the virtuous dwelling of a widowed queen, he began a career of unbridled licentiousness. The worst characters were picked up on the streets and carried into Victoria's private apartments. Bruisers and cockfighters were introduced to the halls of state, there to exhibit their art and skill. All night long, and every night, there was an orgy in which the Shah and his suite made themselves as free and easy as though free love were the law of the land. But this was by no means all. The king-of-kings, not to be outdone in liberality by his entertainers, bought huge quantities of jewelry, taking some of it away with him and leaving behind him many costly presents. The presents the jewelers have got back again. But what the Shah took away with him they will never see any more. It is even said that whilst in Paris, some of the members of his suite had to be remonstrated with, touching their designs on the plate of the palace in which they were lodged.

To all this, if any of it be true, and where there is so much talk there must be some truth, one is disposed to say, "served them right." There was never a more absurd, and in some respects a more unprincipled and demoralizing theatric performance than the series of pageants, ovations and honors which geeeted this filthy Asiatic vagabond from his advent into Europe to his exit into Persia. That he insulted a Russian princess; that he befouled the home of an English queen; that he swindled a gaping riff-raf of boot-kissing jewelers, would seem to be a most natural thing for such a varlet to do. His personal behavior was conspicuously illbred and unbearable. He did only what the whim of the moment suggested, regardless of persons, usages and consequences. He paid not the smallest attention to his entertainers, except as it suited his caprice. His table manners were particularly bad. He would take up a peach, bite a bit of it, and throw the remainder on the floor. He would suck a plum of about half of its juice and drop the pulpy substance on the cloth. In all things he affected the king of kings, wrapped in the mantle of his own heathen originality and dirt.

Second Love.
The Charlestown (S. C.) Courier and News, which touches upon queer topics in a quaint sort of way, inquires why it should be a reproach to be called a second-hand swain, and goes on as follows:

The title is a patent of nobility—a token that the possessor is desperately in earnest. It is a sign of courage, a proof to perseverance. Nor can it be said that new things are always the best. That depends, we know, on the quality of the article; whether it is made to sell or made to last. Many a second-hand thing, although somewhat battered and bruised, is more highly prized than its tawdry, flashy neighbor, which will fall to pieces as soon as any strain is put upon it. Repairing broken hearts is seldom expensive or difficult. Horrible, but true!

How often does a man marry the woman with whom he first fancies himself to love? Adam did it. There was only one woman in existence. Since the Adamitic age where is the man who has married his first love? It is not in nature. Boys are slower of development than girls, and their first essay is generally with a charmer older than themselves. They grow out of it; take a slight attack of love as they take whooping-cough and measles. It is foolish to say that the mature love of a man is less worthy than the spooniness of the boy. There is a Dora and an Agnes in well-nigh every life. Is the first novel, or the first song, or the first poem, as likely to live as the ripe production of later years? Not it. There are men who become famous by a single speech or by a single verse; so there are men, perhaps, who have had but one love. They are not many, and 'tis better so. The world would soon come to a stand-still without the help of second-hand swains.

Daily Chronicle.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 1873.

Readables.

In Marion, Tenn., the court adjourned for dinner, and all cleared out, forgetting the prisoner, who was on trial for murder. After waiting some time he walked around to the jail and ordered his dinner sent to his room.

The Boston Herald says: "Get the democratic party out of the way. It bears no fruit, and it should no longer cumber the ground. Its claim that it is alive is the one thing that prevents the growth of a new party reform.

Two Mexican boys and 200 sheep were overtaken by a sand-storm in crossing a series of sand pits in the vicinity of Fort Garland, Col., and one of the boys, the dogs and all the sheep were buried. The other boy contrived to avert this horrible fate by climbing as the sand piled around his feet.

Naturally enough, the Pittsburg Commercial is troubled about the smoke nuisance. It says: "We referred a day or two since to the difficulty of abating the smoke nuisance in this city, for want of a cheap and simple apparatus to consume the smoke. We have since learned that such an apparatus has been invented and is in actual use; and that it is capable of being applied easily and at a little cost, to locomotives and furnaces for generating steam. This invention was the work of a Philadelphia gentleman named Rich, now deceased, and it has been successfully applied to the locomotives on the railroad running from Philadelphia to Norristown. It has been used there for about a year to general satisfaction, consumes the smoke completely, and thoroughly prevents sparks; and we are assured, moreover, that it was tried with equal success on the Pennsylvania road."

The Charleston Union puts it in this way: "France has had her terrible domestic strifes, and yet the Vendeans are among the bravest of the French people. England had her York and Lancaster, her Rupert and her Cromwell, and yet the English are one people. America has had her terrible civil war, and to-day, wherever the flag waves, Americans are one people. There is no North, no South, no East, no West, but, white and black, of whatever race, color or condition, we are one people—Americans all—one country, one people. Under one Almighty God, and one supreme National Government, we take our place in the front of the nations as the color guard of human freedom and civilization, and carry the honor and glory of the greatest republic on earth untarnished and undiminished to our remotest posterity. If Mr. Davis cannot lift himself up to the fact, let him, at least, remember 'that in peace there is nothing so becomes a man as modest stillness and humility.'"

The Vicksburg nursery girls, having caught the spirit from the Mississippi steamers, have taken to racing with baby-carriages along the sidewalk. Little Danny Burgess was thrown out and killed in a hotly-contested race, recently, but that was merely an accident.

State News.

At the Twin Mountain House, says the New York Herald, Henry Ward Beecher, a performing bear and a white donkey are the attractions. On Tuesday evening, Health Commissioner Hutchinson bantered a Brooklyn merchant to ride the ass for $250. Mr. Beecher held the merchant's hat while he rode twice around the hotel piazza and went off over the donkey's head into the dirt. The money was paid over to Mr. Beecher, who devoted it to a subscription to relieve a Baptist minister's farm from a mortgage. Sundays Mr. Beecher preaches, and week days plays with the chicken, the bear and donkey.

A little daughter of Elder D. N. Chadsey of Celebrook, aged five years, ascended to the top of Table Rock in Dixville Notch, a few days ago, accompanied by her parents.

A chamber girl at the Glen House recently found $310, and carried it to the office. It proved to belong to a gentleman of New York, who had left it that morning. She received $10 as a reward.

John A. Wright, of Keene, is the owner of a fine bed of silicieous earth, just discovered by accident at Troy. It covers an area of two acres, is three feet below the surface, and reaches down from five to twenty feet. He proposes to mine it for "scouring powder."

There was frost in Lancaster last Sunday night, which makes frost every month in the year thus far in that town.

In Colebrook, George Heath's tame bear got loose on the 22d, with a chain attached to his neck, swam the Connecticut, and made his escapeto Monadnock mountain.

Butler's Foes.

[New Haven Palladium.]

The anti-Butler press would do well to remember that even Beelzebub himself is entitled to fair play. When a donkey like Brother Fay seeks notoriety by assailing the general, of whom Massachusetts was till lately so proud, it is nonsense to cry out when Butler hits back, in his savage fashion, and hurts somebody. All the hypocrites and fanatics in the Commonwealth seem to train with the anti-Butler crowd, and it is impossible for human nature not to enjoy their punishment. Butler's worst enemy will not accuse him of hypocrisy, and he has always had the reputation of keeping his word. When he says he will, if elected Governor, close every liquor store in Massachusetts, no one doubts he would do it, and so give the people a fair chance to express their opinion on the prohibitory law and its effects. The experiment is one that many people would like to see tried. At present the policy pursued by that good temperance man, Governor Washburn, is to strike at the small dealers, and let the rich ones severely alone. It is notorious that the large hotels and restaurants in Boston sell as much liquor as ever they did, and that the State constables dare not interfere with them. With Butler as Governor, there would at least be one law for the poor and the rich.

How She Got That Check Cashed.

A New York Express reporter is allowed by the editor to tell the following story:—

First she got in front of the discount clerk's window, and out of an exceedingly elegant Russia leather portmonnaie she extracted a check, which she smoothed out, looked at it with a remarkably business-like air, and pushed it through the window with a most charming smile, which might have softened the heart of any man but a discount clerk. This particular clerk was not hard-hearted, so he took time, though busy, to say: "You must go to the paying teller," at the same time pointing to that individual.

Away went the lady, a little disconcerted, but not dismayed. "Anybody might have made that little mistake," she argued. So she walked up to the next desk with renewed confidence. Now she must be right, and she resolved to be exceedingly manly and business-like.

"The money on this check, if you please."

"Forty-eight, fifty-four, sixty-one—eh! Oh! check? Paying teller, sixty-four"—and the clerk's head was bent over the column of figures he was adding.

Finally it struck the lady that possibly the Paying Teller might be the proper person to see, and after a short search she found his window, with a long line of persons in front of it. Now an average man would have taken his place in the rear, and waited his turn as patiently as might be, but nobody could dream of a woman's doing that, and of course this one did nothing of the sort, not she. She marched firmly up to the window, and in tones not more than half as dulcet as those she had used on entering the bank, asked for the money on that check. Now, if she had been a man, she would have been snubbed by the teller, shoved by the men, laughed at by the boys, and generally badly entreated; but being a woman, she was let alone, partly from politeness, but more because it would take more time to reason with her than to let her have her own way—to say nothing of the chances of her having it anyhow. So the Paying Teller took the check, glanced at it after the manner of his class, and politely inquired: "Large or small bills, madam?" But by this time madam had become lost in meditation on the question of how she should trim that new walking suit, and it was some time before she could be aroused—in fact the question had to be repeated, not quite so politely:—

"What? Oh! yes, let me see. Large, I guess."

Three or four of those marvellous flashes of the hands and the bills are before her. Of course she had to count them, and you know how a woman counts money. First she takes one bill off the pile and looks at it suspiciously and lays it down a little ways off, then she takes the next one and then the next, counting out loud all the time, and then she mislays a bill, and finally she looks up and says it ain't right, and then she counts it back again and guesses it may be right after all. All that this woman did, and that Paying Teller and those men and boys looked on and called her blessed—only they spelled it the other way, and then that blessed woman rolled up that money and put it in the Russia leather portmonnaie, and then she bit her lip and looked thoughtful, and then she said in a "velvet voice:" "Couldn't you give me small bills for half of this?" The Paying Teller intimated that it was in the resources of the bank, whereupon she unrolled the bills and carefully counted off half, which she cautiously handed over, getting the small bills in return. Then she rolled these up and put them in the portmonnaie, but they filled it so full it wouldn't clasp, and of course she couldn't go up Broadway with it gaping open. So after she had tried to shut it a few times she said: "Oh! dear! they're in such a wad; couldn't you give me about $25 in small bills and the rest in large?" Silently that teller took those bills; his heart was too full for utterance, mournfully he made the exchange and solemnly he handed back the money. He didn't swear out loud, but his lips were moving, and if that recording angel who blotted Uncle Toby's oath with a tear was on duty that day, he must have had a severe crying spell just then. At last, at half-past two, she rolled up those bills, put them in that portmonnaie, picked up her parasol and gloves, which she had laid on the shelf and smiled sweetly and said:—

"There! They said I couldn't get a check cashed, but I told 'em I knew I could, and I have."

Then that teller opened his mouth and said: "Madam you have—"

And she had.

As to what all those waiting men and boys said, our reporter says he can't very well write it down because it's mostly represented by dashes.

And that woman still lives and brags on how easy it is to get money at a bank, if you only know how.

— An elderly gentleman named Pinkney, living in Redding Ridge, while going to the depot in Danbury, stepped on a peach pit in front of the Post Office, and sat down on the pavement with shocking violence. Several people ran to his aid, and one of them asked him if he had hurt his spine? "Heaven only knows," feebly gasped the sufferer, "look in my hat and see."

—A Jackson (Tenn.) cat was locked in a cupboard for fourteen days without food or water. She came out weak and attenuated but hopeful.

Danbury News.

Wh'le Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Pawling were riding through Wooster street, Friday afternoon, they were stopped by a stranger with a book under his arm, who came up to the wagon, and said he had called at their house, but did not find them at home, and took the liberty of addressing them now. He explained that he was canvassing for a neat little work entitled "Helps for the Home Circle," being a collection of the thoughts of the best minds of the age, a work that was adapted to a larger circle of readers than any other extant, and one which must necessarily improve the tone of domestic life, add to the refinement and intelligence of society and fill the hearts of all with a longing for the purer things of ——. Just then Mr. Pawling's horse stepped ahead, and dragged one wheel of the wagon right over the foot of the speaker. With a howl of agony the miserable man dropped to the ground, and then immediately sprung up again, and taking the injured member up in both hands, and still howling dismally, hopped across to the sidewalk. Mr. Pawling waited a reasonable length of time, but seeing that the man showed no intention of resuming the topic he drove on.

Don't be afraid of having a little fun in the family. A merry disposition is a godsend to a home. There's the case of a man on Nelson street, for instance. Saturday he went into the kitchen ahead of his wife, and seeing two huckleberry pies steaming on the table he hastily concealed them in the ice chest, which stood open in the back hall. Then he went down town chuckling to himself, and ten minutes later the ice cart drove up and the ice man brought in a fifty-pound cake, and started for the ice chest, followed closely by the fond wife expatiating upon the "muss." He put the cake upon the edge of the chest and gave it a push over, and when it came down on those two steaming pies a huckleberry geyser followed, and the ice man, with eyes and face full of the discharge, tumbled completely over the woman and disappeared out of door. The wife recovered her balance as speedily as possible and, catching up a broom, went after the ice man, but he escaped her; then she came back and looked in the ice chest, and down at the oil cloth, and up at the ceiling, and around on the walls. The men at the store who were let into the joke by the facetious Nelson-street man are anxiously wondering how it turned out.

A Whale Caught in a Submarine Cable.

Writing from Kurrachee, India, on the 8th ultimo, a correspondent signing himself H. Izaak Walton sends the following to the London Times:

The cable between Kurrachee and Gwaur (a distance of about three hundred miles) suddenly failed on the evening of the 4th inst. The telegraph steamer Amber Witch, under the command of Capt. Bishop, (late I. N.,) with the electrical and engineering staff under Mr. Henry Mance, proceeded on the following day to repair the damage, which by tests taken at either end appeared to be one hundred and eighteen miles from Kurrachee. The Amber Witch arrived on the ground at 2 P. M., on the 6th, a heavy sea and thick fog prevailing at the time, but the cable was successfully grappled within a quarter of a mile of the fault.

The surroundings at the fault were very irregular, with over-falls from 30 to 70 fathoms. On winding in the cable unusual resistance was experienced, as if it were foul of rocks, but after persevering for some time the body of an immense whale, entangled in the cable, and was brought to the surface, when it was found to be firmly secured by two and a half turns of the cable immediately above the tail. Sharks and other fish had partly eaten the body, which was rapidly decomposing, the jaws falling away on reaching the surface. The tail, which measured fully twelve feet across, was perfect, and covered with barnacles at the extremities. The sea being too rough at the time to make use of the boats, an attempt was made to haul the whale on board, but its own weight broke it away from the injured cable as soon as it was above the surface.

Apparently the whale was at the time of entanglement using the cable to free himself from parasites, such as barnacles, which annoy them very much, and the cable hanging in a loop over a submarine precipice, he probably with a fillip of his tail, twisted it around him, and thus came to an untimely end.

Presence of Mind.

[Detroit Free Press.]

It is a good thing to know what to do when a man faints away and falls down on the street. A pedestrian fell down on Monroe avenue yesterday, being just off a sick bed, and it was wonderful how many men in the crowd knew exactly what was the best thing to do. One called for brandy, another waved the crowd back, another shouted "police" and "coroner," a fourth brought a bucket of water from a saloon, and all the others crowded in as closely as possible and began wondering if the man had his life insured. Some wanted to throw water on the victim, and others thought that his boots ought to be removed, and the man with the slop-pail fell down in it, and jumped up and kicked at a lame boy. Two boys were sent for a doctor, and didn't go, and a market woman crowded in and told them to raise the man's head. Some one put a brick under his neck, and another general call was made for whiskey, camphor, gin, soda, pop, root beer, ginger ale, vinegar, water and lager. Nothing was brought, and after a few minutes the man opened his eyes, gave his name, and asked to be taken home. After he had departed a doctor arrived, a coroner came puffing along, and the crowd came near having a fight as to who was entitled to the honor of saving the man's life.

—A young man from the country slapped a big copper cent under the nose of the stamp clerk at the Troy post-office, saying: "I guess I'll take one of them ere pastoral cards, mister."

Mr. Colfax and the $1200 Check.

The following letter from Schuyler Colfax to Mr. John T. Drew, on the subject of the $1200 check alleged to have been received by him has just been made public:—

SOUTH BEND, IND., Aug. 20, 1873.

My Dear Sir:—Just returned from Minnesota, I find amongst my letters the following from the Hon. E. B. Washburne, United States minister to France:—

PARIS, July 31, 1873.

Hon. Schuyler Colfax:—

Dear Sir—I have duly received your favor of the 7th instant. I have seen the statement of Mr. Drew. It is true that he was at this legation pending the Credit Mobilier investigation before the Poland committee at Washington, last winter. I well recollect our conversation on the subject of the "S. C. or bearer" check, and his statement that he had reason to know that you did not get the money. My recollection of the conversation is confirmed by one of my secretaries, who was present and heard it. I understood from Mr. Drew that he was abroad for the purpose of making certain investigations in regard to frauds committed on the revenues of the United States.

Yours, very truly, E. B. WASHBURNE.

I am even more rejoiced, my dear sir, than you can be at this emphatic confirmation of your statement. You declared in your letter to Judge Poland that, when you first heard of this $1200 check (which was first presented to the committee, January 22, 1873), you were at the American legation at Paris, and told Mr. Washburne at the time that you know Colfax never got that money. The New York World, whose malignant perversions and falsifications in this matter have been as brutal in their language as they have been infamous in their spirit, determined to dishonor you, also, because you had dared to tell the truth on a matter in which you had no interest whatever. It has, therefore, over and over again, asserted that your statement must be false because you had been seen in Washington in my company at the time you said you were in Paris. Knowing this to be a falsehood, as I had not the slightest recollection of having seen you at all for more than a year, I wrote to Mr. Washburne; and, as you will see, out of the mouth of two witnesses—not only Mr. Washburne himself, but his secretary also—is your truth doubly confirmed and the lie of the World newspaper doubly refuted.

Let me thank you personally for daring, for the sake of truth and justice, to encounter all the villification to which you have been subjected. He who knoweth all things knows that I never received from Oakes Ames any stock or bonds of the Credit Mobilier or the Union Pacific Railroad, nor any dividend thereon, in cash or check or stock or bonds. And I consider it but little less than providential that you happened to see Mr. Ames himself draw the money on this very "S. C. or bearer" check, thus confirming Mr. Dillon's testimony, but also that you saw him pay the $1200 he received at the sergeant-at-arms' counter to a stranger who had been talking to him on New Orleans matters. I know this confirmation of your statement against the aspersions of your calumniators will be gratifying to ex-Governors Underwood and Stewart, Lieutenant-Governor Tait, Generals Barstow, Wells and Henry, Judge Wales, President Buckham of the University of Vermont, Messrs. Benedict and Huntington and other prominent citizens of Vermont, who have borne such strong testimony to your reliability and your unimpeachable character. With grateful regards, yours truly.

SCHUYLER COLFAX.

Danger of Laughing in the Wrong Place.

In addition to the regular claque at the Paris theatres, a new profession has sprung up with a similar object, though the means of attaining the latter are not the same. The scene of action, too, is different, being in this case the Cafes Chantants. Attached to these establishments are certain individuals who for the modest sum of two or three francs a night, engage to indulge in hilarious and contagious merriment, and at particular couplets supposed to be more than usually comic, to split their sides with laughter. But mere routine is occasionally rather dangerous, as was proved not long since by the following incident: Without the fact having been communicated to the professional laugher at a Cafe Chantant in the Champs Elysees, a particular song had been withdrawn from the programme and another substituted. The laugher had been quietly dozing, without attending to what had been going on, when suddenly rousing himself and looking at the clock inside the gate, he perceived, believing the programme unchanged, that it was time for him to indulge in one of his most excruciating fits of cachinnatory excitement. He did so. In another instant he was nearly murdered. He had burst out in the midst of a touching couplet about Alsace and Lorraine. Though he escaped with his life, his hat was smashed in, and his his clothes torn off his body by the deeply-moved and patriotic audience, before he could explain that he was not a German in disguise, but an unfortunate professional laugher who had exercised his calling in the wrong place.

Business Notices.

Blessed are they who seek relief from "Liver Complaint," "Biliousness," Bad Blood, Pimples, Blotches, Eruptions, Rough Skin, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, and Scrofulous diseases, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext. or Golden Medical Discovery, for they shall be happy in knowing that the cure is complete. Sold by Druggists. 404

Adopt the Preventive Policy.

Severe spells of biliousness, indigestion, chills and fever, diarrhœa, nervous headache and physical exhaustion are quite usual at this season. These and kindred visitations which everybody is anxious to avoid, and as a course of Hostetter's Bitters will unquestionably fortify the system against them, the most valuable medical advice which can be offered at this time to persons subject to such complaints, or at all sensitive to atmospheric changes, is to commence using this powerful vegetable alterative and invigorant without delay. Forty-eight hours will not have elapsed after the first dose before a marked change will have manifested itself in the condition of the system. The ultimate result will be a habit of body so regular, a genial condition so vigorous, that however unhealthy the season may chance to be, the system thus refreshed and reinforced will be in the best possible trim to encounter it.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the deep wink, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus healthy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; dull, faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Fire was discovered in Ward's distillery on Dennett street, Friday afternoon, but was extinguished without much trouble.

A fishing schooner brought a sword-fish into this port, Friday, which was eleven feet long and weighed 530 pounds.

The Bangor passenger express train for Boston, Friday afternoon, had two engines and sixteen cars when it passed through Portsmouth.

Mr. Jacob Haddock, a well known builder, of this city, has gone to Campo Bello to build the new hotel for Messrs. Hill and Emery.

The fourth chowder party excursion will depart for Gerrish's island next Wednesday, leaving camp for a moonlight sail home at eight o'clock P. M.

The Kearsarge boys came back from Biddeford, Friday evening, in high glee, and were received at the depot by Dearborn S. F. E. Co. No. 1 with the drum corps. There was music about town for an hour.

At the examination, Thursday, for admission to the Freshman class of Bowdoin College, George A. Holbrook, son ot John R. Holbrook, Esq., of this city, passed a successful examination, and enters on the classical course.

In order to close out the balance of their summer stock, Messrs. Terhune & Berry offer the choice of any hat in their large corner window for the low price of one dollar. A chance for a bargain for men and boys.

The morning trains at the Eastern Railroad were delayed at Rowley on Friday by a freight train running off the track. On the same day, two freight trains on the Conway road collided and two conductors were slightly injured.

A change has been made by which Mr. Auren M. Payson is to be Principal in charge of the Boys' and Girls' High School, at a salary of $1700, Mr. Stephen W. Clarke and Miss Arabella C. Morgan assistants, with salaries of $1200 and $700 respectively. Mr. Payson's salary is increased $200, Mr. Clarke's $100.

The Biddeford Times, referring to our account of an alleged fracas at York Beach, says "the facts are as we understand from an eye-witness, some three or four South Berwick roughs, by the name of Boston, went over there half full of rum and undertook to clean out the Bowdoin House. The proprietor is Mr. George Bowden, a man we have long and favorably known, a prominent citizen of York, who has in years past enjoyed the official honors of the town. He was there and undertook to defend his property and his rights. Being assailed by one of the Bostons in a very rough, physically abusive and infamous manner, he seized hold of a pitch-fork and went for the ruffians. But he was overpowered, and the result was as stated by the CHRONICLE. We cannot learn what part was played by George Varrell, nor which side he was on. But the Bostons were the aggressors, and if we are correctly informed in regard to their transactions and character, they ought to have been killed on the spot. We hope they will be made to answer at the bar of stern justice for this great outrage." Mr. Bowden informed us that no trouble occurred at his house. How's this?

The Nathan Murder.

A man named Irving, in San Francisco jail, confesses to the murder of Nathan in New York. He says the housekeeper's son got them to do the murder at the suggestion of Washington Nathan. He thinks the name of his confederate was McNally. The following is the substance of his confession, made recently: "The dog was stolen from a ship carpenter's chest; I know where his shop is; we entered the house at the basement; the housekeeper's son went in and left the latch up so that we could get in without trouble; after we got into the cellar I heard a bell ring nine; it seemed to me we were in the dark an hour and a half; it seemed a long time—perhaps it was not so late—when a man came down and said; 'I've finished the old man.' We went up stairs. He had struck the old man five or six times on the head. When he saw he was going to fall, and being afraid the fall would startle the folks, he caught hold of him and laid him down. I have in my house in New York some Pacific Mail stock, some Boston, Hartford and Erie, and some other things. There is a small memorandum book I took from the old man, several pages of which are in Hebrew; there are some names in it; there is Albert Cardoza, Samuel Lewis Cummings' of Fourteenth street, and Dr. Leo; we only got between $6000 and $7000; the safe was open when we went up stairs from the cellar; I stayed there while the man washed his hands and face; he had blood on them; when we left the old man's room he stopped to look out of the door; as he did so, he took hold of the casings and left blood marks; there were prints of his fingers; we then concluded we could not leave the house that night; it was opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel; there were a good many policemen around, and we would be seen and arrested; we stayed till about six o'clock in the morning; just as we went to the front door a man was passing on the other side of the street with a tin pail; he looked at me; then a girl came along (a shop girl;) she looked around and took particular notice of us; my wife is in New York, and I have a daughter fifteen years of age; I do not want to tell you the names of either of the men, because it may not be right; I have told the chief of police, but I am afraid they are not going to work about it right away; I have been expecting to see it all come out ever since; I don't want to be hanged, but am willing to suffer a just punishment; I was born at Sunnyside; they call it Irvington; I am related to Washington Irving." The man confessing the murder of Nathan says his name is John P. Irving; he was a sailor on the British ship Coulnakyle. He confessed to the second mate and gave his name as Brown. He was thought insane. A commission of lunacy could not determine, but he appeared insane. He was remanded to jail.

Minister Waiters.

[Providence Journal.]

Henry Ward Beecher preached in a White Mountain hotel, Sunday. In the course of his sermon he remarked, "Religion is God's hotel table, where the guests call for what their particular inclination suggests." We hope he did not continue the parallel, and maintain that the ministers are like hotel waiters, who dispense of the blessings of the table in greater or less abundance as they may be moved by present or prospective fees.

—"Jennie," said a landlady to her help, the other morning, "was there any fire in the kitchen last night, while you were sitting up?" "Only just a spark, ma'am," was the reply. The landlady looked suspiciously at Jennie; but the innocent girl went on scrubbing.

—Deacon Davis of Springfield, Ill., has been "churned" for using the profane expression "by gum" too often.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—The Detroit Free Press relates the following incident: A gentleman who wanted some one to do a little work around his house, was yesterday sent to the foot of Woodward avenue to secure one from the crowd of idlers always to be found loafing around there. He came upon a man wearing shoes without stockings, about half a hat, pants in rags, coat buttoned up to hide the absence of a shirt, and without a cent in his pocket or a chew of tobacco in his box. The gentleman stated his object, when the fellow replied, "Don't want any such job, but perhaps you can find some man who is hard up who'll take it."

—Deacon Brown called on Deacon Short in the latter's absence and saluted the brother's wife with a kiss—in fact, with numerous fervent kisses. Called upon to explain, he said it was done in play merely; he had been full of such pranks from boyhood; whereupon the offended brother thrashed him and threw him down stairs with the remark that he had been full of such pranks from boyhood.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE ALLEY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

The Great South American Blood Purifier.
JURUBEBA
IS THE MOST POWERFUL CLEANSER, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Medical Science.
IT IS SPECIALLY ADAPTED to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, &c., &c.
WHEN WEARY AND LANGUID from overwork and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, the system needs a TONIC to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.
IN THE HEAT OF SUMMER, frequently the LIVER and SPLEEN do not properly perform their functions; the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to bilious derangement.
Dr. WELLS'
EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA
is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties. It will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthen the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED and ENFEEBLED Organs.
IT SHOULD BE FREELY TAKEN, as Jurubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEODRTRANT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

Daily Chronicle.

Boston's Wealth.

The assessors of Boston have completed their work, and the papers of that city say that the valuation, as reported by them, is a very gratifying exhibit, considering the vast loss to which the city was subjected last November. The net increase in valuation of real estate amounts to $26,802,750; this is actually more than two-thirds the total increase in the valuation of real estate in New York, which was $32,544,715. The net loss on personal estate was $8,671,300.

On the whole valuation, deducting the loss of over eight millions on personal estate, Boston has gained about eighteen millions. "The most striking feature of the valuation," says the Advertiser, "is the enormous loss in personal property in the fifth ward, combined with the very slight decline in the value of real estate. The increased worth of the land, and the partial rebuilding in better style than before, explain the latter circumstances, while the former is easily understood when it is remembered that only a few of the warehouses in the burned-over district have been occupied. It is, of course, not possible to discover how far the decline, or the diminished rate of increase, in other parts of the city than ward five should be attributed to the fire. Undoubtedly that catastrophe retarded building in the annexed districts, Roxbury and Dorchester last year added more than eighteen and a half millions to the real estate valuation of Boston—more than one-third of the whole gain. This year their contribution is but eight millions out of twenty-seven. Probably more of this loss is due to the fire, and the rest to the subsidence of the speculative fever that led many to build beyond the requirements for residences. The check in the annexed district, and the direct loss in ward five, account for almost fifteen of the twenty-one millions difference between the gain in 1872 and that of 1873 in real estate, and we shall not be out of the way in crediting most of the decline in the rate of progress to the fire. The only considerable loss in personal property outside of the district burned over is in ward six, and this is fully explained by the transmutation of money, stocks and similar property owned by residents of the west end into stone, mortar and iron for rebuilding."

About Alligators.

The Galveston Civilian says all of our alligators, as well as the crocodiles of the tropics, are oviparious. They are gregarious in their habits, although they do not seem to seem to act in concert in obtaining their prey. During the winter season the alligators remain in a state of torpor, buried generally in the mud of the marshes and bayous. The first warm weather restores their suspending vitality, and a few may be seen sunning themselves on logs and other floating debris.

They fish principally during the night, and lie in the sunshine half asleep on the surface of the water during the day. A splash in the water, or any slight noise in fact, will instantly arouse their attention, and as their curiosity is great, they will slowly swim here and there to ascertain the cause of the disturbance.

The whine of a puppy seems to excite them more than aught else; why, I cannot tell, for it is equally efficacious where dogs have never previously been, and where it were impossible to suppose the alligators had ever heard them. The resemblance to the noise or bark of their young has been said to be the cause; but such reasoning is fallacious, as at seasons when their young no longer bark they are equally attracted by a whine. Their ferocity and other dangerous qualities have been very greatly overrated and exaggerated. That they are extremely voracious is unquestionable; but they generally confine their ravages to fish and other small prey. The harrowing tales of families being devoured by them are the "veriest coinage of the brain," and have in reality no existence whatsoever.

Taking Down The Chivalry.

An Atchison, Kan., paper relates the story of a hulking, six-foot customer, who a few days ago, appeared on the street in that city, causing the timid to tremble, and the Union-loving to quake by reason of loud mouthings on his part in relation to the war. He was with Stonewall Jackson; had faced the cannon's mouth, and with his good right hand had used his sabre and mowed down the Yankees, as the farmer does the grass. He had killed something less than a thousand niggers, and wasn't through yet. No, Sir, he was "an old-fashioned Democrat," and expected to live long enough to plant many a "Yank" yet. He became quite enthusiastic on the subject, and would have been blowing to this moment probably had not a slender-built man, who once wore the blue, come up at the time. The "nigger" slayer addressed his conversation to him, and there is where he lost himself, for the ex-Union soldier turned and ordered him to instantly clear out. This he refused to do, whereupon the Star Spangled Banner advocate got hold of the star and bar fellow by the collar, and immediately began using his foot, the toe of which seriously disarranged the other's coat-tail. A noise followed each application of leather, that sounded like the coming together of two infuriated rams. The Yankee-killer remarked at every kick, "All right, sir, all right; just let go of me and I'll go." He went.

Erastus Kneeland of Rowley was run over while intoxicated, Saturday, by an Eastern Railroad train, and killed, at Newburyport.

It is feared that an epidemic of cerebro-spinal meningitis has begun among the horses in New York. The disease begins with pain and great weakness across the back, in the region of the kidneys. The hind legs become powerless and the animal is unable to rise. Delirium and death quickly follow.

The election of delegates to the Massachusetts republican State convention thus far shows great gains for Butler over the vote of 1871. In Boston, Friday, sixty Butler and twenty-six anti-Butler delegates were chosen; against forty-two Butler and fifty-four anti-Butler delegates in 1871. One ward is yet to choose delegates. Lynn and Lowell have chosen unanimous delegations for Butler, and Newburyport nine for Butler and three opposed.

The heavy storm in Nova Scotia has resulted in disaster to hundreds of vessels. Many lives were lost.

M. T. Rodman, deputy treasurer of Brooklyn, is a defaulter in the sum of $200,000.

The liberal republicans are spoken of by the Nation, as "a curious instance of a party living everywhere throughout the country on the strength they are supposed to have somewhere else."

A little terrier, owned near Newburyport, Mass., lately gave chase to a white cat, which, "when taken" was "well shaken," as the labels on medicine bottles say. The dog's master, who prized pussy very highly, gave him a sound thrashing which he has remembered so far as never to chase a white cat, though every feline specimen of any other color he considers lawful game, and chases them accordingly.

An interesting discovery was recently accidentally made by an officer of the San Francisco City prison. He was engaged in repairing a cell, and had occasion to take up some of the flooring. Under the boards he found a tobacco-pipe with a cherry stem, which he laid aside for future use. Subsequently he attempted to smoke it, and finding that it would not draw, sawed off a short piece of the stem, when he found in it four very small saws lying side by side in the stem. Some prisoners who had once occupied that cell, left or secreted the pipe there with its kit of tools. Doubtless he was an old convict, and had taken this novel method of concealing those saws, designed, no doubt, to cut his way out of prison.

The confession by Irving of his complicity in the murder of Mr. Nathan in New York is discredited at New York, and several of his statements are squarely contradicted. He is known to the New York police as an experienced burglar.

Five emigrants were killed and ten wounded by a collision on the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad near Mule, Mich., Thursday night.

Judge Mears of Arkansas was assassinated by some unknown person at Clarksville, Wednesday.

Five sailors at Petersburg, Va., report that they are survivors of the steamship Lucy, and that the vessel was burned at sea on the 15th inst.

A despatch from Liverpool announces the loss of the British ship Telemon, and that a portion of her crew were drowned.

The Belfast papers figure up the loss at the recent fire in that city to be $500,000 with an insurance of $131,500.

Alexander St. Clair-Abrams, of the Atlanta Herald, is a very small man apparently, but it has been recently discovered about the capital that there is a good deal of him about in spots. He is the hardest worker in the profession. When he started his paper he lacked two dollars and a half of having a cent, and now he has got to be woodpasser on a special mail train. He speaks French without any effort, and was in some way mixed up with the Franco-Prussian war. He has energy and pluck enough for a whole family, and always sleeps with one eye open. Although often approached on the subject he utterly refuses to divulge why he punctuates his name with a hyphen.

In a contested probate case in Illinois, a judge has decided that a marriage or contract of that nature, between a man and woman, made in the presence of witnesses, is binding and entitles the woman to the estates under the statute. It is called a "common law marriage."

Professor Daniels, of Vermont, made a bet that he could look a ferocious bovine out of countenance, and competent judges estimate that the Professor was thrown up twenty-seven feet.

There is a mule owned by sharpers travelling through Illinois that can trot a mile in 2.28. Five minutes is considered good time for this species of quadruped.

Nellie Smith of Cincinnati, aged seven, being unable to live happily at home, jumped into a canal. She was rescued and returned to her misery.

A three-pound fish paid a delicate compliment to a Washington young lady, last week, by jumping out of the waters of the Potomac into her lap.

The rural editor of a Western paper has discovered an insect that will destroy the potato-bug. The new bug bores into the potato and strategically lays in wait for the other bug. The discoverer's attention has been directed to this, as the potato still suffers, but he has yet made no response. He is supposed to be chasing after another bug that will destroy the bug that destroys the potato bug.

State News.

The Concord People expresses the opinion that Ex-Gov. Stearns desires to be chosen U. S. Senator. Who has a better right to be a candidate then he?

On the 21st, a party of three went out fishing from Hampton Beach in a sail boat. On returning to shore their boat struck a rock, which caused it to capsize. The party swam ashore, about fifty rods distant.

Nashua is surveying its local water works with a view to a purchase by the city of a municipal water supply system.

Henderson's auction sale of damaged dry goods continues to-day.

Mr. James O. Adams, secretary of the State board of agriculture and recently agricultural editor of the Mirror, has become associated in the editorship of the Anvil, the Dartmouth College paper, which is to be enlarged and specially devoted to the agricultural interests of northern New Hampshire and Vermont.

An interesting case was on trial at Manchester, on Thursday, before Judge of Probate Cate. Samuel Jones of New Boston disappeared mysteriously in August, 1871. His remains were found in Wentworth, in September, 1872. His son, Albert Jones, died in December, 1871. If the father died first, the property would go to William K. Campbell, a half-brother to Albert, but if Albert died first, then to the blood relations of the father. Judge Cate has decided that the heirs of Albert are entitled to the property.

The Epping Railroad.

[Cor. Amesbury Journal.]

In your paper of the 24, it was suggested that some other than the Salisbury & Epping road might be opened to connect the sea-board at this point with the interior. No other has so many advantages for Newburyport and Salisbury; and the benefits are so obvious and decided that the whole community should rise at once to demand that the way be opened and the rails laid by the coming spring, when the grand route from Portland to New York, via Rochester, Epping, Nashua and Worcester, will be completed. There is no reason why, if it can be leased to the Eastern or the Concord, at a fair rate of interest, individuals should not come forward with their loans, when it is to accommodate them, increase their business, and advance the value of their real estate. We have seen the effects of railroads on Salem, Newburyport and Portsmouth, which without them would have been deserted long ago. Not one of the roads which have proved arteries of life to them, was projected and built without the usual cry of the croakers—"it won't pay." But every one of them does pay; and when they are in operation our only wonder is, that they were so long delayed—that everybody did not see and know they would pay. Thus for twenty years the city railroad was kept back, which Newburyport would not to-day part with, if its cost was doubled; and which the Eastern railroad would not part with, for twice what it gives for it. So the horse railroad was delayed, and people were so frightened lest they should lose, that not a single dollar of stock was taken from Fowler's store in Belleville to Mr. Steere's residence at the Mills, except by Capt. Kingsbury and his son at the Point, but to-day there are not cars enough to carry the passengers. Newburyport would double her $25,000 to the enterprise rather than give it up, and Mr. Northend would not sell his lease for $10,000. It is so with all railroads; one can't be built where it will not pay, since it will create business along its line as fast as the rails are put down. The Epping road would be no exception to this rule. The route is through a fine country, full of thrifty towns, abounding in rich farms, and having water power and connection with other roads, which would give all the business it could do from the start.

This region—the valley of the Merrimac—is the great centre of manufacturing industry. It is to-day ahead of any other section, and it will keep so. It is destined to be covered all over with factories, work shops, and people—live people moving like the wind. The coal companies of Pennsylvania see this and hence their expenditures of money at Salem, Newburyport and Portsmouth. The first and last named of these places have opened railroads to Lawrence, Lowell, Nashua, Manchester and Concord; but Newburyport, which is the nearest port to the manufacturing cities, and is the best place for the coal business, has no good connections. The first want of the city and of these coal companies is this Epping railroad. Salisbury, Amesbury, South Hampton, Kensington, Exeter and Epping need it as much; and so do the towns off the line, within ten miles of it, on either side.

Many people regard this road, if built, as as "out-go" of so much money—for the interest of which they are to be taxed forever. This is a mistake; it is a simple investment that will pay 50 per cent. to the community annually for the next twenty years. It will cost $400,000. The whole sum might be assessed on the towns through which it is to pass, in two years, and their increased valuation from its existence would more than cover the assessment. It would give value to every building, every rod of land, every stone wall, every animal, and every tree within sight and sound of it, the very hour the first train passed over the rails. It would be no sinking of money; it would be the creation of wealth; and when the trains had run six months it would be the surprise of everybody that they had not run six years before.

We must not let this question sleep. If the directors are sleepy we must goad them to action; and if other parties are not wide awake, let their directors ring their bells and sound steam whistles in their cars, till the whole community, if they were in their very graves, would turn out to this work.

Salem has five brass bands.

Commodore Fairfax Rises to Explain.

The New York Herald publishes the following:

The Herald of the 19th inst. contains a "synopsis of the Navy Register for July, 1873," wherein the Washington correspondent states that "I declined to appear before the Examining Board," and, therefore, "am ineligible for promotion," and "it is presumed I will continue to be borne on the register as senior captain until, by reason of age or length of service, I can be retired." In naval circles this needs no comment, but among my friends and acquaintances in the army and in civil life the question would naturally arise, why should I make this selection when by an examination I would have all the advantages accruing from promotion? As it is susceptible of an unfavorable interpretation, you will oblige me by publishing in your widely circulated paper a brief statement of the facts. In the regular order of promotion I was entitled to the vacancy created the 28th of December last, and, in compliance with an order from the Navy Department to report to the President of the Examining Board, I duly appeared, and after a "physical" examination, waved the "right to be present," referring the Board to my record of thirty-six years on file in the Navy Department, and withdrew. I am sustained in my course by the decision of the Secretary of the Navy under whose supervision the laws were framed and enforced for nearly seven years; by the practice of the several boards up to a very date and by the opinions of several of the most prominent legal men. It was not until January 24, 1869, and just before the former Secretary retired from office, that any regular examinations were practised, even among the junior officers of the "line." At that time a circular was issued requiring all "line" officers ordered before the Board to be "professionally" examined, but the very Board to whom it was first addressed understood it to apply to junior officers, whose "professional standing" had not been as yet satisfactorily established, as is shown by their "recommending" the senior officers simply on their "records." Under the act of July 16, 1862, first establishing examining boards, a large number of the "line" officers were promoted by a "careful scrutinizing" of their records. So again on July 25, 1866. The amendatory act of April 21, 1864, requires no more of the Board than to "satisfy themselves" of the fitness of "the officer to be acted upon," and who "has the right to be present if he desires it" (section 3.) The first section of this act, instructing the Board in its duties to the "line" officer, refers to the "staff" in these words, "And all other officers." Now, it is well known that "professional" examinations in this corps cease with the assimilated rank of lieutenant commander. On July 15, 1870, (cf. sec. 8 Naval Appropriation bill,) boards were more directly empowered to examine all the "line" officers junior to commanders; then for the first time a system of regular "professional" examinations was commenced with the junior grades. None of these very officers who advocate the examining of captains and commanders were "professionally" examined! The Board that I appeared before (the President, however, being absent on account of sickness) recommended two captains for promotion only a short time before on their "records." A "careful scrutinizing" of an officer's record is the best test of his fitness, and where the Board are in doubt as to "moral and mental" attainments, the act of April 21, 1864, (cf. sec. 1,) gives them the power to summon "witnesses" with whom the officer has served. "Professional" examinations are not practised on senior officers in our army. It would be laughed at in the British Navy. After contesting the point till I found two of my juniors confirmed by the Senate, and seeing no prospect of promotion under the present Secretary, I availed of his offer to "refer my case to the Board," and for the second time went before it, and was examined on some rudimentary points, international law and steam tactics, occupying possibly ten minutes, when I was recommended for promotion—all of which is offensive to men of my time of life in any profession, civil or military. Very respectfully,

D. McN. Fairfax, Commo', U. S. N.

The Coal Burning Engine.

By the introduction of anthracite coal burning engines on the Eastern railroad, passengers are free from annoyance by smoke or cinders and a rate of speed is secured before unattainable. The following is a description of one of these engines:—

The engines are of peculiar design, having a "cab" nearly as high as a Pullman car, and a boiler eight feet longer than in the usual pattern, extending back to the rear of the frame, so that the fireman's post is in the tender. On top of the boiler, in the two story cab, is provided a seat on either side, one for the engineer and the other for the fireman when he is not otherwise engaged. The engineer's seat is on the right hand side above the running board, where he is entirely surrounded by glass, and is completely protected from the weather. At his side are all the various appliances for controlling the machinery. This enables him to manage any and all portions of his engine with hardly a motion of his body, while, being at so great an elevation, he has a largely extended view of the road ahead. All the machinery of the engine is of highly polished steel and iron, the finish being fully equal to the best stationary engine work. The boiler is jacketed in Russia iron with brass straps. The fire-box is eight feet long, fitted with water-grates and a peculiar dumping attachment. It has a grate surface of twenty-five square feet, against fifteen feet in the other engines. The drivers are five feet in diameter and the cylinders are seventeen inches in diameter, with twenty-four inches stroke. The machines each weigh thirty-five tons. The tenders are nineteen feet long.

A Baltimore physician, Dr. Showalter, killed his wife and himself, Thursday.

Colfax as a Gambler.

[Minneapolis Tribune.]

Hon. Schuyler Colfax tells a pretty good story in conversation, illustrative of the almost irresistible tendency of people to lie about him. We shall repeat it in print at the risk of displeasing him:—

"When I went to California on the cars," he says, "we found the long stretches on the plains rather tedious sometimes. One day we went forward into the baggage car and found a sharper playing a game that they called three-card-monte—his stool pigeons winning their hundreds, and strangers taking stock and becoming victims in similar amounts. I looked on at the queer spectacle for a few minutes, when we returned to our car.

A little while after I arrived in San Francisco, an old friend made his appearance who had started from home a fortnight later.

'Did you really win that money?' he asked.

'What money?' said I.

'On the cars,' said he; 'monte, you know.'

'I don't understand a word you are saying,' I protested; 'what do you mean?'

'Why, out on the Central Pacific, you know; didn't you play when you came over?'

'No, indeed, I didn't; never played a game in my life, and never saw it played before.'

My friend indulged in an uproarious guffaw, and after recovering his breath he explained:—

'Colfax—There's another of 'em! I came along Thursday, and strolling into the baggage car, I found a glib fellow playing three-card monte. He made quite a little speech in the intervals of play:—'Gentlemen!' said he, 'the chances is all in your favor! Everybody plays that comes along this yere road. Colfax—the vice president of the United States, gentlemen—cleaned me out the other day. Said he, 'What's that?' 'Monte,' says I, and I showed him.

'I'll bet $100 that's the dence of spades!' says he. 'I kivered the bills. Sure enough it was. He scooped me. 'A hundred that's the knave of clubs.' He took the pile, gentlemen. 'I s'pose that 'stinguished man would a'gone on all night. He wanted to bet more. But I couldn't afford it and backed out. He was too rapid for me. Then he took that $300, gentlemen, and he guv it to a poor widder with four children as was goin' home with the corpse of her dead husband. He made her heart leap for joy. Now, gentlemen, you kin lay down your stamps, and you can pick 'em up and mine on top on 'em, and you kin make a poor widder's heart leap for joy, or put it in your pocket—jest as you please!'

"And that," says Mr. Colfax, in conversation, "is just as true as the stories that are being told about my connection with Credit Mobilier and 'contracts.'"

The farm house of Mr. Eli Hamblett in Hudson was entered on Thursday night by burglars and robbed of $40 and other property. The thieves deliberately whittled a stick and fastened Mr. and Mrs. Hamblett into their bed-room by placing it over the door latch.

—"Hello, Bill?" cried a boot-black to a companion recently, "heard yer old dad had broke his leg." "He did that;" replied the "shiner" addressed, "and wasn't it bully for me, though? He was going to wallop me that very night."

Business Notices.

Blessed are they who seek relief from "Liver Complaint," "Billiousness," Bad Blood, Pimples, Blotches, Eruptions, Rough Skin, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, and Scrofulous diseases, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext. or Golden Medical Discovery, for they shall be happy in knowing that the cure is complete. Sold by Druggists. 604

Adopt the Preventive Policy.

Severe spells of billiousness, indigestion, chills and fever, diarrhœa, nervous headache and physical exhaustion are quite usual at this season. These are visitations which everybody is anxious to avoid, and as a course of Hostetter's Bitters will unquestionably fortify the system against them, the most valuable medical advice which can be offered at this time to persons subject to such complaints, or at all sensitive to atmospheric changes, is to commence taking this powerful vegetable alterative and invigorant without delay. Forty-eight hours will not have elapsed after the first dose before a marked change will have manifested itself in the condition of the system. The ultimate result will be a habit of body so regular, a general condition so vigorous, that however unhealthy the season may chance to be, the system thus refreshed and reinforced will be in the best possible trim to encounter it.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who do not suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. Rose & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH STARBRIDGE COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent its attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during each year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

For the first offence a fine of $10, and $20 for the second and every subsequent offence.

The Kearsarge Trip.

Kearsarge S. F. E. No. 3, Capt. Ira C. Seymour, 24 members, accompanied by the U. S. Naval Band, his Honor Mayor Marvin, the Committee on Fire Dept. of the City Councils, Chief Engineer Marston, Asst. Engineer James A. Waterhouse, Clerk of the Dept. Willis L. Hidden, and honorary members of the company, left Portsmouth in the 3 P. M. train for Biddeford arrived there at about 5 P. M., Thursday. The "Sarges" were met at the depot by Eben Simpson S. F. E. Co. No. 2 (of which the "Sarges" were to be the guest), Richard Vines S. F. E. Co. No. 1, Chief Engineer Moses Harriman and Asst. Engineer William Boston, and the French Cornet Band of Biddeford. The "Sarges" were escorted to Conqueror H. & L. Co. No. 1 house, Capt. George Emery, where the inner man was supplied with lemonade. The line of march was taken up after cheering by all companies, who marched through some of the principal streets to the Eben Simpson engine house, where lemonade and cider was served on all parties. After cheering the procession marched to Saco, and were saluted by Gen. Fairfield S. F. E. Co.

After marching through the principal streets, they marched to the Biddeford House, where the gentlemanly proprietor did all in his power to make the "Sarges" at home. At the supper, Hon. T. H. Hubbard, President of the Aldermen, (the Mayor being out of the city) was introduced by Capt. Pike, and welcomed the Kearsarge company to the city of Biddeford. He was followed by Mayor Marvin, Councilman Simpson, Chief Engineer Marston, and Chief Engineer Moses Redman of Biddeford. After the speeches, Harlow's Band did their best with some very fine music. In the evening a complimentary ball was given in honor of the Kearsarges in the City Hall, which was kept up until daylight. On the second day, the companies took a steamer and went to Hill's Beach, about five miles from Biddeford, where the boys enjoyed themselves by dancing and numerous games, until dinner time, when they were furnished with clam and fish chowder, made in the best of style. At 4.30, everybody started for home from the beach; the Kearsarge boys were escorted to the depot, feeling sorry that they were obliged to give up such a splendid time. After cheering time and time again and music by the band, the "Sarges" left for home, feeling under great obligations to the Biddeford firemen for the manner in which they were received, and fearing that they could never repay them for their kindness; but are in hope of having a chance to try, one of those days.

P. & D. Railroad.

The bridge over the Piscataqua, between Dover Point and Newington, on the Portsmouth and Dover Railroad, is completed, with the exception of about 400 feet. For this space piles are being received from different points and are to be driven, leaving about 180 feet to be crossed by a truss span. The piling of the bridge is of the most substantial character, the piles being stayed by rock taken from a ledge on Coleman's point. The carriage way, twenty feet wide, will afford an avenue for travel long desired in this region. The Point cottage hotel, recently purchased by Mr. Parker Spinney of Ipswich, is to have extensive additions the coming winter, and is to be refurnished throughout. The hotel is within fifty feet of the station of the railroad. Dover Point has always been celebrated for its clambakes, and is one of the most pleasant places for summer recreation in New Hampshire. The location of the railroad has already given an upward movement in real estate at this spot. The rails for the road above Dover Point are shipped from South Boston by vessel and landed at the point, where the work of laying will begin. The rails from Portsmouth to the end of the bridge in Newington are nearly laid, and gravel trains will commence running next week. The gravel for this part of the road is brought from Kittery.

The Freight Accident.

On Friday, the six o'clock morning freight left Portsmouth drawn by the locomotive Portsmouth, and having Stephen Jones as conductor. The noon freight left Conway in time with engine No. 65, and Charles Horne as conductor. A few minutes before two o'clock, when about a mile west of Ossipee Centre, the two trains came together round the curve with great force, one being on the down grade, not however before the engines were reversed, the danger signals given, and both engineers and firemen of the trains had leaped for their lives. The engines struck squarely and seemed to rear up like horses, then slowly fell over on their side. Of the cars following on the Portsmouth train three were smashed to pieces, save one or two long planks which struck perpendicularly. Two cars following the engine on the Conway train were more or less broken, one being completely demolished. The engines were utterly wrecked. Charles Horne, the conductor on the Conway train, had one of his legs fractured below the knee, and was otherwise bruised. He was conveyed to Salmon Falls. The other train hands were more or less bruised. The conductor of the Portsmouth train states that he was running on time, while Mr. Horne states that he was running by telegraph. An investigation will at once be made. The Conway passenger trains on arriving changed passengers and proceeded back.

Laconics.

Excursion tickets to North Conway and return are selling at the depot for $3.25, tickets good to go and return from Sept. 1 to Nov. 1.

Mr. Daniel Chase of Somerville is to have a hotel built at Newcastle in season for business next year. Mr. Chas. E. Campbell, one of Newcastle's live young men, is to be associated in its management.

The Exeter News Letter endorses our correspondent's protest against tolling bells for funerals. The sentiment is all one way. Why will not our Board of Mayor and Aldermen prohibit bell-tolling, by ordinance?

The only four brothers belonging to the Mechanic Association of this city, are Messrs. James, Frank W., Israel P. and John H. Miller. There are also four Messrs. Moses and four Messrs. Vaughan, but they are not brothers.

At a meeting of the School committee, Friday evening, it was unanimously voted to secure the services of Miss Jennie M. Franklin of the Salem Conservatory of Music as teacher of vocal music in the public schools. Miss Franklin is also engaged as soprano in the Middle street Baptist choir, and comes with high commendations from the Conservatory at Salem, where she has been very successful as a teacher. Miss Franklin will render valuable assistance in the new Conservatory about to be established here. The action of the School committee is especially commendable. The benefits of this new feature in every day school education will be felt in social circles in a reawakening of the interest in music. It is Miss Franklin's intention to give an exhibition early in January for the purpose of showing the progress made under her method of teaching.

IMPORTANT TO EVERY BUSINESS MAN.

THE conflagrations in Portland, Chicago and Boston have demonstrated beyond a doubt the advantage of LINEN over leather in the manufacture of Banker's Cases, Bill Books, &c., for valuable papers placed in Safes as LINEN BILL BOOKS, (being non-conductors of heat,) will afford a protection to Bonds, Notes, &c. when exposed to a heat which burns Blank Books.

The Latest Hero.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

With no ordinary pleasure do we write the name of Mr. Clemm, a farmer of Menifee county, who, when his house was attacked by a gang of Ku-Klux one night recently, with the pluck of a true Kentucky hunter, raised his trusty rifle and shot down one of the assailants named Jack McLean. The remainder of the party fled as precipitately as a flock of sheep ever fled from the approach of a lion. They did not stop long enough to carry off their wounded companion, but left poor Jack McLean to drag himself away to a dirty ditch a few hundred yards from the house and die "like a poisoned rat in his hole." And there this specimen of Ku Klux valor and midnight chivalry was found lying the next morning by the neighbors in all the glory of his coal tar and calico mask, the appropriate insignia of the devil's own body-guard. As there were none of Jack's military force to inter him with military honors, the indignant citizens concluded that the best way to dispose of the valiant masker would be to bury him on the spot, with his coal tar calico around him.

We know nothing whatever of Mr. Clemm's antecedents or history. He may be as poor as Job's turkey or as rich as the man who owned ticket 20,893 in the last Public Library of Kentucky drawing; he may be a Bourbon democrat, a Liberal or Radical, a Heathen Chinee or a pious Christian; but whatever he may be he has deserved well of the country and merits the thanks of society. Daniel Boone never fired his rifle to better purpose at a wild beast or an Indian savage. Let a similar reception be extended to these midnight robbers, murderers, and house burners whenever they show themselves. A well-aimed bullet is a better argument with such desperadoes than a trial in court, and unless we mistake the temper of the people they will determine to follow the example set by the Menifee farmer throughout the State.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic,

CURING

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their perfections abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skilful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of a tonic, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM
OF
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR
CONSUMPTION!
And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all
LUNG COMPLAINTS.
This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.
CONSUMPTION
CURED
By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.
Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry
Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,
And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.
BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SARM W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

The Great South American Blood Purifier.
JURUBEBA
IS THE MOST POWERFUL, CLEANSER, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Medical Science.
IT IS SPECIALLY ADAPTED to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, &c., &c.
WHEN WEARY AND LANGUID from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take the place of energy and vigor, the system needs a TONIC to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.
IN THE HEAT OF SUMMER, frequently the LIVER and SPLEEN do not properly perform their functions; the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to bilious derangement.
DR. WELLS'
EXTRACT OF JURUBEBA
is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties; it will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthen the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED and ENFEEBLED Organs.
IT SHOULD BE FREELY TAKEN, as Jurubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

BEET STASHEN,
(wich is in the State of Illinoy),
Aug. 16, 1873.

I hev left the Corners, temporarily, at least, for I hev a field uv labor here, wich is quite ez pleasant ez that in my old home. I am up here in the anti-monopoly business. I am in Illinoy, groanin over the burdens piled upon us farmers, and damin, with all the vehemence that's into me, the monopolies that is suckin the life-blood out uv the honest laborin classes, and tryin to convince em that their redempshun kin only be brot about by abandonin to wunst the infamus Republikan party, wich is responsible for every evil that's onto the country, from railroads down to the potato bug.

We hev at the Stashen a noble coterie uv sympathisers with the hard-fisted yomanry—a most gorgeously sympathisin set ez ever I see, and so afflicted are we at the troubles wich the perdoosers are laborin under, that we hold meetius perpetooly in the room back uv the bar uv the Jackson Hotel, to consider em.

The leedin sperit among us, aside from me, is a veteran sympathiser with labor, wich his name is Pettus. Abslum Pettus wus originally a shoemaker, but early in life developed a talent for holdin offis. He wuz elected Sheriff uv the county, and the bench wich knowed him wunst, immejitly knowed him no more forever. There wuz some difficulty about some collekshuns wich he made, wich wuz esteemed of sufficient importance to pervent his bein renominated, and like Nebuchadnezzar, he wuz turned out to the thin grass uv privit life for years, wich time he spent prinsipally ornamentin corner groceries, and aboosin society, wich didn't recognize him, earnin a livin' by collecting the bills for his wife's dress maskin establishment, to wich, when biznis wuz dull, he added a laundry. President Linkin wuz indoost by the citizens uv the Station, to appoint him Collector, the sed citizens vainly imaginin that of he hed a good fat thing, he mite possibly pay his debts. Ez everybody he owed signed his applicashun for the appointment, he hed the longest list uv names that ever went out uv that village. He continyood in offis doorin Johnson's administrashen, hevin come to the conclooshen that Johnson's policy was correct, jest after that grate man notified him that he should chop off the head uv any offishul that didn't. But Grant busted him; sence wich time he hes bin a consistent Democrat and lover uv the labrin classes. He hez seen close times sence—often hez he bin without the nessaries uv life, for his wife is gettin advanced in years, and can't wash and sew every day. Mr. Pettus goes into the movement agin oppressive monopolies and sich, with all his heart, sole, body and strength. He bleeves in the nobility uv labor—he holds that labor hez not its proper reward, and ez for his part he will now enter into a croosade agin the bloated monopolists, and in behalf of the horny-handled agricultoorists of the country, with all the zeal of his trooly fervid nacher. One uv the most techin sites in nacher is to see Pettus a leanin on a bar and discoursin on the grandjer uv labor. He sez that if the farmers, the hard-handled laborin masses uv his county, wants a candidate for Auditor who loathes and hates the oppreshun uv labor, in watever form it may come, he is their man.

Mr. Samuel Blather is another one uv the hard-handed who is with us. He is a Democrat in politics, and alluz hez bin. He hez diskivered that the farmers are groanin under a despotism. He don't own no farm hissef, nor he don't buy nor sell any perdooce, nor anything else, nor hez he any pertikeler biznss, but he feels there is an incubus which ways onto the laborin man, and, for one, he feels like puttin his shoulder to the wheel and histin it. He expecks to be the Democrat candidate for County Recorder, and if the farmers know their friends—of they only kin be brought to recognize them whose harts beet responsive to therin, and put him on their ticket, he hez a soft thing uv it. He kin truly say that he never hald under a tree, seein the hard-handed victim uv monopoly a sweatin under his ill-requited toil, without feelin for him, and his buzzum heeves ez he thinks uv the opportunity he hez now to champion that class. He sez he is the best man for Recorder in the county.

Mr. Cephas Billings holds that the only refuge the farmers hev is in the buzzum uv the democratic party—that's where they want to go. He feels in his sole that they are opprest. He aint jest shoor ez he knows wat ther wrongs is, but he persoomed it hed suthin to do with monopolies or suthin uv that sort, but whatever it wus, he stands ready to denounce it. Let us, he sed, organize a grange, to wunst, and when it comes to the clecshun, let us see of the bloated Republikin party shuld longer ride on the backs uv onhest workennen—the hard-handed agricultoorists.

Last weak we held a meetin in the back room, and resolved ourselves into a grange with Pettus, Blather, Billins, and myself ez principle offisers. Hevin just got the organizashen all safe, and in proper hands, we isshued an adress to the farmers uv the country to cum in and jine. I urged em to let the farmers organize it, but my co-laborers declined. They sed they preferred to make certain that the orgunizashun shood be in the hands uv the troo friends uv the labrin classes. They didn't care to take eny chances.

We hev assoomed a costoom in accordance with our new agricultooral deparcher. We hev heavy stogy boots, bloo over-hauls tucked in em, hickory shirts, and broad-brimmed clip-hats. We each uv us carry a black snake whip, insted uv a cane, and sprinkle hayseed in our hair every morning. Blather is so enthoosiastic that he dabbs clay on his boot every mornin, and Billins took a wet-stun and rubbed the inside uv his hands industriously to get up a satisfactory callus. We address each other ez Farmer Billins, Farmer Blather, Farmer Pettus, and Farmer Nasby, and our conversashun is principally about agricultooral matters. The other cusses her more zeel however, than discreedshun in this direcshun. Billins wuz out in the country with us, and looking wise as he passed a field of wheat, said that them wuz the best looking winter oats he had ever seen and he wondered whether the farmers of that section planted corn yet in October. He hed found it better to subsoil in September, so as to give it a good start to prevent winter-killin.

I wooden't hev bed an actooal farmer heard this idiocy for a small postoffis. And I hev other troubles with 'em. Pettus wuz again out to address a grange in cow-hide boots, check shirt and overhauls, ez a simple, plain farmer, an unostentashus son uv the soil—with a diamond ring on his little finger. I hev to watch him and make him take it off and put it in his vest pocket afore he begins to speak.

But while this advencher has its drawbax, it is ez pleasent ez enything I hev had. Drinks furnished gratuitous by the Democratic Central Committee, and board likewise; for ez we hev only a republican majority uv two hundred to overcome in the county, they think the chances warrant some expenditoor. I shel stay here and run this campane, in the interest of labor.

A Boy Murder in North Carolina.

A rather remarkable murder was recently committed at Wilmington, N. C., by three boys, who, it is alleged, killed a little fellow named Willie Carter, at the instigation of his step-mother, and in consideration of $10 by her paid. They enticed him to go bathing with them in a secluded place, on reaching which the following scene took place, as narrated in the confession of one of the boys: Willie Carter and one of the boys stripped off, and plunged into the water. Jimmie threw Willie's hat into the water, which he (Willie) swam after and secured. They next threw his clothes in, which he also swam after, and in attempting to get to shore was jumped on, and repeatedly shoved under until he was nearly drowned, and when he reached the shore was pulled on the bank by me. Willie spread his clothes in the sun, and while waiting for them to dry, Jimmy Anderson, with knife in hand, made an assault upon Willie and attempted to cut him. Willie resisted, and finally threw the boys off, remarking as he did so that he didn't like such fun. In a few moments thereafter one of them struck him with a club in the forehead, which stunned him, and he staggered toward the bank of the creek, and Jimmy and Willie shoved him in the water. They then tied the legs of his pantaloons, which they filled with rocks and threw over his neck. The boys then sat on the bank of the creek (with the exception of David, who lay on the hill out of sight) and watched the boy fifteen minutes, until the last bubbles were seen to rise. The body was then pulled up to the bank, and the left leg wrapped around a sapling. While in this position they cut off a small portion of the body, which one of them wrapped up and placed in his pocket, remarking that he promised to carry that to Mrs. Carter, to show her that they had killed Willie and for which she was to pay them $10; and they shoved the body out into the water, one of them wading out several yards with it.

Sketches of the Growth of Journalism.

(Howell's Newspaper Reporter.)

The NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, an important paper, was published in Portsmouth as early as the year 1756. It has the honor of being the oldest paper now published in the United States, and is still issued in Portsmouth, the city of its birth. It was a thorough "liberty" paper, and was celebrated in home politics for its strong and unvaried democratic principles. It became democratic in 1802, having been before that time a Federal paper. It has been conducted at various epochs by men of considerable editorial talent, and often made an excitement in Portsmouth political circles. Thomas B. Laighton, whose name appears on the paper in 1835, was a man of ability, and his writings in the old journal may be read to-day with interest. [Mrs. Celia Thaxter, the popular writer, is his only daughter.] In those days the reports of political newspapers took the matter in hand themselves. The proceedings were not merely catalogued, mechanically, by a reporter, as is to-day too much the practice; they were noted "with comments by the editor," and the comments were almost always the liveliest part of the matter. There was some art in it, for in this way the guns of the enemy were often spiked and their meetings turned to their own disadvantage.

In those early days of political papers, every possible advantage and a talent for making good-natured personalities, and quiet, cool, temperate sarcasm were weapons not to be despised. There was a graphic quality in their description, a virile force in their logic, and a masculine grace and strength in the blows they gave, that much as we may prefer the journalism of to-day, we cannot look back upon without respectful admiration.

It is human nature to admire that quality in a newspaper article which brings us near to the writer and causes us to feel something of his personality or magnetism. Purely impersonal journalism is too much like the mere oracle, the speech-gifted lay-figure, and carries too much of the quality which causes our admiration, and gains its strength, not from inherent good quality, but because it is a power behind the throne.

A single instance may be given of the matter sometimes introduced into the reports of political meetings, as late even as 1834, in a short quotation from the NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, published March 10th of that year. The report, said to have been written by Hon. Thomas B. Laighton, its editor, was entirely in verse. It clothed each individual with a fantastic name descriptive of some peculiarity, instantly recognized by the readers of the paper, and gave the man's words with some ingenious twist or turn that placed him in a light he little anticipated. One man is described in this way:

"Next Barrington's famed Duke arose,
A six-feet giant without shoes,
He wiped a dew-drop from his nose
And thus began——"

It seems that this man was well remembered in Portsmouth as always having a "dew-drop" on his nose, which he generally absorbed in a red silk handkerchief before entering on a political argument with his friends. Another is described in this wise:

"Bob Logic next in anger stood
With goggles sparkling, bright and good
A lusty lout;
Had he when wasting time at school
Been taught this applicable rule,
'Silence is better for a fool
Than speaking out.'
He'd saved his friends the burning shame
Of coupling folly with his name," etc.

One of those present at the meeting had the temerity to attack the GAZETTE in one of a proposed series of resolutions. He gets it as follows, and with this quotation we will pass to other matters:

"Among the resolutions passed
Was one that all the rest surpassed,
I know not what soft brain produced it,
But think Bob Logic introduced it;
It disapproved of the GAZETTE!
What knave I ask e'er liked it yet!
It said it told distorted stories!
So said in '73 the tories.
It said it had much mischief done!
So said the foes of Jefferson,
When foreign tyrants sought t' enslave
Our free-born sons on ocean's wave.
It said its statements had brought down
Contempt and slander on the town!
So said this self-same party when
The British Lion left his den
And on our borders howling stood,
Then was the old GAZETTE abused,
Then were its friends, as now, ill-used—
So let it be, for when they raise
In its behalf the need of praise,
Be sure it no longer sound,
But with our country's foes is found—
May every curse befall as yet,
Ere tories praise the old GAZETTE."

This is not a bad defence.

Bobo, the Prophet.

About twenty miles from Spartanburg, S. C., in the midst of a dense colored population, a self-ordained negro preacher, by the name of Bobo, set up his shrine some two years ago, and soon had an immense congregation. Bobo was ignorant and loose in his morals, but strict in the external forms of religion, and he was a master of that frenzied eloquence which can fill a negro camp-meeting with rapturous howls. Recently he proclaimed himself a new prophet, high in favor, commissioned by the Lord to gather the children of Zion and lead them to a promised land, distant but one hundred and sixty miles, where they would all have wings and could fly. Upon this theme he wrought in nightly exhortations until at last, in the midst of an ecstatic orgy, he announced that the divine command to march had come; that his disciples must sell all they had and follow him without sword or scrip. Fifty or sixty of them immediately sold their stock and crops at any price they could get, one of them parting with a cow and calf for one dollar and fifty cents. To all remonstrances they replied they were obeying the commands of the Lord. Bobo's next revelation was that the oldest person in the party must be sacrificed on the morning of the start, as a sort of avant-courier, to tell the Lord of their coming. The oldest happened to be an old woman of little account (probably Bobo's mother-in-law,) who joyfully repaired to an old outhouse, to remain a willing prisoner until a stock of peculiar growth could be found to kill her with. White neighbors interfered, and, after some show of violence, released her; but this, though a damper, did not divert the prophet and his followers from their purpose. With a two-horse wagon to convey the smallest children and a small supply of provisions, they began their march on foot. To all who accosted them on the journey with dissuasive remarks they returned no answer but marched right on, with upturned eyes, looking for the promised wings, and, when last heard from, they were crossing the mountains in the direction of Tennessee. Whether they are now living on manna or coon meat is not known but no one can doubt their faith in Bobo, or Bobo's faith in his own divine commission. Many a prophet has risen and reigned on just such credentials, and a multitude of religions have sprung from just such faith.

A Detroit Bird.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Last winter a Gratiot street saloon keeper went to Cincinnati on a visit, and while seeing the town he came across a saloon sporting the wickedest old parrot which ever learned to speak the English language. Gratiot street stood by and heard the bird "rip and tear" for a straight hour, and when he came home the parrot came with him. All the way up here the purchase "went for" baggagemen and brakemen, ripping out oaths which Captain Kidd couldn't have handled, and the further north he came the more wicked he grew. Reaching Detroit, his cage was hung up in the saloon, and "Jack" has been there ever since, up to Friday. It was a poor day when he didn't learn some new oath or slangy expression, and finally he became so that nobody but a hardened villain could talk with him. He was sold last Friday for $20, and his owner kept him about an hour and then sent him as a present to a minister's wife who had been attentive to his family during sickness. She was very grateful, having often thought how nice it would be to have a talking parrot around the house. "Jack" seemed put out by the change of owners, and he sat on his perch all Friday night and refused to say a word. Saturday morning the minister's wife started for Pontiac, and she carried "Jack's" cage into her husband's study, that neither might be lonesome. She had been gone about an hour, and the good man was scribbling away when all at once the parrot shouted:

"Hearts is trumps!"

The good man gave a jump and looked out of the window, thinking that a couple of boys were playing euchre under his shade trees. He could see no one, and supposing that he was mistaken, he seated himself and began to write again, when the parrot shouted:—

"Not any gin, thank ye!"

Horrified, the clergyman looked around and saw "Jack" trying to wink at him. Half doubting if it was the bird which had spoken, yet determined to find out, he inquired: "What?"

"Shut up, or I'll put a head on ye!" replied Jack, hanging to the cage with one claw and shaking his feathers.

"Is it possible?" exclaimed the good man, drawing nearer to the cage.

"Champagne Charlie was his name—

sung "Jack," swinging furiously on his stick.

"Vile bird, you shall go out of here!" shouted the minister in an excited voice: "I would as soon harbor a highwayman."

"Ouse mit him?" cried "Jack," and he chuckled and crackled as if he was laughing heartily.

"It is a sin and a shame that men have taught an innocent bird to use such language," continued the man as he picked up the cage.

"Hit him with a beer tumbler," replied the parrot, trying to fasten his claws into the ministerial leg.

"Little did my wife dream what a viper she was bringing into the house," mused the man. "I shall hire some boy to carry you away."

"Send for the Black Maria," replied the bird, and while he was being carried out he cried: "Who stole the wheelbarrow?"

The minister reached the stoop and called to a boy who was playing mumblety-peg on the grass:—

"Here, bub," he said, as the boy came up; "take this bird off somewhere and give him away and I'll give you two shillings."

"Oh, dry up now!" growled "Jack," seeming to know that he was about to change places again.

"Give him to any one who will take him," continued the minister. "I have received a shock which fairly makes me tremble."

"Chuck him under the table!" called the bird, as he went through the gate, and when he was nearly a block away he could be heard singing—

"We won't go home till morning—
Till daylight doth appear."

A Century and a Quarter Old.

Dr. A. A. Davidson, of Mayfield, Ky., writes as follows to the Louisville Courier-Journal:—

"Seeing an extract from the Newport News in your paper concerning the death of 'Aunt Hannah,' colored, who was one hundred and twenty-two years old, has induced me to write you the following:—

On the farm of Dr. Scott, on the headwaters of the Forkydeer river, near Milan, Gibson county, Tenn., there lives an old negro named Fortune Snow, who is in his one hundred and twenty-fourth year! In June, 1872, I went to see him, and I will tell you what I saw when I got to the house. I met an old snaggled-toothed gentleman, sixty-five years old, who told me his 'grand-pap' was in the house, and he soon came tripping town the steps as nimble as some fifteen year old boy. He told me he was twenty-five years old when the Revolutionary war began. He belonged to Captain Snow, who served during the war under General Marion; was born in South Carolina, and fought through the war under his master in nearly every battle. Yet he never has received a pension from the 'best government the world ever saw.'

He said when he was about ninety years old he went totally blind and remained so two years. His hair, which was white as wool, all came out. Subsequently his eyesight returned, and a new growth of hair came out, which is now about half gray. He enjoys fine health. On examination with the opthalmascope and otoscope, I found his sight and hearing to be good. He opened his Bible at the eighth chapter of Revelations and read distinctly without glasses. He goes hunting and shoots birds and squirrels without glasses. He is very religious believes strongly in the 'Good God' who preserved his life through the 'old war,' and reads his Bible very constantly. He is the father of thirteen children, the oldest of whom would be over one hundred, if living, and he is living with his youngest child, who is fifty-three years old.

Old Fortune says he was never sick in his life, and never took a dose of medicine from a doctor. He never has the toothache, and has not an unsound tooth in his mouth, nor any other kind.

He moved from South Carolina to Alabama, where he lived fifty-three years, then came to Tennessee. Capt. Snow, at his death, gave Mr. Chapman, his son-in-law, $500 to support Old Fortune the balance of his life; and Mr. Chapman lived on for forty-seven years, and died and left old 'Nig' still living.

I have been precise in giving his location, so that any one who doubts this can go and see him. Hundreds of people visit him, and he is always glad to see company, and talks fluently and readily.

He certainly is the last of the revolutionists. He is about five feet six inches, weighs about one hundred and fifteen pounds, and is very black."

Business Notices.

Blessed are they who seek relief from "Liver Complaint," "Biliousness," Bad Blood, Pimples, Blotches, Eruptions, Rough Skin, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, and Scrofulous diseases, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext. or Golden Medical Discovery, for they shall be happy in knowing that the cure is complete. Sold by Druggists. 604

Adopt the Preventive Policy.

Severe spells of biliousness, indigestion, chills and fever, diarrhœa, nervous headache and physical exhaustion are quite usual at this season. These are visitations which everybody is anxious to avoid, and as a course of Hostetter's Bitters will unquestionably fortify the system against them, the most valuable medical advice which can be offered at this time to persons subject to such complaints, or at all sensitive to atmospheric changes, is to commence taking this powerful vegetable alterative and invigorant without delay. Forty-eight hours will not have elapsed after the first dose before a marked change will have manifested itself in the condition of the system. The ultimate result will be a habit of body so regular, a genial condition so vigorous, that however unhealthy the season may chance to be, the system thus refreshed and reinforced will be in the best possible term to encounter it.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, sparin, gall, &c., upon animals in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN
HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.
It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.
It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it renews the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being mined from the ashes in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

Presentation and Supper.

The friends of Mr. Samuel Barrett (formerly of the Concord railroad, but now of the Eastern,) selected first an elegant silver service and then appointed Monday evening, Sept. 1st, 1873, as the most fitting time in which to surprise him with a presentation of the same. Accordingly, at seven o'clock P. M., of that date, about one hundred of Mr. Barrett's friends gathered in the passenger station at the Concord depot in this city and after summoning the victim, Col. Josiah Stevens of Manchester lifted the cloth that covered the richly ornamented service, and in a few fitting words told Mr. Barrett what had been done, who had done it, and what caused them to do it; supplementing the whole by turning over to the astonished Barrett a beautiful service of silver as a testimonial of the high regard in which he is held by the donors, who were mainly composed of the employees of the Road. Mr. Barrett was completely and thoroughly overcome with surprise at the presence of so many of his boys and fellow officials, together with their testimonial, and expression of good wishes as evinced in the shining ware before him, and it was some moments before he could recover himself to attempt a reply. His response, however, was heartfelt, and earnest, and given with much emotion.

The articles comprising this donation deserve more than a passing notice. They consist of a complete tea or breakfast service of ten pieces of an elaborate and tasteful pattern, besides a Water Pitcher, Goblet, Slop Bowl, with Stand for the three pieces, —Fruit Stand and Pickle dish. Each article has the initial letter B handsomely engraved thereon, and on the Coffee Urn is the inscription, "Presented to Samuel Barrett, Sept. 1st, 1873, by his friends." The whole cost $225.

At the conclusion of the formalities at the Station the party were invited to the National Hotel to partake of a supper which had been provided (we suspect at the instance of Mr. Waldron), for Mr. Barrett and friends. A pleasant social interchange of friendly greetings closed a pleasant and happy meeting.

The occasion was particularly free from formality, and all seemed to share in the pleasure of tendering a parting testimonial to an officer who had succeeded in ingratiating himself in the favor and esteem of every one with whom he had held business relations; which is no mean compliment for any man. The affair was kept a profound secret from Mr. Barrett, he knowing nothing of it until invited over to the depot at the hour appointed for the presentation.

Mr. B. on Monday, Sept. 1st, assumed his new duties as General Agent and Business Manager at the Eastern Railroad station in this city, a position fraught with responsibility and labor, yet we think the corporation have found the right man for the place.

The successor of Mr. Barrett at the Concord Depot is Mr. Horace W. Waldron, who has for the past five years been employed as clerk at the station, and is well fitted for his more responsible trust, being courteous and gentlemanly, and an excellent business man. Mr. Waldron's clerk is Mr. Hiram Lord of this city, a wounded soldier, and a good clerk.

Getting Nearer to Rye.

A simultaneous revival of schemes of improvement in and about Portsmouth is a most welcome and significant indication of growing prosperity. With the increase of hotels and boarding houses, come demands for better accommodations. The town of Rye is expected to open a new highway from the vicinity of the Ocean House site to the road leading to Straw's Point. The project of laying out a new road from Squirrel Hill, Portsmouth, near the Balch place on Lafayette road, to the residence of Jedediah Rand, at Rye, which was discussed forty years ago, is also revived, and a petition to the Board of Mayor and Aldermen to join with the town of Rye in laying out the road, is being numerously signed by our citizens. When Lafayette road was first laid out, it was the intention to have it run straight to Rye Centre, but some not over-wise citizens of that town protested against having the "stage-road" run through Rye, and the project was defeated after being delayed. The road was afterward laid out by turning to the right near the Balch place. The new road contemplated will shorten the distance to Rye Centre seven-eighths of a mile, and being quite level is easy to construct, passing through pasture land, little of which is fenced, most of the way. It crosses more valuable land in Rye, however.

The Illustrious Dead.

Messrs. Editors: Come wend your way with me to the old North Burying Ground, which, in these days of beautiful cemeteries when people show a praiseworthy taste in ornamenting the place of deposit of the earthly remains of their dearly beloved friends, who have "shaken off the mortal coil," it may be disagreeable to visit. But here have been laid "upon a lap of earth," the mortal heads of many, who in the short lives allotted to man have taken a prominent part in the affairs of the old town of Portsmouth and vicinity of the State, and of the nation.

The beautiful South cemetery may afford a much more pleasant walk than this; but if one has the organ of self esteem unduly developed, one will perhaps come out with the ideas of his own self importance very much diminished.

Perhaps a thousand feet daily tramp by thoughtlessly on Elm street, the beautiful row of Lombardy poplars—themselves slowly decaying—and the ordinary brick wall which divides it from the street, and many thousands carelessly are being constantly whirled by in the numerous trains of cars of the adjacent Railroads, the low, rough board fence, which barely keeps the old North Burying Ground from desecration.

Yet how many of all these are aware that here lies all that is left of the mortal remains of two of the greatest patriots, which not only New Hampshire but the "old Thirteen" could afford (would that others may soon arise like them). Close by the old rough fence, and facing the rattling, noisy cars, is an old fashioned tomb with a front of coarse freestone, bearing this simple inscription, "Gov. J. Langdon and Family." And not many steps distant in sight of the old brick wall lies a marble slab supported by rough dressed granite in memory of William Whipple, having a longer but not too verbose inscription.

I will venture the assertion that not one hundred are aware of the above.

Says the Boston Traveller, issued August 16:

We should recollect in connection with Bennington, that had it not been for the sacrifices of John Langdon, at that time the chief man in New Hampshire, the battle could not have been fought. He it was who furnished the means for the equipment of the force that won the day, without the slightest security that a dollar of it would be repaid. Money plate, and merchandise, all went for the benefit of the common cause. There were patriots in those days, and so the sinews of war were forthcoming at critical hours." If Mollie Stark had been a widow, Cornwallis at Yorktown perhaps would not have surrendered to Washington. I have travelled many miles and have seen noble monuments, raised in memory of far less famous patriots than these; will not the city of Portsmouth, or if it can not afford to do so, the State of New Hampshire, raise a suitable monument in honor of the signers of the Declaration of Independence from the first State in the list of the Old Thirteen?

Indeed will not the city keep this old ground in a good state of preservation?

And cannot public grounds be afforded for those desiring to enjoy the pleasure and refinements of social life with works of art bringing to mind the patriotism of such men as Langdon, Whipple, and Bartlett, leaving cemeteries to the rambles of those desiring calm meditation, and solacing thoughts of those that have gone before.

VIATOR.

Excursion Trains.

The Eastern Railroad management is successful because its interests are identical with those of its patrons. The returning multitude of pleasure-seekers fill the homeward bound trains and the hotels in the mountains are being emptied. The Eastern managers now announce excursion tickets to North Conway and return, good for two months, at reduced rates, $3.25 being the price of trip tickets from Portsmouth. September and October are the most attractive months of the year for travel, the foliage being in these months of richest hue, while the weather is cool and comfortable. Accommodations at the mountain hotels, too, are now ample, and we doubt not that the excursionists over the Eastern Railroad will number many thousands. See advertisement.

Laconics.

The repaving of Market street goes briskly on.

The front end of September was grumpy and lugubrious.

Hon. Geo. M. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy, was in town, Monday.

A term of the U. S. Circuit Court will be held in this city to-day.

William A. Meloon, Esq., of Newcastle, has been appointed Justice of the Peace.

Mr. Horace W. Waldron succeeds Mr. Samuel Barrett as agent of the Concord Railroad.

Sunset views on exhibition at either of the three New Castle bridges. Admission six cents.

The Eastern Railroad Company never received so many trunks in Boston in one week as it did for the week ending on Saturday.

A boy with a horribly loud voice nauseated the public ear on Monday. A violin accompaniment was no more attractive than the howling.

Assistant Paymaster Stephen Rand, Jr., has been ordered to duty as assistant to the Paymaster of Receiving Ship Vermont at New York.

Arthur Libbey, for entering the house of Mr. John Arshowe, on School street, and striking Mrs. A., on Friday, has been sent to the county house of correction for six months by Judge Page.

The results of judicious advertising were seen in the heavy trains to North Conway and Wolfeboro', Monday. People believe in cheap transportation and General Advertising Agent Field seems to prove a success.

By reference to an advertisement elsewhere, it will be seen that an agency has been opened at the store of W. W. Henderson & Co. for the cleansing of bonnet and hat feathers, crapes, etc. Ladies who have put aside soiled articles of ornament may now have their cleansed or dyed at a small expense.

Thomas Kelley, an Irishman who has for eight years been in the employ of E. F. Sise & Co., has been missing since Saturday night. At eleven o'clock, he was seen on Pier wharf by one of the city watch. His hat was found on the wharf, Sunday. He is probably drowned. He leaves a family of four persons.

And now one meets little five-year-olds, with faces washed clean, going to school for the first time, led by the hand by brother and sister. On the countenances of the little chaps are evidences of bewildered enthusiasm, as if, now that babyhood is passed, hope and fear alternately occupied the mind as visions of future triumphs and the application of the rod passed before it, as it were.

The jury summoned by Coroner Rider to hold inquest on the body of Jacob Winn, who was killed at Stratham recently, have rendered a verdict that the deceased "came to his death by misfortune." The jurors declare that no employe of the Concord & Portsmouth Railroad is blamable, that the practice of using the railway as a public highway should be discountenanced and that were the engineers of trains to stop for every person who walks on the track in mere bravado and then jumps off as the engine approaches, it would be impossible to run trains with any regularity.

Buckley's minstrels come this evening, and veritable minstrels they are. The programme is excellent and the minstrels are A 1. Swaine Buckley, Eva Brent, Jake Badd and Minnie Loder are "stars" in their peculiar profession. Cummings and Turner are first class dancers—and we set down the evening as an enjoyable one for the audience. A burlesque opera, Lucrezia Borgia, concludes the entertainment, affording opportunity for Miss Loder and Eva Brent to display their wonderful vocal abilities. Miss Loder has never sung here, but comes highly recommended as possessing a voice of remarkable compass.

French Cookery.

[Watterson's Paris Letter.]

I am coming to the conclusion that I prefer to dine at home, where, if the cooking be not as artistic as that at Voisin's, the original fabrics which enter into the feast are a great deal better. I heard Edmund Yates say last winter—and whatever you may think of Edmund's novels, if you had ever met him you would allow he has bowels of unqualified culture and genius—I heard Edmund Yates say last winter that the Brevoort House, meaning of course, the kitchen, is the best hotel in the world. He spoke words of sweetness from cavernous depths unsounded by culinary eccentricities. Delmonico's is also the first restaurant in Christendom, and for the same reason; that is, it applies the art of France to the preparation of American food, which is in all respects, in quality, in flavor, in abundance and variety, superior to the food of Europe.

Everything goes by comparison. The fame of the French restaurants was made by the comparison they offered to the England restaurants. The English are a gross, material people. They live on the coarsest food. They are an obstinate people, and steadily pursue their bent. Happy in themselves and in their ignorance, they do not wish to learn, because they believe, and are right in believing that joy does not come with wisdom. So the French have had no competition as cooks, and been cried up to the skies by the travellers of every nation. In the same way the sun of Italy, which is no brighter than our sun in America, has been made out a very miracle of light and beauty by the old English poets, whose eyes had only gazed upon the dull Chinese lantern that passes for a sun in their country.

—The Arkansas Statesman of Jacksonport, in plain prose and threatening verse, thus urges delinquents to pay up: "We have several hundred dollars due us for subscriptions, and we want it. We are out of meat, money and other things. We are out at the elbow. We are out of patience and seriously contemplate running our face for about two hundred postal cards, with which to remind those who owe us. Pay up.

"To avoid proceedings unpleasant,
We wish you would pay what is due;
If you do you'll oblige us at present,
If you don't then we'll oblige you.
Persistently yours."

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 70 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

OF
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR
CONSUMPTION!
And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all
LUNG COMPLAINTS.
This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.
CONSUMPTION!
CURED
By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.
'Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry
Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,
And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.
BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Daily Chronicle.

A Remarkable Book.

An exchange is responsible for the following extracts, which give an idea of a recent publication entitled "Round the World in Eighty Days," by Jules Verne, a French author of more imagination than veracity. The book is in part a purport of a narrative of events occurring in December last on the Pacific Railroad, at a point near Fort Kearney:

The door of the next car opened, and Col. Proctor appeared on the platform, attended by a Yankee of his own stamp as his second.

But just as the combatants were about to step from the train, the conductor hurried up, and shouted:

"You can't get off, gentlemen!"

"Why not?" asked the Colonel.

"We are twenty minutes late, and we shall not stop."

"But I am going to fight a duel with this gentleman."

"I am sorry," said the conductor, "but we shall be off at once. There's the bell ringing now."

The train started.

"I'm really very sorry, gentlemen," said the conductor. "Under any other circumstances I should have been happy to oblige you. But, after all, as you have not had time to fight here, why not fight as we go along?"

"That wouldn't be convenient, perhaps, for this gentleman," said the Colonel, in a jeering tone.

"It would be perfectly so," replied Phileas Fogg.

"Well, we are really in America," thought Passepartout, "and the conductor is a gentleman of the first order."

So muttering, he followed his master.

The two combatants, their seconds, and the conductor passed through the cars to the rear of the train. The last car was only occupied by a dozen passengers, whom the conductor politely asked if they would be so kind as to leave it vacant for a few moments, as two gentlemen had an affair of honor to settle. The passengers granted the request with alacrity, and straightway disappeared on the platform.

The car, which was some fifty feet long, was very convenient for their purpose. The adversaries might march on each other in the aisle, and fire at their ease. Never was duel more easily arranged. Mr. Fogg and Colonel Proctor, each provided with two six-barreled revolvers, entered the car. The seconds, remaining outside, shut them in. They were to begin firing at the first whistle of the locomotive. After an interval of two minutes, what remained of the two gentlemen would be taken from the car.

Before shots have been exchanged, however, this affair is stopped, for a party of Sioux Indians attack the train, jumping upon it, as is their custom, while it is going at full speed, some of them skipping about the roof of the cars like monkeys, and pistoling the passengers, while others throw the baggage out on the roadside. As for the head chief, he takes charge of the engine, which he runs at double the regular rate, so that it may pass Fort Kearney too rapidly to permit of interference by the United States garrison. This, however, is not the most remarkable thing that happens to "Train No. 42."

Just before reaching a station called Medicine Bow, it came to a dead stop, the station-master at that point having sent on a signalman to say that the suspension bridge over the rapids was shaky, and would not bear the weight of the train. At this the passengers pour out, swearing at the delay, our friend, Col. Stamp Proctor, of course, making himself very conspicuous. There is much grumbling and wrangling, till at last "the engineer, a true Yankee," suggests a plan which he has known to be successful in other instances:

"Gentleman, perhaps there is a way, after all to get over."

"On the bridge?" asked a passenger.

"On the bridge."

"With our train?"

"With our train."

Passepartout stopped short, and eagerly listened to the engineer.

"But the bridge is unsafe," urged the conductor.

"No matter," replied Forster; "I think that by putting on the very highest speed we might have a chance of getting over."

"The devil!" muttered Passepartout.

But a number of passengers were at once attracted by the engineer's proposal, and Colonel Proctor was especially delighted, and found the plan a very feasible one. He told stories about engineers leaping their trains over rivers without bridges by putting on full steam; and many of those present avowed themselves of the engineer's mind.

"We have fifty chances out of a hundred of getting over," said one.

"Eighty! ninety!"

Passepartout was astounded.

The engineer's advice is acted upon, which proves to be the best that could have been given under the circumstances: "And they passed over. It was like a flash. No one saw the bridge. The train leaped, so to speak, from one bank to the other, and the engineer could not stop till it had gone five miles beyond the station. But scarcely had the train passed the river when the bridge, already dilapidated, fell with a crash into the rapids of Medicine Bow."

In Davenport, Iowa, you can trip up your wife, and sit on her, and deprivate her cranium, for only $25.

A Keokuk lady, while engaged in the pursuit of her domestic duties encountered a mouse in the flour barrel. Now most ladies under similar circumstances would have uttered a few feminine shrieks and then sought safety in the garret. But this one possesses more than the ordinary degree of female courage. She summoned the hired man and told him to get the shot gun, call the bull-dog, and station himself at a convenient distance. Then she climbed half way up the stairs and commenced to punch the flour barrel vigorously with a pole. Presently the mouse made its appearance and started across the floor. The bull dog at once went in pursuit. The man fired and the dog dropped dead. The lady fainted and fell down the stairs, and the hired man, thinking that she was killed, and fearing that he would be arrested for murder, 13 out, and has not been seen since. The mouse escaped.

The London Builder gives the following dimensions of a bridge to be constructed over the Frith-of-Forth: The structure will be by far the largest bridge in the world. It will be 120 feet in height, and will contain nearly 100 spans. The greatest span in the centre will be 1500 feet in width, or nearly a third of a mile in extent, dimensions which are without parallel for any similar piece of architectural construction; and the smaller openings or spans will be 150 feet in width, being considerably beyond the average dimensions of the largest spans in ordinary bridges. It will cost at least $10,000,000.

When the hen cackles, people know that she has laid in some fresh stock, and feels rather proud of it. The domestic afflictions of a Philadelphia alderman will be of interest. Harrowed with anxiety at the steady fading away of his beloved wife, he persuaded her to spend a month at the Springs. Unfortunately she returned on the second day, to pack some forgotten dresses, and found her affectionate spouse holding a champagne wake with two strange women, whose lips were as honey-comb, and whose mouths were smoother than oil. She labored with those women till they left, shorn of their purple and fine linen, and bereft of back hair. And now she goeth to the Springs never any more.

The Massachusetts Fight.

[Chelsea Pioneer.]

No one, at all experienced in our State politics, fails to see that the steamy struggles among our professional politicians, is simply this and nothing more—to wit—the Bourbons of the Republican party don't care to take in new partners; nor to have their dignity and ease disturbed especially by such a broomy harraser of cobwebs as Gen. Butler. Until now, they have reigned without challenge and in all admitted supremacy. If the General would, or could be made a silent partner, we would see no storms and hear no moral gales. But, once admitted, he would assuredly gripe the baton and assume command. Judge Hoar may play a good political fiddle. Benjamin F. Butler don't play second to any one. He will lead the orchestra; so there is discord.

—The Des Moines Register says: "If you can't have two ruffles in your dress and a new book, then have the book and one ruffle," is a motto of the dress reform society recently organized by our Des Moines ladies. But it will never be so. We hate to discourage the ladies, but we fear that books stand no chance when ruffles are at stake and a woman has to decide. It always has been so, and it probably always will be so. Everybody likes to see a pretty woman look pretty, and no one more than the woman herself; and if one ruffle additional will make her feel sure of it, you may depend upon it that one ruffle will be forthcoming."

Butler Defends Himself.

Gen. Butler's speech at Springfield was a persuasive one. Speaking of the meeting in Hamilton Hall, Butler said the cry was "We understand the State central committee has gone over to the enemy." Who is the enemy of the republican party? Why of course they explained, after heating about the bush some little time, that General Butler was the enemy. When did General Butler become the enemy of the republican party? Was it when he went through Springfield the first time, of which he has spoken to you? Was it when they called upon him to go to Washington with his men to endeavor to save the republican president and the republican administration from the rebels? Was he that enemy then? Was he the enemy of the republican party when, after Massachusetts men were murdered in Baltimore, he seized Federal Hill? Was that the time when his enmity was shown to the republican party? Or, perhaps, it was when he went to Fortress Monroe and organized fresh levies, or when, disaster having followed disaster he went to Hatteras and captured 400 prisoners and two guns, the first considerable success of the war. On which of these occasions was it that he showed his enmity to the republican party? Nay, more, perhaps it was when he came home in the dead of winter, with the frost freezing the ears of his aids, and raised 6000 men in Massachusette to go down to Ship Island to cooperate with Farragut at New Orleans. Or was it when order came out of chaos—when the Union flag was raised, and when the traitors met a traitor's doom? Was it then that General Butler became the enemy of the republican party. [Loud applause.] I am uncertain of the day. If he failed to subdue the enemies of this country no man has ever said of him that he did not try. Did he become the enemy of the republican party when, coming home, he was honored by the constituents of his district with an election to Congress, and when the republican party put the prosecution of the great criminal of the age before the Senate in the impeachment trial into his hands, and when afterward he was placed on the great republican committee of reconstruction and stood up and insisted that Congress should not adjourn until there was passed a law to protect our brethren in the South from the outrages of the Ku-Klux, and he held Congress until such a law was passed and signed by the President? Were those acts of enmity to the republican party? Or perhaps he became an enemy of the republican party near before last, when he offered his name to the party, and when he had in that convention a majority at noonday, and when Luke Lyman wrote the Springfield Republican a letter, which was published, that Butler would be nominated if they could not manage the committee on credentials, and when they put Judge Hoar as chairman of that committee, and he would not report until the shades of night came over the convention, and a great many honest and unthinking and unsuspicious men had gone home; and when they looked around to see him bolt, feeling himself cheated, was he then the enemy of the party? All his services were now forgotten, and all that was remembered was $2500 worth of salary, and that he had asked that the people might have a chance to vote for him. He had never been a seeker of a judgeship, either of the Commonwealth or of the United States. The Senate had never had an opportunity to reject his name as judge. [Applause.] The only time he was ever before them was for the office of major-general, given him by President Lincoln, whom then he had never seen. He repeated his question of former speeches if the people were to be put under guardianship, and said it was the people's question, not his, whether he should be governor, and as he should receive $7500 in Congress and only $5000 as governor, of course the advantage, in a pecuniary point of view, was in favor of continuing in Congress. He was accused of being ambitious, and acknowledged to an ambition to serve the country and people and be considered a man who tried to do his duty. A fact in the canvass is that Judge Hoar goes to Hamilton Hall and nominates Mr. Washburn for governor and Mr. Washburn goes to the State House and nominates Mr. Hoar for judge. [Laughter.] He had been accused of intending to seize the governorship, but nobody had ever accused him of not possessing ability to be governor. The trouble was he had too much ability and would do something wrong, but he thought unless a man had ability to do wrong he had no right to do right. But what possible motive could he have to do other than his best if elected, to make a name for himself.

—While a Troy man was in a beer saloon the other day speaking to the toast, "Woman—God bless her!" his wife walked in and gave him fifty for the sentiment, he now says on the occasion of another festive meeting he will have that toast changed to woman something else—to which improved sentiment he will respond with an eloquence that will cast a cloud upon the fame of Daniel Webster.

Profitable Farming.

[Beecher in Ledger.]

A farmer's boy writes to ask that I will give some account of my experience in farming, with especial reference to bringing before American young men the honorableness and profitableness of farming. Now, I do not doubt that farming is very honorable, but so is carpentry, and blacksmithing, and shoemaking. Any manual craft, and any vocation which earns bread by some service to society, no matter how humble, is honorable, if honestly followed.

Bright visions of a farmer's life are indulged by those who know nothing of it. It is true that a forehanded farmer, with good land, near a good market, has, in many respects, a very desirable position. But for every farmer who, in New England, makes the two ends meet, with enough to tie into a bow knot, there are two, at least, who barely scrape a living off from their land. A poor farmer is about as poor a liver as any among us. He works incessantly, is usually in debt, sees little money, sells the best things he can raise, and consumes himself, chiefly, what he cannot sell.

If a man have good land, health, and reasonable capital, he ought to be content with farming. But if he is to spend a long life drudging on a farm, without getting along a step, always just agoing to do better, and never doing it, I do not wonder that his sons seek some other occupation as soon as they obtain their liberty.

As to the profitableness of farming, we cannot speak from experience. The art of making money by any business skill was never vouchsafed to us. We have thirty-six acres of hill land, moderately rich, and willing to be made richer to any extent. The farm pays, and pays well—that is, every man that works on it makes money except the owner. But every man should be judged by what he undertakes.

I undertook to bring up a worn-out soil, and succeeded; to clear it of stones, and never shall succeed; to enrich it beautifully, and succeeded; to stock it with grapes, pears, ornamental trees, etc., and to get a deal of comfort out of it while all this was going on. Now, we think ourselves competent to write a good deal about farming, and with reasonable instructiveness. We could descant upon grasses (orchard grass is our favorite), clover, the root crops, and so on. But flowers and fruits are special favorites, and in regard to these, without pretending any surpassing excellence, we think that we could suggest much good practice for a beginner.

But when it comes to farming for a living—farming for profit—we confess ourselves to be ignorant beyond all measure! It is true that early potatoes bring remunerative prices; so do onions, tomatoes, small fruits; and in so far as particular crops are concerned, we can make them pay. But the expenses of other things—the dairy, the stable, the improvements, the wear and tear of implements, the buying and selling of oxen, of horses, (alas, yes, of horses!) make way with profits, and give to the figures another name. To be a profit-making farmer is to be a good manufacturer, a good merchant, a good manager of men—a good business man, in short! And any man, in New England, who can make money on a farm, and live well while doing it, is a thoroughly good manager, and would, with education and opportunity, doubtless have made a good merchant, a good chemist, a good minister, even.

What Came of a Serenade.

[Danbury News.]

Those of our readers acquainted on Monson street will remember that the roof to Mr. Forceps' saloon adjoins his house, and is approached by two windows. One of these windows is in Mr. Forceps' bed-room. On this roof Mrs. Forceps has spread hesitating tomatoes, with a view to hasten their ripeness. Last Wednesday she put five more with their fellows, making thirty in all. The Forceps have a niece visiting with them—a young lady named Hall, of Thomaston. She has made the acquaintance of many of our young people, and on Wednesday night several of them got together to give her a serenade. Providing themselves with requisite instruments the young men took up a position near this addition we speak of, and struck up on the instruments. Mrs. Forceps was first awakened by the music, and nudged her husband. He also awoke. The music was grand—not loud, of course, but soft, low and harmonious. Mr. Forceps was very much pleased, and got up to the window to hear it. Then Mrs. Forceps got up also, and, retying her night-cap, stood beside Forceps. "They're serenading Ellen," said she. "I know it," said Forceps. "Who can they be?" she asked. "I don't know, I'm sure," said he, "but I suppose I could find out if I could creep out on the roof and look over." "Why don't you?" said she, her curiosity increasing. "I'm afraid they might see me," he said. "I don't think they would," she said. "They wouldn't be looking up on the roof, would they?" Mr Forceps thought a moment and then concluded no one could see him, as the moon had gone into a bank of clouds, and objects were quite dim. And then he softly opened the blinds and cautiously crawled out on the shingles, completely encased in red-flannel underclothes and a night-cap of the same rich material. The music still continued, coming up through the night air in waves of ecstatic harmony. Mr. Forceps sat down on the roof and laboriously worked his way to the eves. Then he lifted himself up to turn over and look down, and just then he stopped on something soft and yielding, felt his feet give, made a desperate clutch at the shingles, was too late, gave a piercing shriek, shot off the roof, and went revolving and howling in among the band, followed by tomatoes, and madly cleaving the air with his red flannel limbs. He struck on his back on the bassviol, and with one leg tore the entrails from an accordeon, and with the other knocked all the keys from a silver-mounted flute. The man who played the bass-viol was driven senseless into a pile of peabrush, and the flute-player, with his mouth full of blood and splinters, jumped over the fence and fled. What became of the others Mr. Forceps does not know, he being too busily engaged in getting on his feet and into the house to make a critical examination of the field. It is presumed the bass-viol man died on the spot and was surreptitiously removed and buried by his companions, as there was no sign of him about the premises in the morning.

Butler on the Springfield Republican.

Gen. Butler spoke to an audience of 3500 at Springfield, Monday evening. Referring to his former appearance there, he said:

I have no occasion now, to deal with the leading newspaper. It has gone into opposition to the republican party, and I have never answered any opposition paper. They have a full right to say what they please of me. It is a part of their stock in trade. It passes me like the idle wind that blows. But I had a right to then, because it was a republican paper, speaking for republicans, giving advice that might be heeded by republicans. Now it gives advice to republicans, but I think I can show sufficiently without doing any wrong to anybody that it is not a safe paper for republicans to follow because it went out from the republican party last year, although it accused me two years ago of intending to do so. They knew what they would do under the circumstances, and therefore they thought I would do as they did. [Applause.] But they set the standard too low—too far down by half. One thing I have a right to do in reference to that proceeding, and that is to congratulate them upon the improvement of that paper since it has gone into the opposition. It is not one-half so bitter and virulent as it used to be when it claimed to be a republican paper. I don't know but I should advise some other papers of the Commonwealth to go through the same course of training to be subdued and brought into proper respect of other men's feelings. Therefore I have nothing to complain of the Republican nor of its infant child, the Union. [Laughter and applause.]

—The Herald of Health editors are interested in the success of the Graphic balloon experiment. They beg that some of the party keep a record of the effects of their altitude and journey on the pulse, respiration, appetite, approximately, at least, to demonstrate a favorite theory that "when ballooning becomes safe and practical for the thousand, it will be used as a means of health. Will not the time come when invalids, instead of going to the mountains or seashore, will go to the higher regions of the air? Could they not thus help more perfectly to make their own climate?" However little sympathy any one may have with this hygienic view of the matter, their further query, "If perfect safety could be secured, would it not be a great luxury this hot weather, when sleeping is so unpleasant and unwholesome, to have a balloon to lift us high into the air to make our beds?" will certainly meet with universal approval.

—There was something of a delicate and private nature going forward about the house, visible to the commonest observer. But love and its devotees are proverbially blind. So he staid and staid until late in the evening, when one of our prominent physicians stepped from another room into the parlor, where the youth and the eldest daughter of the house were billing and cooing, and blurted out: "Well, young man, if you're done courting, you can have a turn at nursing to get your hand in. There's another very young girl in the next room."

MARRIED.

TREFETHEN—TREFETHEN. In this city, August 30, by Rev. John A. Goss, Mr. GEO. O. TREFETHEN and Miss ELLA TREFETHEN, both of Newcastle.

Business Notices.

Blessed are they who seek relief from "Liver Complaint," "Biliousness," Bad Blood, Pimples, Blotches, Eruptions, Rough Skin, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, and Scrofulous diseases, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext. or Golden Medical Discovery, for they shall be happy in knowing that the cure is complete. Sold by Druggists. 604

Adopt the Preventive Policy.

Severe spells of biliousness, indigestion, chills and fever, diarrhœa, nervous headache and physical exhaustion are quite usual at this season. These are visitations which everybody is anxious to avoid, and as a course of Hostetter's Bitters will unquestionably fortify the system against them, the most valuable medical advice which can be offered at this time to persons subject to such complaints, or at all sensitive to atmospheric changes, is to commence taking this powerful vegetable alterative and invigorant without delay. Forty-eight hours will not have elapsed after the first dose before a marked change will have manifested itself in the condition of the system. The ultimate result will be a habit of body so regular, a genial condition so vigorous, that however unlovely the season may chance to be, the system thus refreshed and reinforced will be in the best possible trim to encounter it.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 100 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the Centaur Liniment (Price 50 cts.) is worth one hundred dollars to the owner of a valued horse and mules, or for some worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE, FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is simple in its application, being but one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a new shipping system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the colliery in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBMITTED TO THE PROPER EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and the cars thus loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

Portsmouth Conservatory of Music,

NO. 78 State Street,

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $8, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and applications for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter 11 of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which time shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

Local Matters.

Newcastle.

"All things are working nicely in this little village," is the testimony given by visitors, of whom the island has had many during the season just closing. In fact, no summer has brought so many strangers, as this. All the spare room has been occupied and boarders could scarcely find accommodations, though willing to accept the most meager; but during the coming year this will be obviated by the completion of a large hotel which is now having the foundation laid on the banks of Little Harbor; besides the expected erection of half a dozen, or more, private cottages near by.

Mr. Roberts of Boston has nearly finished his fine summer residence, on the corner of Piscataqua Avenue and Willson street. It is an ornament to the village, and does honor to his wife's old homestead. Uncle Sam has had between forty and fifty men during the past two months, building batteries on Jerry's Point. It is not known when the works will be completed.

The people are half jubilant over the charter granted for the erection of a bridge between here and Rye, as they begin to realize that the toll over the present bridge is a greater tax than if they were without land communication with Portsmouth.

The government soon after sending men here, realized the same,—so, now, have nearly all supplies for man and beast, forwarded from Portsmouth in small boats.

The O. H. & Y. H. (old heads and young hearts) society took their annual ride on the 28th inst. There were eighteen members; average age of each, 52 years, or a total of 936. Never a more jovial party visited Rye beach and had a better time than this of the old children.

The schools opened Sept. 1st.—F. R. Wade, Principal of the Grammar school, Miss Dollie Vennard, Intermediate and Miss Lizzie White, Primary, departments.

Miss Vennard commences her 37th term in this school and 56th of her teacher's life. A good number of her present students are children of her former pupils. Miss White enters upon her fourth, and Mr. Wade his second term.

Mr. Abraham Trefethen, aged 58 years died on the 25th ult. He was an old citizen.

Mr. C. N. Flanders, who has during his summer vacation, filled the desk at the Congregational church, returned to his theological studies at Andover, on the 1st. R.

Laconics.

Among the Portsmouth boys admitted to Chandler Institute, Dartmouth College, is Lewis A. Drake, of this city.

Chief Engineer J. W. Whittaker has been detached from duty as inspector of coal at Philadelphia and ordered to the Congress in the European station.

Trying to do business without advertising is like winking at a pretty girl through a pair of green goggles. You may know what you're doing, but nobody else does.

The Boston Advertiser calls for a reform in holding caucuses, and urges protracted caucuses, afternoon and evening. This practice was adopted in Portsmouth two years ago, and works well—assuring a large vote and fair choice.

We are indebted to Mr. Fletcher D. Locke, Paymaster's clerk of U. S. S. Narragansett, for San Diego papers containing descriptions of a ball at the Horton House, tendered to the officers of the vessel by the citizens of San Diego.

Surgeon A. A. Hockling has been detached from duty at the naval hospital at Annapolis and ordered to proceed to Portsmouth, and report to Commodore J. C. Howell for duty on board the United States steamer Monongahela.

Only three bids were received at the Navy department on Tuesday, for supplying the labor on the new sloop-of-war to be built at this navy yard, for which the government will provide tools and materials. All were from citizens of Boston, as follows S. McKay, $52,600; E. K. McMichaels, $46,725; and John W. Griffiths, $46,200. The department regards all bids as reasonable and satisfactory and likely to insure to the navy a better vessel at a lower price than any built wholly by the government or by contractors.

The workmen engaged in raising the old Rogers building on Congress street, found the old timbers intact, the principal one, which is of white oak, having hardened until it was nearly as solid as lignum vitae. The tree from which this timber was cut grew on Market Square, and the timber is 168 years old, having been cut and placed in the old Rogers house when it was erected in 1705! The town of Portsmouth assisted in the erection of the house, giving Mr. Rogers £150 to relinquish all demands against the town for house-hire.

Testimonials.

Prof. Metcalf, who is endeavoring to establish a Conservatory of Music here, comes well recommended as will be seen by the following extracts:

[Boston Journal.]

E. S. METCALF, Instructor of Theory and Singing in Petersilea's Music School, ranks second to none as a teacher and conductor. Besides the previous years of experience in study and teaching at home, his three years of earnest and thorough work as a student in Germany and Italy have eminently fitted him for the vocation which his extraordinary musical genius has led him to adopt, and Boston may well be proud of such an acquisition to her large circle of distinguished artists."

(Boston Transcript.)

"E. S. METCALF. If there is an honest, faithful, self-sacrificing, enthusiastic, and competent teacher of voice culture in Boston, it is this gentleman. He is thoroughly original, and all who are so fortunate as to come under his tuition learn to respect him not only for his knowledge and the interest that he manifests in them, but, also, for his gentlemanly deportment towards them at all times." PUPIL.

BOSTON, September 7, 1871.

This is to certify that Mr. E. S. Metcalf, previous to his musical course in Germany and Italy, taught the art of singing, etc., in the public schools of West Cambridge (now called Arlington), giving, now and then, exhibitions of the progress they were making in that department. These exhibitions were largely attended, and evinced the value of the art in the schools, and his excellence as a teacher, in whose favor this testimony is given, and who cannot fail to be of great value to any school or schools that may employ his services.

A Cruel Husband.

[N. Y. Dispatch.]

A lady of Croton, who had some trouble with her husband, determined to punish him. She had read in the papers of the revenge of a Pennsylvania woman whose husband had struck her, and she determined to imitate that female's action. When the Pennsylvania woman was struck she threw herself into a tragic attitude, and exclaimed, "Villain! nothing but death can wipe away the stain of your blow." Then she rushed out of the house, ran to the canal, and throwing her hat and shawl on the bank, flung in a big stone, which made a loud splash. She then hid in the bushes and watched with demoniac joy her husband and a party of friends grappling for her body. When she thought she had sufficiently punished her lord she made her appearance, and was received by him with demonstrations of joy, and he begged her forgiveness, took her home, and promised to be kind and loving to her forever. The other day the Croton woman had a battle royal with her husband. He didn't strike her—he was too manly for that—but he said such irritating things that she was driven to madness. "Inhuman monster!" she shrieked, "I will never again rest beneath this roof. The river bed shall be my tomb—its waters my winding sheet." Out she rushed to the river, which ran within a quarter of a mile of the house, threw her handkerchief on the bank—she had neither hat nor shawl on, and then she flung into the clear waters a large stone. This done she hid in some trees and awaited the coming of the remorse-stricken husband. Perhaps he had killed the children and then committed suicide. She could not bear the suspense longer. It was dark now, and she quietly stole to the house. There were lights in it, and everything looked as pleasant as ever.

She crept to the window and looked in. There sat the remorse-stricken husband, with his arm around the waist of a young lady neighbor, and he was saying: "Jennie, the old woman got her back up to-day, and she went off and drowned herself. Now, you see, I don't want to break up housekeeping, and if you'll consent, why, we'll get hitched in two weeks. What do you say?" "She shan't do anything of the sort, and neither will you, you miserable, unfeeling, heartless wretch!" came from the wife as she dashed into the room. For a few minutes Jennie was tossed and tumbled about by the undrowned woman in the most horrid manner, and when Jennie retired from the house she looked as though she had been through a carding-machine. The Croton woman doesn't intend trying any more sentimental experiments on her husband; but will hereafter do all her fighting in the old fashion. It need hardly be mentioned that her husband is not living in a state of perfect and unalloyed beatitude at present.

Small Boy of the Period.

[Stockton Gazette.]

Where the road between Merced and Snelling crosses the Merced river, that stream is about two hundred yards in width, and even at this season of the year, when the water is quite low, it looks like a dangerous and deep stream to cross. Last Thursday, a patent medicine agent, travelling on horseback through that section, came to the river and hesitated about attempting to ford it as he saw the wide expanse of rushing waters. There is no bridge anywhere along there, so after some indecision he concluded to swim his horse across. Spying a boy fishing in a small punt tied to the bank, he said:

"Hello, bub!"

"Hello, yourself."

"Can I get you to take my clothes across the river in your boat?"

"I reckin you kin, if you've got any soap."

"All right, I'll give you a quarter to take over my clothes and this carpet-sack to the opposite shore."

To this the boy nodded assent, the stranger disrobed, turned over the carpet sack and liabilliments to the juvenile, who paddled out into the stream, and mounted his horse, prepared to swim the river and enjoy the luxury of a bath. With a splash at every movement, the horse stepped into the stream and walked across—the water was nowhere more than eighteen inches deep! To say that that medicine man, perched on the back of his horse, was a man of iniquity for the space of half an hour would hardly do justice to the occasion. There were enough "dams" along the Merced that afternoon to supply a hundred mill-sites.

—The following came inscribed on a postal card, and the card carefully inclosed in an envelope was received by the Danbury News. It is from Muiy, Mich., and is undoubtedly from a man who means business: "Mr Danberry News i send you fifty (50) cents please send me danberry News as long as you can for the money a feller here says it is funny and i like fun i will write som funny peices for your paper if you will pay me for it i can write some peaders if you will pay me for writeing them i will write some."

—Cards to which small corks are attached by a string, are gratuitously circulated about the streets of New York. On the cards, in large letters, is the following inscription: "The most horrible death is to be talked to death. To prevent the above terrible fate, use the patent life-preserver attached to this card. Directions—put the cork in your ear."

IMPORTANT TO EVERY BUSINESS MAN.

THE conflagrations in Portland, Chicago and Boston have demonstrated beyond a doubt the advantage of LIN'N over leather in the manufacture of Banker's Cases, Bill Books, &c., for valuable papers placed in Safes as LINEN BILL BOOKS, (being non-conductors of heat,) will afford a protection to Bonds, Notes, &c. when exposed to a heat which burns Blank Books.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

NOTICE.

Rockingham Ten Cents Savings Bank.

NO. 29 MARKET ST., PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

AARON H. HILL, President, JOHN CHRISTIE, Treas.

THIS Bank pays five per cent. per annum, free of all tax. A greater rate is prohibited by law.

Two dividends are made in the year,—in June and December, and an extra dividend of the surplus earnings every two years. The first extra will be in June, 1874.

Deposits go on interest on the FIRST day of every MONTH, and deposits made during the FIRST THREE days of each MONTH will draw interest from the FIRST day of that MONTH.

Dividends not withdrawn will be added to the principal, and draw interest from the time when declared.

Money is received on deposit, payable on checks at sight.

Crossing Niagara on a Rope.

Signor Henry Balleni, an Italian, astonished the visitors at Niagara Falls, last week, by crossing the chasm on a tight rope, as Blondin did years ago, and subsequently diving from the middle of the rope into the river below, a feat which his predecessor did not attempt. The rope, 1,500 feet in length, was stretched from Prospect Park, on the American side, to near the Clifton house, on the other. Both shores were crowded with spectators long before the time announced for the performance. About four o'clock Balleni appeared on the Canadian side and began to walk out, but after a few steps returned and ordered the cable to be tightened. When this was done, at 4:45 o'clock the start was made. "All action and conversation," says the Buffalo Express, in its report of the affair, "was now suspended, and every one's attention was given to the man on the rope, who marched along, apparently with the greatest ease, to the music of the Drummondsville band, which was stationed in front of the Clifton house. At 4:54 o'clock Balleni reached the middle of the rope, where he halted to return his salutation to the tremendous applause which greeted his exploit. After resting himself for a brief period the Signor again started on his tramp. This was the only stop made, and at 5.10 o'clock the perambulist looking as pale as death, had reached the American end of his rope, he having made the trip in twenty-five minutes. After another rest of thirteen minutes, Signor Balleni again took his pole in hand and was off to the middle of the rope to make the great leap. It took him just six minutes to arrive at the centre of the rope, and when there he at once began making preparations to jump. While thus engaged he lost his balancing pole, which fell into the water and sank. A cord six feet long, made of rubber bands, was attached to the rope at a point just 115 feet above the surface of the water. Balleni caught hold of one end of the elastic cord before the spectators thought he was ready to go. He descended like an arrow, and the recovering snap of the rubber was almost simultaneous with the loud splash of his fall in the water. No sooner was the splash heard than the head of the Signor came peeping out of the water, and he struck out vigorously and heartily toward the boat which was there to pick him up. He was quickly hauled into the little craft, carefully wrapped up with heavy blankets, and rowed to shore.

Ten Hen and Chicken Rules.

The following ten rules, applicable to sitting hens and young chickens, were contributed to the Mobile Register by a lady:

1. Never set a hen in a close box; give her plenty of room to turn about; she will not do well if cramped or crowded.

2. Always set her on the ground, if possible. The eggs will hatch best with the nest directly on the ground.

3. Don't give any hen more than thirteen eggs for a sitting. I know fifteen is the rule, but experience has taught me to consider fifteen just two too many.

4. Be careful to mark the eggs, for the other hens are apt to lay in the nest with your sitter, and unless the eggs are properly marked you might not be able to identify the new eggs. You understand that eggs laid to a sitting hen must be promptly removed.

5. Make a record of the time when you set your hen, in order that you may be looking out for the hatching.

6. Some eggs will invariably hatch a little sooner than others. Remove the young chicks at once, and keep them from the hen until all are hatched. If you do not the hen will be likely to quit the nest with the first comers, leaving the unhatched chicks to chill and die.

7. Don't pick at the bills of the little chicks in an effort to remove what some people call the "pip." It is all right and will disappear as soon as nature requires.

8. Never undertake to feed your sitting hens on the nest—it is a poor way. Let them come off for their food—they will not stay off too long. Nature knows what she is about. The eggs require about the amount of airing they receive while the hen is off for food.

9. See that the hen does not run about too much while the chicks are yet young—it will cause them to droop, and will sometimes give them a disease called the "spraddles."

10. Feed your young chicks on corn meal mixed with pure water, and don't mix it too wet. You want it so that it will crumble.

Japan Overrated.

Prof. Wm. E. Griffith, of the Imperial College, Yeddo, in a letter states that the Japanese have been unreasonably and damagingly flattered; that he believes Japan, instead of being a wealthy country, to be one of the poorest countries he has ever seen, and even compared with Asiatic countries it is not rich; that there are no reservoirs of accumulated wealth; that there is food enough for the people, solely because their food is rice, beans, and radishes; that there is timber and undeveloped mines, but the mining industry is paralyzed; that its treasury is nearly empty, and the finances are in a terrible condition; that the educational work in Japan will be crippled for years to come from the lack of hard cash; and that impecuniosity is the whooping-cough, measles and colic that form the complication of diseases which threaten the life of the infant education of Japan.

Gloucester lost thirty-six vessels, representing a tonnage of 35522 and a value of $38,000 and thirty-five lives in the storm off Nova Scotia. Despatches of Tuesday add to the grand list several more vessels and the loss of thirty or forty more lives. The Mahoning has gone to their assistance.

A convention of fire engineers is proposed to be held at Washington for the purpose of fixing upon a standard for hose, hydrants and discussing other kindred topics.

The Asiatic cholera has broken out at Okauville, Illinois, in a terrible form, and all efforts to prevent an epidemic are in vain. The disease has also appeared among the French troops at Havre.

There was a rumor in London, Tuesday, that the authorities in Madrid had proclaimed the commune, but it lacked confirmation. Vice Admiral Yelverton has taken the iron-clads Almanza and Vittoria from the harbor of Cartagena and sent them to Gibralter. The insurgents made no attempt to prevent the vessels from going. Serious socialistic troubles have broken out in Andalusia.

There is a rumor that Herschel V. Johnson, of Georgia, is to start a Democratic organ in Washington, or, rather, that the Democratic managers intend to found one with him as the editor. The last experiment in that direction was the Patriot.

Statistics show that the iron trade is departing from England and is being diverted toward the United States. A Pennsylvania correspondent says "that the manufacturers of that State are preparing to reap the iron harvest, and to that end are erecting new furnaces in all directions." Perhaps this accounts for the present active propagandism of the Free-trade party."

Chicago rejoices in the possession of a town clerk who can neither read nor write English. In addition, he is so ignorant of the law governing the duties of his position that a number of suits have been brought against the city. A row was made about it a few days ago, when he fell back upon his reserved rights under the Constitution, declaring that "he had only seven years in the country, and he thought that in that time he acquired a pretty good knowledge of the English language. Chicago is entirely too exacting.

The New York Times believes that "the great want of the South is diversified industry;" in other words, more manufactures of every class and description. Georgia, for instance, has a larger number of factories than any other Southern state and as a consequence she is more prosperous and her people more contented. If instead of talking over dead issues, and devising plots how to re-enslave blacks, the Southern politicians would devote their time and attention to the solution of these economic questions, it would be infinitely better for that section.

A Wolf Boy.

The Lucknow (India) Pioneer reports the arrival there of a novelty in the shape of a wolf boy. This young gentleman, who is now undergoing a process of taming in a lunatic asylum, was carried off by wolves when an infant, and has remained with them until a short time ago, when caught and recognized by his parents. His family, however, can hardly be congratulated on his restoration, for his wolf nursery (which by the way was purely secular) seems to have been very defective. His manners are not only disagreeable but peculiar. At first he walked on all fours, though now he has been induced to walk on his two feet only, like a reasonable being; he has long hair on his head, and his body is considerably scarred, and he cannot speak, nor can he understand a single word. His parents suffered many inconveniences on his first arrival home, owing to his frequently attacking and trying to devour them by night, and, indeed, it was owing to his persistence in this unfilial conduct that they were compelled in self-defence to place him under medical surveillance. He also, among other disagreeable habits, tears raw meat to pieces with his teeth, and eats it ravenously like a wild beast, and bites and snaps at any one who tries to tame him. This last little weakness would in no way have disqualified him for the post of Judge Advocate-General, had he happened to be in England at the time of the reconstruction of the ministry; but it seems doubtful whether he will ever be thoroughly cured of all his other propensities, which, however, will enable him, by exhibiting himself to civilized countries, to amass a far larger fortune than he is likely to make if he is converted into merely a useful member of society.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 86.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

AN ALMANAC FOR 1775. Have one in my possession. It was the property of Gov. Meshech Weare of Hampton Falls, and was left among his papers. On the margin of the calendar for April in his hand writing is this record, "Battle of Lexington and Concord, 19." In that of June is this, "Battle at Charlestown 17." This was the battle of Bunker Hill.

This almanac was by Isaiah Thomas, a printer in Boston. Its title is, "Thomas' New England Almanack, or the Massachusetts Callendar for the year of our Lord Christ 1775." At the bottom of the page is this, "Massachusettis Bay, Boston. Printed and sold by Isaiah Thomas at his Printing Office, the South Corner of Marshall's Lane, near the Mill Bridge."

This Isaiah Thomas was the publisher of a paper called "The Massachusetts Spy." It commenced in 1771. After the British forces took possession of Boston, Mr. Thomas moved the paper to Worcester where he continued it for many years. It has been continued by others to this day. The testimony of George Wadleigh, Esq. of Dover, long publisher of the Enquirer of that town, is, that Mr. Thomas was the most famous printer of his time, after Franklin.

This almanac is a model of completeness and perfection for that time. I doubt whether it was excelled in the last century. It contains 24 pages and they are crowded with matter, besides the astronomical calculations, poetry and prose, much of which is interesting. The paper used was good for the time, although it would be considered poor now. As a whole the mechanical execution is good.

On the first page is a wood cut of a globe, various mathematical instruments, and a man in a tunic coat with a telescope pointed to the starry heavens above. On the title page, after the year 1775, is a list of important events and the number of years from them to the year of this almanac. The chronology used in some cases must have been different from that generally received now, and the ciphering to get the results as to time in other cases admits of some criticism. The first item is, "From the creation of the World according to the best of Prophane History," (the capitals and spelling is preserved,) 5724. "But by the account of the Holy Scriptures 5737." On this last it may be said by Usher's Chronology, now largely received, the number of years from the creation to 1775 would be 5779. Next it is said "From Noah's Flood 4069." By Usher it is 3441. "From the building of Rome 2926." The most reliable accounts are that Rome was built B. C. 753. This would give 2528 years." "From the time New England was first planted 166," we call the planting of New England in 1620. That would make 155 instead of 166. "Planting of Massachusetts Bay 147." This is correct. Building of Boston, the capital of New England 145," correct. "Founding of Harvard College 136." About correct. The date of the founding of the College is put down usually 1638. "Of King George the III.'s reign 15." Correct.

There were to be four eclipses, only one and that of the moon, visible. There were but seven planets known then. Their names are given and characters to denote them.

There is poetry at the callendar pages. Then prose. In that of January is this wise suggestion which it is trusted some followed, "Old bachelors and decayed widowers will do well to match with rich maids and wealthy widows if either they can find." In June it is said, "A man had better marry a wife of gingerbread than a scold, for if he is hungry he can eat the one, but he shall hardly lick his lips at the other." No objection to this, but a hit upon cross, crabby husbands should have been given, for there are as many of them as scolding wives.

The weather predictions are very carefully and cautiously stated, so that many of them must have proved correct. Then in the same column, wit, wisdom and good advice are thrown in. A specimen or two will be given early in March of this. "If you would have good sapping beer, This time is the best of all the year." In June it is said, "Cowards die many times, the valiant never taste death but once." In December it is said, perhaps correctly, "A good time to marry, a good bed and bed-fellow are very comfortable things." At the close of the month there is seriousness and moralizing thus. "Vain are all things under the sun; Time flies away, the year is done."

The pages in the latter part are well filled, ending with the principal roads leading from Boston, the towns through which they pass and the names of those who kept them.

Tichborne Claimant's Counsel.

Of the defendent's counsel in the Tichborne case, a correspondent writes: "Dr. Kneally, the defendant's attorney, has been occupying the week with his speech, and though he certainly has not done his pondereour client any good, he has made a sensation. He is a man of much force, a rather fleshy, strong-built man, with bright, flashing eyes behind his preternaturally bright spectacles, gesticulates with his fist in such a vigorous way as to make many listeners content with a remote position in the room. His face colors with what seems wrath, and his voice makes the room tremble and the Judge curn pale. He pitches into witnesses, and into the Tichborne family generally, in a startling way, not sparing Mrs. Radcliffe. The only point that he seems likely to succeed in demonstrating is that the said Roger—the real Roger—was a scottish Kind of fellow, and pruriently minded. It is odd that a barrister should be trying to make out that a certain man was a scoundrel in order to prove his identity with his client; but it is just that which Knealy, Q. C., is laboring at just now. This case grows in strangeness as it goes on, and, whatever the result, will surely stand in history as the great legal phenomenon of our time."

American Drinks at the Vienna Exhibition.

The special correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph at Vienna, writing on Aug. 11, after a week of very hot weather, says: "The American bars, three in number, drove a roaring trade. The Austrians have taken to cobblers and juleps with a heartiness bordering on enthusiasm, although, these nectarian compounds being somewhat expensive, the native consumer seldom goes in for a whole drink all to himself; and there are few quainter sights in the big building, crowded as it is with extraordinary objects, than three heavily-bearded and spectacled Viennese sitting round a small marble-topped table, on which stands one amber-colored sherry-cobbler, their three straws plunged into its cool depths, their three heads in close proximity, their powers of suction strained to top pressure, lest any one of the three should get the better of his co-investors in the beverage to the extent of half a teaspoonful. Under the influence of this virtuous emulation, the cobbler vanishes like the card of a conjuror's trick, after which each competitor imbibes a huge draught of cold water, for which there is no charge, and pockets his straw. The straws are immensely popular here. I have seen persons of both sexes sucking up beer, coffee, and 'plain soda' through them with an evident sense of exquisite and refined enjoyment. The bar-keepers tell me that the Austrian and German ladies generally carry them away in their hair, through the frizzy masses of which they stick them in the manner of pins. The bar in the Rotunda started with a stock of 300,000, but has been obliged to renew its supplies twice since commencing business. About a hundred different descriptions of artful drink are made at this bar; but the only one that seems to have laid hold of the Austrian public is the cobbler. Ten cobblers are drunk for every julep, cocktail, sling, smash, fix, or champarello. The drinking kiosques outside the building—English and German—have found it to their interest to provide cobblers for their insatiable customers."

A Sharp Trick.

The railroad companies do not often manage to get caught in their own traps, but two New Jersey ladies recently played a very sharp game on the Morris officials. These ladies had seventeen trunks with them; for, be it known, they were going to a watering place. When they showed their tickets to the baggage master and desired him to check their seventeen trunks, he demurred, saying that each passenger was allowed but one hundred pounds of baggage, and that the fifteen extra trunks would have to be paid for. The ladies remonstrated, but in vain; so they demanded to know the additional charges they would have to pay, and were informed that the extra trunks would cost them $1 each. Now it so happens that the passenger is carried over the road for eighty cents, and is allowed to take one trunk. The young ladies remembering this, went to the ticket office and bought fifteen more tickets. They showed these to the baggage man. And he checked the trunks as for fifteen passengers. The ladies saved three dollars by the operation, and have fifteen tickets worth twelve dollars into the bargain, for the conductor of course, only took up two tickets, and, as these are good till used, the company may be called upon, any day, to transport fifteen passengers with fifteen trunks, between New York and Morristown. Now that is what we call a very neat operation, and is another argument to be added to the many already enumerated in favor of the fitness of women to manage their own affairs.

Perils of Ballooning.

A large balloon was started some days ago from a pleasure garden in San Francisco, an acrobat named Buislay performing various feats on a trapeze suspended where the car usually hangs. As the balloon rose, and was passing away from the garden a gust of wind drove it on a tall pole, the sharp point of which tore out a large strip of the silk, making an opening three feet across. The rest is thus described by the local papers: "Notwithstanding this huge opening the balloon continued to ascend, and must have remained up at least ten minutes. The aeronaut, nothing daunted by the disaster, went through all his perilous performances on the light trapeze. The balloon now began to drift rapidly toward the bay, slowly falling as it was driven on by the wind. Buislay's position then became perilous in the extreme. The wind was pretty strong, and the large inflated mass was wholly uncontrollable, swaying in every direction and swinging the gymnast about in a manner that was fearful to witness. Ever falling lower and lower the balloon rapidly approached the extremity of Long bridge. Here the situation of the man became fearfully desperate—the balloon would evidently dash the trapeze and its human freight against the high poles of the telegraph wires that was strung to them. There was but one chance of escape. Taking one glance at his position, Buislay flung himself from the short bar of the trapeze into the waters of the bay, a distance but little less than forty feet. Accoutred as he was, in his gymnastic dress, his movements were unimpeded, and after a short struggle he reached the mud-flats, and at last succeeded in reaching the shore, though in an exhausted condition. The balloon meanwhile had struck tearing down several poles and twisting up the telegraph wires generally. It finally caught in some loose piles a short distance off, and anchored on the mud-flats."

—A man in Maine writes that he has discovered a sure cure for consumption in strong mullen-leaf tea, sweetened and drank freely every day from three to six months. The mullein leaves, unless from young plants, must be gathered before July 24th and dried in the shade.

Vegetine thoroughly eradicates every kind of humor, and restores the entire system to a healthy condition.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have a perfect combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We our them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Blessed are they who seek relief from "Liver Complaint," "Biliousness," Bad Blood, Pimples, Blotches, Eruptions, Rough Skin, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, and Scrofulous diseases, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext. or Golden Medical Discovery, for they shall be happy in knowing that the cure is complete. Sold by Druggists. 6t4

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, briskness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, depending victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not reduce, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-aches, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or wrenched horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff, and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, acts quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH ANN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

Portsmouth Conservatory of Music,

NO. 78 State Street,

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $5, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and applications for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent its attendance at school; for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:—

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

Newcastle, Aug. 12, 1873. aug13-tf

Local Matters.

Laconics.

The excursionists who are going down river in the steamer Appledore this evening will have a nice time, unless the crowd should be so large as to render moving about the deck inconvenient. The tickets are fifty cents for the round trip—cheap enough for an evening sail.

Another kerosene oil accident happened in a store in this city an evening or two since, and the building was saved from taking fire by the presence of mind of the store keeper, who seized the broken lamp and its burning contents and threw it in the street. When will the public appreciate the necessity of buying the best oil in the market.

A fishing schooner called the Alfaretta, Capt. Trussell, owned by Marvin Bros. & Bartlett of this city, struck a rock while sailing down river on Tuesday, and was obliged to put into Newcastle for repairs. The captain was no doubt curious in regard to the knowledge of the precise locality of the sunken rocks in our river, and he may well congratulate himself that he has found one of them at least.

The York County Independent speaking of the excursion of Kearsarge S. F. E. Co. No. 3 to Biddeford, says that "nothing occurred to mar the enjoyment and the visitors went to their homes feeling that the Ebens are not to be beaten, either at the post of duty, at musters, or in dispensing hospitality, and the Ebens may well be proud of the fact, that they gave the most successful, quiet and orderly firemen's reception ever given in this vicinity. Capt. Pike, Asst. D. Morse, the genial Clerk, James Beaumont, Engineer Henry and others of the committee deserve much praise." That is what our firemen think, Brother Independent.

The Nova Scotia Storm.

The great storm which began on Sunday, the 23d ult., raged almost continually for a week along the coasts and through the seaborders of Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and other British colonies along the edge of this continent.

There is a long line of rough coast literally strewn thickly with wrecked vessels of all kinds and sizes. The greater provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, as well as the smaller ones of Cape Breton and Prince Edwards Island, appear to have suffered to an extent scarcely to be estimated in dollars and cents. Names of wrecked vessels are given in groups of five and ten, and unnamed wrecks are counted by the score—yes, even in some localities by hundreds. Scarce a cove, a port, or a point on the whole coast is without its fragmentary evidences, in the shape of beached hulls, splintered spars, and tangled cordage and sails, that the great storm did a damage beyond that inflicted by almost any such previous occurrence within the memory of the oldest dwellers by the seaside.

Port Malgram has seven wrecks, Pirate Cave four, Port Hawkesburg four, and Port Hood four. But the effects at Cow Bay seem to make all the other marine damages appear insignificant. One steamer arriving from there reports, by name, eleven schooners and six brigs piled out on the rocks, and mentions, besides these, a large number of dismantled vessels.

From Sydney Harbor we get the names of fifteen schooners and two barks. When it is remembered that each one of these unnumbered losses represents the living of several families, and, in many cases, the entire worldly wealth of one or more individual owners, we shall comprehend that such a storm in its results finds something like an analogy in the great disasters which, within recent years, have devastated two of the great cities of this nation.

And then there is to be added to these disasters to the shipping the losses to the crops of fruit and grain, and the damage to docks, stores, residences and churches in the territory bordering along the coast. Beyond these immediate effects the storm-king reaches the commercial and social interests of a vast extent of country. Not only is the wail of woe over the work of death heard in many homes; but the very sources of food supply and domestic support are grievously touched. Fishing crafts go down by scores and the markets, surprised by an advance in prices of that class of food, now become one of the most important known to commerce. Colliers by dozens are dismantled, and the fuel rates go up in proportion.

And after all that can be written still we have no adequate idea of the great storm, but can only see in it some of the wonderful workings of that mysterious Providence which can neither be comprehended by the human mind, nor its power described in human language.

What the Democratic Politicians Expect.

The New York Times prints a long letter, written from Washington, reviewing the origin, progress and purposes of the Western farmers' grange movement, and concludes with the following paragraph: "It is expected by the Democratic politicians that they will be able to draw to the ranks of the new party all those members of the old parties whose past record and known sympathies are on the side of free trade, and it is also expected that this movement will succeed in accomplishing what has never yet been done—the erection of a division in the strength and affiliations of the colored vote South. If the plans of the politicians are sufficiently developed by the time of the meeting of the next Congress the political programme for the future will then be formed, and the various leaderships acquired or assigned. It seems altogether probable that the issues which are to be maintained by the new party will be sufficiently crystallized, and the organization be sufficiently mobilized, to make a vigorous campaign in the Congressional elections of next year. The central issue around which the other issues will group themselves promises to be the contest between protection and free-trade."

Wisconsin.

Another "new departure" has been attempted. This time it is in Wisconsin. Geo. H. Paul, chairman of the democratic committee, and Emil Walker, chairman of the liberal committee of the State, have joined in a call for a convention, to be held in Milwaukee on the 14th instant. The telegram announces that "it is left to the convention to give the new movement a name and a platform." From all this it is reasonable to expect a repetition of the Ohio farce will occur. But it is probable that the democratic adherence to the new fizzle in Wisconsin will be greater than it was in Ohio, for the reason that the prospects of success for the regular democratic organization are not so encouraging in the Badger State. In fact, it is not improbable that the coalition may be perfected so completely as to swallow up the democratic organization entire. In any event, Governor Washburn will be re-elected by the usual republican majority.

—The champion mean man lives West. He has been married four times. When his second wife died, he split his first wife's tombstone, and laid the two bodies side by side, each with a half slab. When his last two wives departed, he placed them in graves head to head with the first two, so that the split stone would do for all four. He will not marry again, for fear he cannot utilize that stone again in case that there is another death in the family. His neighbors do say that he buried his aunt at the foot of his grape vine so that she would be useful as a nourisher of the plant. If this is true, our mean man beats the parsimonious Frenchman who, after blowing the fire, used to put a cork in the nozzle of the bellows in order to save the wind for next time; and he removes the scalp of our old acquaintance who always saved the back-bone of the shad in order to avoid buying combs for his family, and who chopped off his hog's tail, so that having lost a portion of his flesh and sinew, the animal would require a smaller amount of food to sustain him.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic,

CURING

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or diseased organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and the best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

JAMES C. BROWN, DEPUTY SHERIFF,
Office No. 35 Market Street.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—A hot tempered Danbury woman who finds considerable trouble in persuading her husband to furnish kindling, and then is obliged to do it herself, read in a religious paper, Monday, of how a wife induced a wicked husband to become one of the most affectionate and hopeful of men, by being invariably calm and loving with him. The story made a deep impression upon her and when she started the fire that noon, she put a pair of rubbers among the wood. Then she tied a handkerchief across her nose, and went on with her work. When the husband reached the gate, he paused, fetched a sniff that made a hole in the atmosphere, and then went around to the back of the house, and fetched another sniff that had an equally damaging effect on the atmosphere; he stared into the next yard and up at his own house, and felt in his pockets, and was about to go around to the front again, when his wife thrust her head out of the window, and said, "Why don't you come in the house, you old fool? Come in and get your dinner, and let me read an article to you from the Christian Secretary, you old rip. Come in and see how nice it is to get dinner with nothing to burn but rubbers, you white sepulchre. Come in here, I tell you, before I lose my temper, and say what I oughtn't to." At this invitation he went in, going up the stoop and to the door very slowly, but, on opening the door, disappeared inside with marvellous suddenness. The neighbors say he was cutting wood all that afternoon and thinking of the religious press.

—There is now growing in an orchard in Petersham, Mass., lately belonging to Rev. Aaron Whitney, deceased, an apple tree, very singular with respect to its fruit. The apples are fair, and when fully ripe, of a yellow color, but evidently of different tastes, sour and sweet. The part which is sour is not very tart, nor the other very sweet. Two apples, growing side by side, on the same limb, will be of different tastes, the one all sour, and the other all sweet; and what is more remarkable, the same apple will be sour on one side, end, or part, and the other sweet; and that not in any order or uniformity; nor is there any difference in the appearance of the one part from the other. And as to the quantity, some have more of the acid and less of the sweet, and vice versa. Neither are the apples so different in their tastes, peculiar to any particular branches, but are found promiscuously on any and every branch of the tree. The tree stands almost in the midst of a large orchard in a rich and strong soil, and was transplanted there about fifty years ago. There is no appearance of the trunk or any of the branches having been ingrafted or inoculated. It was a number of years after it had borne fruit before those different tastes were noticed, but since they were first discovered, which is upwards of thirty years, there has been constantly the same variety observed in the taste of the fruit of this tree.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron, in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

Be sure that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN
HAIR RENEWER!
This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.
It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.
This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

Daily Chronicle.

BRIGHAM'S WIVES.

[Chicago Tribune.]

It is not a little curious that Mrs. Ann Eliza Webb Young, wife No. 17 of Brigham Young, should have been wholly unknown until her divorce suit brought her to notice. We know of many Mrs. Young, but never heard of Ann Eliza until quite lately. There is or was Mary Ann Angell Young, Lucy Decker Seeley Young, Clara Decker Young, Harriet Cook Young, Lucy Bigelow Young Mrs. Twist Young, Martha Barker Young, Harriet Barney Young, Eliza Burgess Young, Ellen Rockwood Young, Susan Snively Young, Jemima Angela Young, Margaret Pierce Young, Mrs. Hampden Young, Eliza Roxy Snow Young, Zina Huntington Young, Amelia Partridge Young, Augusta Cobb Young, Mrs. Smith Young, Clara Chase Young, Amelia Folsom Young, and one or two others; but nowhere do we find set down among the wives of the Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, such a person as Ann Eliza Webb Young. Yet that she is one of the many wives of Brigham is certain; and that she should have escaped notice is by no means surprising, as who could keep the tally of such a crowd of Mrs. Young? Even the Prophet is not to be blamed for neglecting her,—for what husband could divide his time among twenty, or even ten wives, so as to make every one think she had her full share of attention?

Now that Brigham has bought Ann Eliza with a cool $15,000, we ought to enquire who the rest of the Mrs. Young are,—for, with such an example before them, it is hardly possible the others will remain quiet, and Brigham will no doubt soon have as many divorce-suits entered against him as there are indictments in New York against Boss Tweed.

First we have Mary Ann Angell Young, who is the first and legal wife of Brigham Young, and who ranks as

No. 1 in the Prophet's household. She does not live with Brigham, but occupies a separate house. She has five children; Joseph, Brigham, John, Alice and Luna. Joseph, Brigham and John are said to be the smartest of Brigham's children. Alice is the wife of Hiram Clawson, and Luna is also married to a Mormon gentleman. Mrs. Young No. 1 is a large, fine-looking old lady, with gray hair, hazel eyes, and most dignified manners.

No. 2, Lucy Decker Seeley Young—is the first plural wife of the Prophet. Her first husband, Isaac Seeley, by whom she had two children, was a Mormon and a man of dissipated habits. She left her husband to become a wife of the Prophet in this world and a queen in the next. She is a fat, good-natured little woman, with a fair face, brown hair, dark eyes, and small features. She has a son by the Prophet, who is called Brigham Heber Young.

No. 2, Clara Decker Young—is a sister of Lucy, and said to be more agreeable, intelligent, and in every way superior to Mrs. Young No. 2. She is also short, thick-set, quite good looking, and a favorite of Brigham. She has three children.

No. 4, Harriet Cook Young—joined Brigham at Winter Quarters, on the Missouri, and, there being no polygamy at that time, was sealed to the Prophet. She is tall, has light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, and a sharp nose. She has one son, Oscar, by the Prophet.

No. 5, Lucy Bigelow Young—is a lady-like person and a good talker. She is quite pretty, has blue eyes, brown hair, aquiline nose, pleasant smile, and affable manners. She dresses well, is lively, and loves society.

No. 6, Mrs. Twiss Young—has no children; is stout, low-set freckled, red-haired, and a good wife. She does up the Prophet's linen.

No. 7, Martha Barker Young—is a quiet woman, with a quick temper; dresses well, but is not smart; is low-set, and has black hair and eyes.

No. 8, Harriet Barney Young—is a tall, slender woman, with hazel eyes, brown hair, and a pleasant, mild face. In the world she would be called handsome. She left her husband to become Brigham's wife. She had three children by her first husband, but has none by Brigham.

No. 9, Eliza Burgess Young—was an English girl whom Brigham raised, her parents both dying at Nauzoo, where they had immigrated from Manchester. Eliza lived seven years with Brigham, and then he couldn't spare her.

No. 10, Ellen Rockwood Young—is a slender woman, with light hair, brown eyes, fair complexion, and quiet manners. Was the daughter of a Utah official. She is delicate, and loves needlework, and seldom sees Brigham. She has no children.

No. 11, Susan Snively Young—is an old-ish woman, with dark complexion and hair and steel-gray eyes. Is very quiet, and has no children.

No. 12, Jemima Angell Young—is a sister of Mrs. Young No. 1. She is old and fat. Her first husband died out of the church, so she wanted to be sealed to Brigham to make a sure thing of Heaven for herself. Brigham don't pester her any.

No. 13, Margaret Alley Young—was a long-faced, mild-countenanced and smooth-mannered person, with light hair and eyes. She died some years ago, and left two children. It is said she died of melancholy, caused by the neglect of her husband.

No. 14, Margaret Pierce Young—has a sharp nose, blue eyes, light hair, and variable temper. Has several children, but the Prophet is said not to care for her.

No. 15, Mrs. Hampton Young—is a fine woman, of noble presence, with large eyes, round features, dark masses of hair, and fair complexion. Was a widow before she married Brigham, and had six children by Hampton, who died, and then Brigham seized—no, sealed her.

No. 16, Mary Bigelow Young—was sealed to Brigham at "Winter Quarters," and came to Utah with him. Soon afterward she ran away, and what became of her is not known. If living, she will now no doubt turn up and claim her $15,000.

No. 17, Emeline Free—Here is a conflict irrepressible in its nature. Two bodies cannot occupy the same space at the same time, neither can two wives occupy the same husband at the same time. According to my count, Emeline Free is the seventeenth wife of the Prophet, but I suppose we must admit Ann Eliza's claim to No. 17, "see" Emeline, and "raise her one." Emeline is tall, graceful, mild and sweet as a violet. Her hair curls naturally, and she has beautiful eyes. The Prophet is very fond of this woman, and sometimes calls her "the joy of his heart."

No. 18, Eliza Roxy Snow—is a literary woman, and called "The Sweet Singer of Israel." She writes church verses very well, and is fond of books, birds, and flowers. In stature she is rather small, has dark eyes, hair streaked with gray, and is quite ladylike, and dignified in her manners.

No. 19, Zina Huntington Jacobs—is a fine, large woman, well formed, and has light hair and eyes. She has three children of her own and takes care of three others, the orphans of a dead wife of Brigham. Her first husband was a Dr. Jacobs, who, it is said, Young sent on a mission, and, while he was off, appropriated the wife and children. Jacobs was living not long ago in California.

No. 20, Amelia Patridge Young—is a tall, dark complexioned, dark haired woman, of most amiable disposition. She was a servant in Joseph Smith's family. Amelia has four children, and is devoted to them. She is a good and very loveable woman.

No. 21, Augusta Cobb Young—is a handsome lady, of refined manners and dignified address. She formerly lived in Boston, but left her husband and a good home to join Brigham. Her daughter Charlotte was, a few years ago, said to be the handsomest girl in Utah. Mrs. Cobb is a spirited woman, and once in a huff left Brigham and went to Boston, where she stayed two years, but finally returned to Utah. Her son, James Cobb, a very smart young man, is also a Mormon. He came out from the East to bring away his mother and sister, but "The hand of God fell heavily upon him," and he himself became a devoted Mormon.

No. 28, Mrs. Smith Young—is an elderly lady, who loved and admired Brigham, and to please her, he sealed her to himself for time, and to Joseph A. Smith for eternity. He cares not a straw for her.

No. 23, Clara Chase Young—became a maniac. She is said to have been of a sensitive disposition, and, when she saw Brigham lavish his affections on other women of the harem, it drove her mad. Brother Brig was kind to her, but could not reconcile her to her twenty-third part of a husband. She was small of stature, had dark hair and eyes, low forehead, and a melancholy face. She had four children by the Prophet, two of whom are living, and are taken care of by Mrs. Huntington.

No. 24, Amelia Folsom Young—is said to be the favorite wife of the Prophet, and the only one in the whole batch, except Ann Eliza, he cannot manage. She is young, tall, well-formed, with light hair and eyes, and sings and plays well. She is pale, and vindictive-looking, and it is said, gets violently angry, and breaks things occasionally. She loves dress, horses, society, sight-seeing, and is a woman born to shine wherever she goes. I am told she has "brought old Brigham out" since she married him. Certain it is he dresses better, wears jewelry, and is more a man of fashion than ever before. They say she almost made him go to the sea-shore this season, and take her to the exclusion of all the other Mrs. Youngs. Only think what a sensation "Mr. and Mrs. Brigham Young, Salt Lake," would create at Long Branch or Cape May! People would hold their breath when they read such an entry on the register. And then what a time the other twenty-nine Mrs. Young would have at home while the fair Amelia and her lord were off at Long Branch enjoying themselves. We venture to say Brigham will never go to the sea-shore with one wife, and leave the twenty-nine others to pine alone at home.

At the time Amelia was married, it was given out that she was the twenty-ninth wife; and, if this is true we can give no account of Nos. 25, 26, 27 and 28. One of the missing Pleiades has come to light in the refractory Eliza Ann Webb Young, leaving only three to be accounted for, and, no doubt, if not dead, they will all turn up in due time. Since Brigham's marriage to Amelia, the papers have married him three times which would give him thirty-two wives in all, three of whom are dead, one run away, and one seceded—leaving him a domesticity of twenty-seven wives.

What do the women do? Well, they do everything they can to pass away the time, and Brigham's household is not a place of idleness. Emeline sings and plays; Roxy Snow writes poems; Zina Huntington takes care of children and amuses them; Twiss washes and sews; Emeline Free takes care of her children, of whom she has or had eight; Ellen Rockwood works embroidery; others spin, some still weave, others sew, read novels, and sleep. On rising in the morning, each wife cleans up her own room, dresses her children, and prepares for breakfast. At the ringing of the bell, the whole family assemble in the parlor, and sing together; Young prays fervently, and they go to breakfast. Formerly the Prophet ate with his wives,—they and their children being ranged along the table in the great dining-hall; but now Brigham breakfasts alone, his morning meal consisting often of only some bread, butter, and a cup of milk.

The wives are generally well-dressed, neat and tidy. They work hard at something, and their minds being occupied, they are less liable to become discontented and unhappy. The women are infatuated with their religion, and live rather for the world to come than this one. Brigham promises they shall all be queens in eternity, and, as woman is to be queen, world without end, over her own offspring, it behooves her to have as many children as possible while in the flesh and on earth. Those who have no children are in rather a bad fix, but Brigham says they shall not be wholly overlooked in the next world, if they behave well and help take care of children while in this one. Brigham has a school for his children, and they are taught English, French, music and dancing.

Many amusing incidents in the lives of Brigham's wives might be related, but this letter is already too long to make room for any but the following: "One evening, Amelia had a lady-friend to tea with her, and the favorite wife behaved quite naughtily to Brigham. After the tray was removed, they remained at table eating nuts and confections. Amelia threw her hulls across the room and out of an opposite window. Her husband, annoyed at this, finally said, "Amelia, dear, don't do that; put your shells by your plate." "I shan't do it," replied Amelia; "I'll throw them where I please." Young for a time was silent, but, becoming terribly annoyed, again said, "Please Amelia, I wish you wouldn't do that any more." "I don't care," said the pretty Amelia pettishly; "I'll throw my shells where I please, and I'll do as I please, and you may help yourself;" and, pulling the sleeve of her visitor, she said aloud, "Come, let us go up stairs, and leave him here to grunt it out!"

In Brigham Young's house, on the third story, in room No. 34, lives, or did live, a Mrs. Weston. Who she is, or what she is, no one can or will tell. She may be one of Brigham's many wives, but neither Mrs. Stenhouse nor Mrs. Waite knows anything about her; and, if they can't tell, who can?

Brigham Young is really one of the most remarkable men of modern times, and if he had let polygamy alone, or would put it away yet, America would be proud of him, and delight to honor him.

Political Notes.

Maine is having a very quiet time, politically, and yet, on Monday next it will hold its annual election for Governor, members of both Houses of its legislature, County officers, &c. It is not expected that the vote will be large, yet, as the Bourbon element of the democratic party has obtained control this year, it will doubtless be a matter of pride with the leaders of that wing of the party to get out as many of their voters as they can. The leading candidates for Governor are Nelson Dingley, Jr., republican, and Joseph Titcomb, democrat. Then then there are what are called "People's Reform Nominations" in some counties, and their advocates are running Joseph H. Williams for Governor. The vote of Maine for President, last year, was: Grant, 61,422; Greeley, 29,087. In September last the vote for Governor was: Perham, republican, 71,917; Kimball, democrat, 54,701. There was 135 republican majority on joint ballot in the legislature.

The arrangements for the Massachusetts Republican State Convention, to be held in Worcester on Wednesday next, are being rapidly forwarded. At a meeting of the State Committee, Hon. D. W. Gooch, of Melrose, has been unanimously chosen to preside. The name of Hon. George S. Boutwell had been previously mentioned but it was authoritatively stated that he could not accept the position.

The politicians of Texas have not yet fairly entered upon the struggle for supremacy, to be decided at the election to be held in December next. But as the republicans have already made their nominations, we may expect affairs politically soon to become lively in that far-off section. The approaching election is to be one of the most important ever held in the State, and as there has not been any general election in the State since 1869 we may expect to find it hotly contested.

Jeff. Davis finds here and there in the South an apologist or defender. One writer alludes to him as "poor Davis," and seems to think it very hard that Southerners should condemn him for his treasonable utterances before the Southern Historical Convention. And the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser and Mail wants to know what is to become of us if the right of free speech is to be denied to American citizens. "The question," it says, "of most real importance after all is, shall a citizen of the United States be practically refused the right to address a lawful meeting of his fellow-citizens who may request him to address them, and there to announce and to maintain what he believes to be truth on subjects interesting to himself and his audience?" If Davis would speak as a citizen of the United States he might interest a great many more than he now does.

Hon. Hiram R. Revels, formerly United States Senator, has resigned his office of Secretary of State of Mississippi, intending to confine himself more closely to his important and pressing duties as President of Alcorn University. In his letter to Gov. Powers he says that he took the Secretaryship at the beginning of the year at his request, "to prevent trouble which was growing out of the rival claims of different gentlemen for that position, each applicant intending to appear before the State Convention," and as the Convention has been held and the nomination made, no difficulty can now arise from any appointment he sees fit to make.

Readables.

Oakes Ames' brother and executor says that his estate will not settle more than $2,000,000, or about one-third what was estimated at his death. The net results of all his Pacific Railroad operations and speculations turns out a positive loss.

The farmers of Minnesota have nominated a State ticket.

Ex-Mayor Gaston of Boston is the democratic nominee for Governor of Massachusetts.

The Boston & Maine Railroad is now applying the Smith vacuum brake to their trains, concluding it to be the cheapest and as effective as any other.

If a man's whole life-object is to make dollars, he will be running against those who are making dollars. If his whole object is to get applause, he will run against those who are seeking applause. But if he rises higher than that, he will not be interrupted in his flight heavenward.

State News.

Two or three days ago a fire in the woods at Hooksett destroyed three or four hundred cords of dry wood belonging to Natt and William F. Head. The fire was set by some boys who were smoking.

The Diary of a Vagrant.

A drunken vagrant was recently picked up in the streets of Marysville, Cal., and escorted to the station house. In his pocket was found a pocketbook diary, quite a literary curiosity. The entries covered about a year of the fellow's existence. It begins Sept. 1, reached Marysville and met several of the boys. Sept. 4, election day, voted in three wards. 5, bought some clothes, $30. 8, went over to Yuba City and got drunk. 15, dead broke. (This was probably about the time his election money gave out.) 22, went to work on a ranch with a heavy heart. (The depressing effect of manual labor upon his spirits is illustrated by the following extracts.) 23, all the world seems sad to me. 24, I wish I was dead. 25, weather drizzily and damp; —— this cursed place. 26, worked all day; this is an awful hole to live in. (Nothing is kept in the diary after this until Jan. 2, when it is evident that he drove dull care away by sparking the farmer's daughter.) Jan. 2, took Sallie up to Jim's ranch; had a nice time. Jan. 5, helped Sallie about the house all day; I feel a new life in me now. Jan. 10, asked Sallie to marry me and she refused; weather cold and cheerless. Jan. 11, went to Marysville after a doctor for Jim's wife; it was a fine boy. Jan. 15, went back to Marysville to stay. Jan. 20, had all my clothes stolen. Feb. 8, feel too sick to work. March 1, go to work with a sad heart. March 12, went over to the Junction and imbibed a little with Jack. March 15, Summerland tried to have me get my life insured; feel quite sick. July 4, got on a big drunk. July 18, tried to borrow a dollar but couldn't; this is a sad world to live in; "Full many a flower is born to blush unseen." Sept. 20, I propose to clear out of this town as quick as I can. This is the last entry and he is now in jail for vagrancy.

British Emigrants.

The Emigration Commissioners in Great Britain have recently published some statistics showing the total emigration from the United Kingdom for every year from 1815 to 1819 inclusive, the number of emigrants was 97,799; from 1820 to 1824, 95,,030; from 1825 to 1829, 121,084; from 1830 to 1834, 381,956; from 1835 to 1839, 287,358; from 1840 to 1844, 465,577; from 1845 to 1849, 1,029,209; from 1850 to 1854, 1,638,,945; from 1855 to 1859, 800,640; from 1860 to 1864, 744,111; from 1865 to 1869, 1,064,,983, and during the last three years, 804,,558. Thus, in all, 7,561,285 persons have emigrated during the last fifty-eight years from the United Kingdom, of whom 4,905,,262 came to the United States, 1,456,647 to the North American colonies, 1,016,526, went to Australia and New Zealand, and 182,850 to other places. It is to be remembered, however, that many of these emigrants were not natives of the United Kingdom. For instance, in 1872 the number of foreigners who emigrated through England was 79,023, or 26.76 per cent. of the whole emigration, and the proportion seems to be annually increasing, while the number of English who emigrate do not keep pace with those of most other nationalities.

—An exchange says: "There is somewhat supremely ridiculous in the idea of putting Abraham Lincoln's likeness over the bung-hole of every keg of beer that is manufactured, and yet this is done in accordance with the law of the Congress of the United States."

The Weather Report.

The value of the weather report furnished daily by the Government has frequently been demonstrated, but we have now more emphatic evidence of its great usefulness and meteorological accuracy. This evidence is furnished by Captain Felberg, of the German steamer E. M. Arndt, plying between Havre and New York. The Arndt sailed from Havre, August 8, and when six days at sea lost her screw. On August 10 Captain Felberg spoke an outward-bound steamer, from which he obtained a copy of an American newspaper containing the weather report, in which "northerly winds and high pressure for New England" was predicted. This prediction induced the captain to maintain as much as possible a northerly course, and he was enabled to reach New York in safety. From this circumstance the New York Herald argues that a system might be perfected by which the weather bulletins of the office might be made known to incoming ships by those bound outward. This would be a splendid and invaluable service to commerce, and we can see no reason why the suggestion should not be given practical effect. The experience of the steamer Arndt shows at once its practicability and advantages.

—A Hartford gentleman who had tarried late at a wine supper, found his wife waiting his return, in a high state of nervousness. Said she—"Here I've been waiting, and rocking in the chair 'till my head spins round like a top!" "Jess so, wife, where I've been," responded he. "It's in the atmosphere!"

—When there is not a breath of air stirring, and you are in danger of stifling, attempt to light a segar out of doors, and you will be surprised at the breeze that will start up. We have seen a man try this experiment in a real calm, and by the time he had scratched thirteen matches it was really so windy as to be uncomfortable.

—A poetical fellow says that "woman is like tar; only melt her, and she will take any form you please." She is not unfrequently a Tartar, also; only get her, and you will take any form she pleases.

—At a recent examination in Rutger's College, the question 'did Martin Luther die a natural death?' was answered by one of the students,—'no, he was excommunicated by a bull.'

Business Notices.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disordered, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, brightness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the vital machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, desponding victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lockjaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN PEA COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that proper care is taken that none are employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

(OPPOSITE POST-OFFICE.)

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $8, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and application for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September.

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for such time, not less than twelve weeks and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

Kittery Caucus.

The republicans of Kittery met in caucus, Wednesday evening, to nominate a candidate for representative to the legislature of Maine. The republican vote of Kittery averages about 550, and many of the voters have to travel miles to attend caucus or reach the polling place; but the example they set in turning out to their primary meetings is one that could be followed by many more compact towns and cities, to great advantage. The balloting resulted as follows:

Whole number of votes	378
Necessary to a choice	190
Ephraim Otis had	59
Mark F. Wentworth	319

And Gen. Mark F. Wentworth was declared the nominee of the caucus. The very large vote thrown (almost three quarters of the entire republican vote of the town) is highly creditable to the party in Kittery; and the overwhelming majority given to the successful candidate is a deserved compliment to one of the most public-spirited and capable citizens of the town, an out-spoken hard fighting republican, who has never allowed his private interests to shake his fidelity to the party, and who numbers among his most earnest supporters the men who fought under his command during the rebellion.

Laconics.

Miss Arabella C. Morgan, Assistant at the High School, returned from a European trip, Thursday.

The Maine papers contradict the report that gambling is carried on in the cars of the Maine Central Railroad, saying that since an agent of the Eastern Road stopped the fun, no further complaints have been made.

That last chowder party numbered fifty-five participants and was the best of the series, though the chowder was scorched, the judge and counsel deserted and the balloon was torn. The party went down in two large row-boats, which were lashed side by side, and ornamented with flags. Returning, the flags gave way to Chinese lanterns, and a merrier party never sang than that which landed at Pier wharf at 9.20 P. M., after a moonlight boat-ride of eighty minutes. Next time—next year.

A diver on Wednesday went down to inspect the wreck of schooner Addison Gilbert, sunk a quarter of a mile outside of Whale's Back by a collision with a sloop some months ago. The hull of the schooner was found to be so badly racked and shaken asunder by the action of the waves that it would be worthless even if raised, and it was more than doubtful if it would not fall to pieces as soon as lifted from the bottom; a proposed attempt to raise the wreck was thereupon abandoned, and the unlucky schooner will be left as a plaything for the fishes.

Robert L. Hickman, "Bean" Hickman.

A dispatch from Washington announces the demise of this once noted character. After dissipating a competency he became an adventurer of the "Dazzle" order, modified by aspirations to be considered a kind of Brummel. His history is given to a Washington journal briefly thus:

Robert L. Hickman was born in King William County, Va., according to best data, over sixty years ago. He was one of a family of six children, three boys and three girls, two of whom married Gen. Eaton, of North Carolina. It is said that on the death of his father he was the possessor of about $40,000 in cash. At that time a young man of good appearance, tasteful in dress, extravagant in habits, and fond of life, he made up his mind to see a good time, and he saw it so well, that within a couple of years he was a bankrupt. The story further goes that in his distress he applied for aid to his brother-in-law, and that gentleman, disgusted with the actions of his relative, sternly refused all aid, but finally concluded to give him a check for $10,000, on condition that he would leave and never return to his house again. Beau accepted the proposition, took the money, returned to his old haunts, and casting aside his valuable but bitter experience, was soon again reduced to want; a condition it is said, which was hastened by the elopement of a colored mistress, who took with her considerable of his funds. Then Beau concluded that the world owed him a living. Too proud to work, too honest to steal, he adopted his vagabond, Bohemian life, and levying a tax on all who came in contact with him, made it pay.

Among the anecdotes related of him are the following, as to how he rode free on a railroad: He took a common card, stuck it in the band of his high hat, and getting an inside seat, stuck his head out of the window. Along comes the conductor for his tickets, and, noticing the gentleman seated apparently in a deep study, he tapped him on the shoulder. Beau started up suddenly and off went his hat. Then he became indignant, wanted the train stopped whether or no, and insisted so vehemently in his rights that the poor conductor was scared, and rather than lose time he agreed to pay for the hat and pass the gentleman over, both of which he did. The story soon got out, and Beau was a dead-head with that conductor as long as he remained on the line.

His advice to strangers about going into gambling houses was also good. "You want to tackle faro?" he would say: "well now let me give you a little advice, and I know all about it. You go in, and if there are many players, and any big ones, you get in and play light. The dealer will be mad as —— when he sees it, but you need not mind. He's bound to let you win and go for the big ones. Then, when you get a stake don't be too greedy, but leave." For this good advice he would always add: "You owe me about a red chip." In asking for money he would always call for chips, designated as follows: A white chip, $1; a red chip, $5; and a blue chip, $20—the several amounts being levied according to his estimate of the ability of the giver. When he "struck" a man for a blue, if he didn't respond, Beau would not consider it beneath his dignity to fall even to the white, which he then accepted with thanks.

Municipal Amenities.

The affection which exists between the rival cities of Chicago and St. Louis is pleasingly illustrated by the following paragraph from the St. Louis Times: "We have received from the Chicago Post an interesting publication of twenty pages, the size of that paper, or 140 columns in all, entitled the Delinquent Tax List of the City of Chicago. It is a work of much pathos, power of description, and suggestive moral. Dealing largely in figures, it is in no sense allegorical, but abundant in truthful and melancholy pictures, drawn from real life. The plot is simple, the characters numerous, and their impecunious individuality well sustained throughout. It has, moreover, the merit of strict historical accuracy, or, at least, its statements are so vouched for by the talented and laborious collector."

—An uneasy boy, whose mother tried to quiet him on a Boston & Maine train, the other day, by telling him the conductor sometimes swallowed naughty boys, astonished her a few moments after, as the portly form of the conductor appeared at the door, by creeping behind her and exclaiming in a whisper, "Ma! I guess he has swallowed one already."

The Old Woman I Met at Baden.

[John Howard Paul in N. Y. Tribune.]

I can distinctly remember when I first witnessed Sheridan's comedy, "The Rivals," of thinking that the character of Mrs. Malaprop must be an amusing exaggeration. When I read Mrs. Partington's sayings, I thought them grotesque, but overdone; and although I roared with laughter at Sketchley's "Mrs. Brown at the Play," I conceived the old lady to be born of the brain of the facetious raconteur. I wot me of a lady in London about whom many violent dislocations of syllables are related, and who is said to have boasted that she had a spinal staircase under her establishment, but when I met this lady I found that she not only spoke excellent English, but was a shrewd woman of business withal, and therefore concluded that some of the mad wags of the "Junior Garrick" or "Savage" Clubs adopted this lady out of a quaint sort of affection as a peg to hang their jokes upon. But recently at Baden-Baden I met an American female (I can't call her a lady), who out-Malaproped the most Partington of Mr. Brown's. She was from "out west" and lived at Milwaukee when she was at home. She had been left a widow, her husband having been a farmer, and was now on her first tour on the continent. She was literally a phenomenon of ignorance and misconception, and if ever the saying that a "little learning is a dangerous thing" received exemplification, it did in this case. She sat next to me at the table d'hote at the hotel, and after the fashion of Continental dinners we fell into conversation. Her appearance had attracted my attention. She was a large, yellow-faced woman, with hair the color of mahogany, and the front of her ample gown literally dotted all over with bold, shining, Palais-Royal-looking jewelry. It seemed to start from her chin and extended in a glittering, unbroken line down to her very toes. One of the waiters spoke of her to his brother kellner as the "old pig in armour." At dinner she turned to me and said:

"You'll excuse me, but how do you have your letters addressed?"

"Oh! simply to the Hotel Royal" (where I was staying).

"That's a good idea," pursued she. "I didn't know the name of no hotels here, so a neighbor of mine who had once been in Europe told me it would be a good plan to have all of mine sent to the post restaurant, and I can't find no such restaurant in town. I took a carriage yesterday and looked for it everywhere."

It was simply a duty to instruct her that she should apply to the post restant.

"If you do not speak French," I asked "how do you make yourself understood when you are sight-seeing?"

"Lord bless you, no French for me; I understand none of those furrin' tongues; not I. English is as much as I can manage. I hire an interrupter wherever I go—ever since I left England, at least. Now, London is a sensible place to visit, if it's only for the reason they do not speak English there, and that's a comfort, if it is foggy."

I found the old dame had just returned from Italy, and it was astounding to hear her mix up places and things and people. It required but a little gentle encouragement to loosen her tongue.

"Did you like Milan?" I inquired.

"It's elegant."

"And the pictures, the art treasures of sunny Italy, are they not delightful?" I asked with an affectation of enthusiasm.

"They're splendid," said she, "where they're not too old. They showed me a lot of broken bits of things in Rome that I couldn't make head nor tail of—a body here, a leg there, an arm somewhere else; but it looked to me mere rubbage, that did; but the pictors were very nice. I liked Raphael's marriage with the Virgin, but I didn't think much of the 'Last Supper,' as they showed me at Milan. How they can call that a masterpiece I can't think, for I've seen public-house sights in Ameriky that had much richer coloring into them than that. One of the apostles only had one leg, and I'm sure that ain't no good drawin', not that I know much of paintin', dear knows."

"Did you stop at Florence?" I asked.

"Oh, yes, and went to the Pity Palace, and saw the picters there, too."

"Did you see Venus, by Titian? There's a work!" I boldly asserted.

"Yes, there is a work, and she ought to be ashamed of herself!"

"Ashamed of herself, who—Venus? Why, you wouldn't have her dressed or draped, would you? You'd ruin the classic beauty. Think of art!"

"Think of decency! I say again she ought to be ashamed of herself; I don't mean Venus, for I spose it's the regular thing for her to be undressed; but Titians ought to remember she is a lady, and looked upon as sich in London. I've heard her sing."

"Heard her sing, who?" I asked in amazement.

"Why, Titians; and how she could waste her time a paintin' one of her own sex laying off on a sofa, like that, I can't think. Titian's Venus may be a great work, but for my part I prefer her Norma."

It is evident that the coincidence of sound in the popular pronunciation of the two names had utterly misled this astonishing old creature, and as I left the table and gave her a parting glance, I was reminded of that other old dame of that convenient locality known as "out west," who once Wrote to her son not to get into the "pernicious habit of visiting billious rooms and bowel-alleys, as sich wicked places led to the shadder of the value of death," which was quite as perverted a state of ideas as Mrs. Partington when she returned from Naples, and would insist on always talking of "a corruption of Mount Vociferous."

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quality of Nature's own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN
HAIR RENEWER!
This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff, and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.
This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

THE CHEMISTRY OF CHARACTER.

BY LIZZIE DOTEN.

John and Peter, and Robert and Paul,
God in his wisdom created them all.
John was a statesman, and Peter a slave,
Robert a preacher, and Paul—was a knave.
Evil, or good, as the case might be,
White, or colored, or bond, or free—
John and Peter, and Robert, and Paul,
God in his wisdom created them all.

Out of earth's elements, mingled with flame,
Out of life's compounds of glory and shame,
Fashioned and shaped by no will of their own,
And helplessly into life's history thrown;
Born by the law that compels men to be,
Born to conditions they could not foresee;
John and Peter, and Robert, and Paul,
God in his wisdom created them all.

John was the head and heart of his State,
Was trusted and honored, was noble and great;
Peter was made 'neath life's burdens to groan,
And never once dreamed that his soul was his own.
Robert great glory and honor received,
For zealously preaching what no one believed;
While Paul, of the pleasures of sin took his fill,
And gave up his life to the service of ill.

It chanced that these men, in their passing away
From earth and its conflicts, all died the same day.
John was mourned through the length and the breadth of the land—
Peter fell 'neath the lash in a merciless hand—
Robert died with the praise of the Lord on his tongue—
While Paul was convicted of murder, and hung.
John, and Peter, and Robert, and Paul;
The purpose of life was fulfilled in them all.

Men said of the statesman, "How noble and brave!"
But of Peter, alas, "He was only a slave;"
Of Robert, "'Tis well with his soul—it is well;"
While Paul they consigned to the torments of hell.
Born by one law through all nature the same,
What made them differ, and who was to blame?
John and Peter, and Robert and Paul,
God in his wisdom created them all.

Out in that region of infinite light,
Where the soul of the black man is as pure as the white—
Out where the spirit, through sorrow made wise,
No longer resorts to deception and lies—
Out where the flesh can no longer control
The freedom and faith of the God-given soul—
Who shall determine what change may befall
John, and Peter, and Robert, and Paul?

John may in wisdom and goodness increase—
Peter rejoice in an infinite peace—
Robert may learn that the truths of the Lord
Are more in the spirit and less in the word—
And Paul may be blessed with a holier birth
Than the passions of men had allowed him on earth.
John, and Peter, and Robert and Paul,
God in his mercy created them all.

Story of a Mutiny.

[The material for the following sketch came to the writer from a friend, a gentleman of the medical staff, who was present at the time of the mutiny as assistant surgeon of one of the regiments, and it is undoubtedly true. The officer referred to is General William H. Emory, afterward distinguished as commander of the nineteenth army corps. He is now (September, 1873,) on duty with his regiment at the west. From personal knowledge of the man, while attached to his staff in the Shenandoah, the writer recognizes this incident as perfectly characteristic of this stern officer.]

It was during the early days of the army of the Potomac—if I mistake not, shortly after McClellan settled down to the siege of Yorktown, and before that army had received that baptism of fire and blood, and had gained that terrible discipline in the soldier's duty which the campaigns of the next three years brought it—that one of his infantry regiments openly mutinied. Of course, the regiment had its grievance; even the worst of soldiers (and these were by no means such) never undertake to revolt against discipline or defy orders without a cause of complaint. The regiment in question, although less than six months under arms, and never yet under fire, had performed difficult and arduous service. Both before Yorktown and elsewhere, these men had patiently and faithfully peformed their part; they had marched through long nights over muddy roads, when sleep overtook them in the ranks while they wearily plodded on; they had bivouacked on the cold ground, shelterless, and without fire; and they had unmurmuringly laid aside their muskets and toiled in the trenches under the soaking rain. Yet all this time they had not received a cent of pay, and clothing was scantily and tardily furnished them.

Why it was I never exactly learned; but those who were in the volunteer service can readily understand how careless and incompetent officers may cause such injustice as this to brave and deserving men. For months they had submitted to this cruel neglect, while the other regiments of the brigade had been paid and clad with comparative promptness. The respectful representations they had from time to time forwarded to their regimental commander had produced no results. At first loud and bitter complaints were heard from them; then, as time passed, and their condition was not bettered, a silence succeeded that the officers should have seen was ominous of desperate purpose. That purpose was reached without the knowledge of an officer or an orderly sergeant; excepting these, it had the assent of every man present with the regiment. Mutiny was their determination, and the ringleaders waited a few days for an occasion to make their action perfectly effectual.

The occasion came—just the one that had been anticipated and desired. The regiment was not at the time on duty in the trenches; its labors had entitled it to a rest, and it had been drawn back to an open spot at some distance from the line of brigade. It lay in the prescribed form of infantry encampments—a canvas village of ten streets, each bounded by a row of tents on either side, and the parade ground directly in front. Dress parade had been held for several evenings; and on that preceding the morning of the mutiny, the arms were left stacked in regimental line, with guard over them. This was probably in obedience to general orders to the whole command, and intended as a precaution to insure readiness in case of a sally by the enemy.

After the retreat had been sounded that night, the order was communicated to each company that the arms were not to be taken after reveille call the following morning; and in the silence of the night other orders were secretly communicated to the men by the ringleaders, and the mutiny was ripe.

The night passed, and with the gray dawn the shriek and rattle of reveille sounded successfully from the camps of a hundred regiments, and from the drum corps of this one speedily roused it from slumber. The officers, hardly awake, heard the confusion, the buzzing and humming caused by the calling of the rolls, by Brown, Jones and Robinson and the rest, and then the mingled command from ten throats:

"Take arms!"

A pause, a silence followed; then angry and vehement expostulation; but no rattle or clash such as the taking of arms from the stack causes. The command was repeated and reiterated with more expostulation, and next the commandant of each company was visited by the vexed, scared face of the sergeant, and the startling information given that the company would not take arms. Some of the officers received the intelligence with incredulity, some gave vent to their vexation, and unjustly upbraided the poor orderlies; but all finally put on their swords and repaired to the scene of mutiny, with substantially the same remark: "We'll see if they won't take arms for me."

They did see; and they quickly assured themselves that the men would not put forth a hand in obedience to this particular order.

"Attention!" shouted the captain of the first company; and every man promptly came to position.

"Take—arms!" Not a hand stirred.

"Right—face!" This command was instantly obeyed.

"Front!" The company came back to line with beautiful precision

"Take—arms!" But not a hand answered the words, though Captain M——— vociferated them to the full compass of his powerful bass. So in every company, the men promptly obeyed every order but this one, and that not a man obeyed. Not a word, not even a defiant look accompanied their disobedience; but they simply stood like so many statues, and moved not a muscle in answer to the command.

The captains threatened, begged, and some swore; and neither their anger nor their humility had the least effect upon those seven hundred men. After half an hour of unavailing effort, despairing of accomplishing anything themselves, the commandants repaired to the colonel's tent and astonished him with the news that his regiment was in open mutiny. He listened with angry impatience to the particulars they gave him and then hastened to buckle on his sword.

"Come with me," he said. "By heavens, I don't believe they'll fail to obey when I give them the order."

He was mistaken; as much so as the captain had been before him. The line stood motionless behind the stacks when he reached the parade ground; and ordering the officers to take their places he took his own in front of the centre. Drawing his sword, he shouted in a voice that no man in the regiment had ever yet disregarded:

"Take—arms!" And still not a man obeyed.

The colonel was profoundly excited; more so than he had been since he dropped his plough handles and mounted one of the plough horses to raise his regiment on hearing of the President's proclamation. He began by inviting the ringleaders to step out and inform him of the object of their mutiny. The ringleaders wisely remained in their places in the ranks, but half a dozen voices, in which no individual voice was distinguished, cried out:

"We want pay and clothing, like other regiments."

"You shall have both," the colonel eagerly responded. "Only take arms and return to your duty and I will immediately represent your grievances at headquarters."

A tumult of answering cries followed his words, uttered in anger, derision and incredulity. "It is all work and no pay with us." "We're the ragged scarecrows of the brigade." "We've heard that story before." "Tell that to the marines." "No pay, no muskets."

"Attention!" shouted the colonel; and the regiment instantly came back to position and silence.

Then the colonel made an earnest and impassioned harangue of fifteen minutes, while dozens of curious spectators from the neighboring regiments stood about viewing the extraordinary scene.

He promised the men that he would give his personal attention to their grievances until they were redressed; he represented to them their mutiny would certainly be ineffectual for the purposes they sought; and begged them to save the good name of the regiment from disgrace with which their disobedience threatened it. Hardly doubting that his address would have the desired effect, he concluded with the repetition of the command:—

"Take—arms!"

Each and all stood like a rock; and not a single hand moved toward the muskets.

The mutiny was becoming serious. For more than an hour the entire regiment had stubbornly refused to resume their arms, and the persuasion and authority, as well of the commanding officers as of the officers of the line, had fallen idly upon their ears. The excited colonel ordered "break ranks," which was quietly obeyed; and calling for his horse he rode off at a gallop to the brigade headquarters.

Our brigadier had come from the regular cavalry to accept his command in the volunteers; and he was one of the best disciplinarians that West Point ever gave to the army. He was much past the middle age, and had seen arduous and distinguished service in Mexico and the West. He was a man of medium height, or perhaps something above it, with hair dashed with gray, sandy whiskers and moustache, a massive forehead and face, with the wrinkles of service, and bushy eyebrows, overhanging a pair of keen, incisive eyes. His presence was habitually stern, somewhat forbidding; the habitual expression of his face was one of determination. Yet he had one of the kindest of hearts, and his commands invariably learned before he had done with them, that their comfort and safety were at all times the object of his anxious solicitude. He was far braver than generals are apt to be; when his troops went into battle, he was always upon the line with them, exposed to the fire; and not Sheridan himself was more reckless to personal danger, more reckless of bullets, at Opequan and Cedar Creek, than this man. His troops of course loved him—when they knew him.

He listened to the story of the colonel on this morning with evident displeasure, which found expression in a few words which were more forcible than elegant; but I venture to say that no general officer in the armies would have said less under the circumstances. He listened attentively to the details of the mutiny as the colonel gave them, and when the latter had finished he said:—

"They won't take arms—eh?"

"No, sir, they won't. Any other order they'll obey, but not that."

"Well, sir, are any of your officers in this business?"

"Not one, or any of the orderlies," was the eager reply.

The general took one turn across the tent floor.

"Return to your camp, sir," he said, "and assemble your officers in front of your tent. I'll be there in a few minutes."

The colonel rode away, not very easy in mind, and wondering what was about to happen.

The general ordered his horse and called in his aides.

"Get up your horses immediately. Capt. ———, ride over to Capt. ———; give him my compliments, and tell him to send a section of his artillery to the camp of the—third Outanaga Infantry, immediately. Lieut. ———, hastened to Col. ——— and Col. ———, (commanding regiments of the brigade,) and tell them, with my compliments, to march their commands, under arms, to the same place. You will accompany them to the same place."

A few minutes later the men of the rebellious regiment, gathered into knots in the company streets about the parade ground and conferring in whispers together, saw the general, followed by a single orderly, ride through the camp back to the colonel's tent. Some of them saw from a distance that the officers were formed in a single line in front of the tent, with the field officers on the right, the captain next, and the lieutenants on the left.

The general dismounted, and taking a brief survey of the faces before him, turned to the colonel.

"Sir," he said, sternly, "do you refuse to perform duty?"

"No, sir!" was the emphatic answer.

He turned to the line and passing down it, addressed the same question to each officer, beginning with the lieutenant colonel and ending with the last subaltern. One and all unhesitatingly gave the same response as the colonel.

"Now, sir," said the general to the latter, "get your men into line. I'll end the outbreak in ten minutes."

And then he added the same remark that the officers of the regiment had made: "We shall see if they'll disobey me."

The assembly was sounded. The companies formed in the streets, and were marched to their places in the lines behind the stacks. The faces of the men were grave and serious, but generally showed no abatement of purpose. That purpose was, it was afterwards confessed, not to resume their arms until the paymaster and quartermaster should have actually visited them and given them their dues of pay and clothing. But in many of those faces there was anxiety as well as determination visible, and all officers and men awaited the general's proceedings with such feelings as had never before been theirs.

They had not long to wait. Two regiments of the brigade marched upon the ground, and under the direction of the aides were formed in a long line, facing the mutineers, at shoulder arms, perhaps seventy yards distant. Capt. ———, with two pieces of artillery, came up before the formation was finished, and by similar direction one piece was posted upon each flank of the line, in such a manner as to enfilade an entire wing of the mutineers.

For half a minute after these ominous dispositions there was an intense silence. It was broken by the voice of the general, in the stern command:

"Load!"

The long line of muskets went to the ground with a shock, and the ringing of ramrods in the barrels, and the thumping in the bore of the cannon, sent a thrill to the nerves of those who looked and listened.

"Load with grape," was the command to the artillery. Then followed the orders:—

"Ready—aim!"

The aspect of the scene when the general rode between the lines, pausing in the centre and facing the mutineers, was such as might well have carried apprehension to the stoutest heart. At least one thousand bright musket barrels were levelled ready for the word that would hurl their deadly contents into the breasts before them while upon either flank was a field piece charged with grape, the gunner standing lanyard in hand, only waiting for the word to belch out destruction to the misguided men.

"Let the officers retire behind the brigade line," the general commanded.

They did so.

"Men of the —— regiment," he said, in stentorian tones, "listen to me! I shall not now stop to inquire why you have disgraced yourselves and your command, this morning, by disobedience to your officers. I shall merely give one order. If you obey, well; if not you shall have no other chance. In that case I shall move to the rear of the brigade, and then—by the living God, I will blow every one of you to destruction."

He looked the threat, as well as uttered it; and then, in a voice of thunder, he gave command:

"Take arms!"

It was done on the instant. Never did the regiment execute the order in better time; the stacks were broken, and the mutineers, fairly frightened out of their folly, again stood with shouldered arms.

The whole command was brought to order, and the general, speaking with difficulty from the emotions of the moment, addressed the regiment with such kindness as brought tears from many a tall soldier. He briefly pointed out to them the magnitude of their act as a military offence, and made them understand that mutiny in an army can never result in anything but discredit, or worse, to those who undertake it, and he reminded them that the cause in which they were all engaged was most injured by such acts of insubordination. Their cause of complaint was just, he said, and if their officers were in fault, they should be punished for it. "Full justice shall be done you, and speedily," he said, "but in the future never let me hear from you in this way. There are other and better ways to correct evils in the ranks than this."

He left the ground with the respect and affection of every man there; but his interview with the officers which immediately followed, was of a different character. Addressing himself to all, but more particularly to the colonel, he gave them an excoriating lecture upon their carelessness and gross neglect of the interests of their men.

"I should be glad to think," he concluded, "that none of you are troubled with incompetency as well as carelessness. You are all of you to blame in this matter; nothing of this kind ever happens unless the officers are in fault. And I give you distinctly to understand that if anything of this sort occurs here again, I'll court-martial every one of you."

He never had occasion to execute the threat. The regiment was paid up and clothed within a week, and from that time forward every man and officer of it made it his particular duty to efface the stigma cast upon the regiment by this affair. That they succeeded, the records of the arduous campaign and bloodly battles in which it bore a heroic part, and which are written in the history of the country, will attest.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, Aug. 5, 1873.

Those who were fortunate enough to be in the baggage car of Conductor Philbrook's train when it left Portsmouth yesterday morning had a chance to view a relic of antiquity appealing to all who value the old times of your vicinity. Older than the "Cradle of Liberty," it was a simple cradle, of white pine, 200 years of age, and in a remarkable state of preservation, although bearing marks of children's rattles and other toys (such as first teeth). In this cradle the Weeks family of Greenland have rocked from the first settlement of the town. It was consigned to Mr. Geo. T. Comins, 154 North St., Boston, the gentleman who I understand employs the contract-labor of the N. H. State Prison, and is a large dealer in Patent Swinging and Rocking Cradles, by Mr. J. E. Holmes of Greenland. The history of those who have been lulled to sleep in this unpretentious cradle would form a valuable chapter in the annals of Greenland and adjacent towns.

That the cradle should be conveyed on the train of that popular conductor, "Dan" Philbrook, is a coincidence, as Dan is the happy possessor of a child's chain nearly if not quite as ancient, being now in use for the fifth generation in a family noted for longevity. The chair was made by the grandfather of John Trundy, Esq., of your city, who reached his three score years and ten—if I remember rightly—and was used by his father in infancy; the latter dying at a more advanced age over sixty years since. The chair has been used until the present day, and should entitle the owner to dignity of chairman in any locality.

The announcement of a new hotel at Wallis' Sands will please all sons of Portsmouth, but they will regret to see "Dow's Point" invaded by the theodolite and signal staff, as I did Wednesday. I suppose that most beautiful and secluded spot, in near proximity to a city, must share the fate of our whole beautiful coast, however, so I'll not complain. I hope to live to be a very old man;—long enough to see the Portsmouth Public Library in successful operation:—long enough to see Mrs. Cutts' bequest applied to the improvement of Richards Avenue:—long enough to see the Beach Road from Portsmouth to Salisbury in good running order. Then I can die in peace, having waited a quarter of a century to see a railroad from your city to Dover.

I have a lot of interesting news I might write for your readers if I chose, but I scorn to pander to a taste that seeks an excitant, and so forbear; lest your steady-goers peradventure grow wroth and finish some of the many projected improvements to which absent sons have been invited to contribute, and so deprive the absent grandchildren of an opportunity to complete the same. R.

Toad, Worm, Bee and Fly Stories.

A scientist, Dr. Thomas Hill, at Portland, stated the following:

In the summers of 1843—'45 an old toad used to sit under the door of a beehive every fine morning, and dexterously pick up those bees who were laden, or tired, or missed the doorstep and fell to the ground.

When our toad gets into his mouth part of an insect too large for his tongue to thrust down his throat (and I have known of their attempting a wounded humming bird,) he resorts to the nearest stone or clod, and presses the protruding part of his mouthful against it and thus crowds it down his throat. This can be observed at any time by tying a locust's hind legs together and throwing it before a toad. On one occasion I gave a "yellow striped" locust to a little toad in its second summer, when he was in the middle of a very wide gravel walk. In a moment he had the locust's head down his throat, its hinder parts protruding, and looking around for a stone or clod, but finding none at hand in either direction, he bowed his head and crept along, pushing the locust against the ground. But the angle with the ground was too small and my walk too well rolled. To increase the angle he straightened his hind legs up, but in vain. At length he threw up his hind quarters and actually stood on his head, or rather on the locust sticking out of his mouth, and after repeating this once or twice succeeded in "getting himself outside of his dinner."

I was tossing a four-year old toad (at Antioch college) earthworms, while digging, and presently threw him so large a specimen that he was obliged to attack one end only. That end was instantly transferred to his stomach, the other end writhing free in air and coiled about the toad's head. He waited until his writhings gave him a chance, swallowed half an inch, then taking a nip with his jaws waited for a chance to draw in another half inch. But there are so many half inches to dispose of that at length his jaws grew tired, lost their firmness of grip, and the worm crawled out five eighths of an inch between each half inch swallowing. The toad, perceiving this, brought his right hand to aid his jaws, grasping his abdomen with his foot, and by a little effort getting hold of the worm in his stomach from the outside, he thus by his foot held fast to what he gained by each swallow, and presently succeeded in getting the worm entirely down.

A garter snake was observed this summer in North Conway pushing a toad down his throat by running it against the clods and stones, just as the toad crowds down a locust.

The amount which a toad can eat is surprising. On Tuesday I threw a squashbug to a young toad. He snapped it up, but immediately rejected it, wiped his mouth with great energy, and then hopped away with extraordinary rapidity. I was so much amused that I gathered some more of the sowbug and carried them to a favorite old toad at the northeast corner of the house. He ate them all without any wry faces. I gathered all that I could find on my vines, and he ate them all, to the number of twenty-three. I then brought him some larvae of pygaera menistra, three quarters grown, and succeeded in enticing him to put ninety-four on the tip of his squashbugs. Finding that his virtue was not proof against the caterpillars when I put them on the end of a straw and tickled his nose with them; he at length turned and crept under the piazza, where he remained until Friday digesting his feast.

This, like the paper on snakes, brought several members to their feet, but the climax was finally capped by a man who had seen a toad swallow with relish 713 houseflies.

Marriage of Mlle. Morlacchi and "Texas Jack."

The Rochester Express of Monday furnishes the following: "John B. Omohundro, better known as 'Texas Jack,' was united in the bonds of matrimony, last evening, to Mlle. Morlacchi, the celebrated danseuse, who has just concluded an engagement at the Opera-house in this city. They were, it appears, first brought together as members of 'Ned Buntline's' blood-and-thunder sensation company, which visited this city last Winter, and at once 'fell in love.' The affection thus engendered has growa until at last a consummation has been reached in what we hope will be a happy marriage. The ceremony was performed by Father Stewart, in St. Mary's Church, yesterday morning, immediately after the eight o'clock mass, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCarthy acting as groomsman and bridesmaid, and they, with a few personal friends of the happy couple were the only witnesses present. 'Texas Jack's' appearance is well known to most people. He is a fine specimen of physical manhood. His exploits are too well known to mention here. The lady's appearance is also well known. She is a native of Italy, a brunette, graceful and said to be highly educated. She has not what might be called a beautiful face, but she is interesting. She has ranked for some time as one of the best interpreters of Terpsichorean art on the American stage, and it is said that she owns a farm near New York, which she bought with the earnings of her profession. She is under engagement to play in Buffalo this week, after which, we believe, she is to retire from public life, at least for a time."

—A large and elegant prison is proposed with the most splendid accommodations for the benefit of defaulters who scorn stealing less than $100,000.

Business Notices.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or Alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain, should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, brightness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS upon the broken down, desponding victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an speedy and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Grippes throw away their crutches, the lame walk, paralyzed members are rendered nameless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve suffering if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the pure, wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 85 Broadway, New York.

[New York Correspondence.]

No one who has visited Europe will fail to appreciate the following: A prominent Boston gentleman, a proprietor of one of the leading Boston dailies, has just arrived in the steamer from Europe, and met with a New York friend, while registering his name in the exchange of the Grand Central Hotel. The New Yorker evidently expects the usual glowing account of those fresh from the tour, and begins thus: "Hallo, Charley! Glad to see you back! How do you enjoy yourself, old fellow? Have a good time?" "Good time," grumbled Charley, "I'm so glad to get back, I can't tell! I've had nothing to eat since I've been away. Prunes and sour wine going, and prunes and sour wine coming. Sick as a dog, at that! London—bloody beef and cold mutton, ale and fog. Paris—sour wines and fancy crumbs. Germany, etc.—bitter beer, sour wine, and Heaven knows what in the dishes. Taverns—candles, and paid service everywhere. Not a first-class sensible hotel like this anywhere, to say nothing of the price. Thank the Lord I'm home again!" "But the steamer! the ocean?" suggested Charley's friend. "Prunes and sour wine I tell you," cried Charley. "Let's go up stairs and get something to eat! And they disappeared in the elevator to the evident amusement, not to say gratification, of nine host Powers and of a number of other gentlemen who had heard European and American hotels so summarily and truthfully criticised and the Grand Central "brought to the front" in such few words.

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a competent number of inspectors will be at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be employed. In every district of the mining region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the mining, screening, collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

The possessors of the Tichborne estate are already out of pocket about $800,000 by their fight with "the claimant." But the lawyers don't feel particularly mournful over it.

The Eastern Railroad Company has purchased the Tobias Roberts estate, at Bar Harbor, including the wharf and the Agamont House, and contemplates erecting at once a large hotel with all the modern improvements and appliances.

The Boston Advertiser is responsible for the statement that Mr. Samuel Barrett, the recent recipient of a service of silver, is obliged to assign a special hour every day to afford an interview to the agents of fire and burglar-proof safes, who follow close upon the presentation.

At a recent meeting, the Portsmouth Mercantile Library Association voted to discontinue the use of the library to ladies at $1 per year, at the expiration of the present subscriptions of the sort, and to renew none except in the case of ladies having no male relative who can become a member, as was the intention at the passage of the first vote.

The Journal says Mr. John A. Lamprey of this city has purchased the property of Prof. John S. Woodman's estate by the seaside near Jerry's Point, containing forty-three acres. He intends to erect a number of cottages thereon, and probably the Woodman mansion will be changed into a hotel.

The center and longest span across the Cochecho river for the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad is completed, and with its strong wooden braces and iron bolts, looks as though it would sustain a great weight. It will be but a short job to complete the two shorter spans. The bridge at the Point is planked out as far as the draw, and work upon the balance is progressing rapidly.

Mr. Sewall Aldrich of Concord, having been tried before the United States circuit court in this city, in May, on a charge of selling liquors without paying the government tax for a license, just as the jury were bringing in a verdict against him, while he was on bail, suddenly recollected that he had business in Boston, and took the afternoon train for that city. His business detained him a long while in the Massachusetts district, and until he recently returned to Concord, where the United States marshal arrested him, and brought him before the court, when he was fined ten dollars and sentenced to ninety days' imprisonment in the jail at Concord.

Sunrise on Mount Washington.

[Cor. N. Y. Times.]

The sound of doors opening and closing softly, of muffled footsteps along the hall, awaken us. It is yet dark. A bright star twinkles through the curtain, telling us the good news. Toilets are dispatched with no great ceremony, and muffled in overcoat and shawl we hurry down to find a hundred other masked figures on the spacious platform in the faint twilight. We stumble over a huge chain. What is it? Every twenty feet a chain cable comes through the platform from its anchorage in the rock beneath, passing over the hotel similarly secured on the other side—a windy suggestion. Does it ever blow here? Look at the little building which is the signal-station. The four little brass cups of the anemometer are absolutely motionless; not a breath stirs—a rare case on Mt. Washington. Cast your eye about, peer down into the gloom—so different from the gloom of the coming night. Dim, shadowy outlines of mountain outlines discernible against the deeper shadows that mark the profound gulfs between. In strange contrast with this indefinite darkness below is the flaming light of the morning star high up the eastern sky. How weirdly the dawn comes! How persistently the darkness lingers. A cold gray light at last creeps down the valley, then lie along the rivers long white lines of fog, resembling the glaciers of Alpine valleys; there is the silvery sheen of some mountain lake. A faint, cold blush of color fills the eastern heavens, which, for a wonder, are cloudless. It is the clearest day of the whole summer. But there is no sun, though it is day. Nor can we see where he is to rise; no glow on the horizon marks his golden gate. Suddenly unheralded, a flash of red, gleaming fire, stationary for a moment—then it blazes higher, redder, and more fiery. A thin bar of black cloud clips its upper margin, making a new horizon and a repetition of the sudden flash of fiery red. Soon the great, round orb, red, but less intense, lifts sluggishly from his mountain couch, and with a shout we, Fire-worshipers, pronounce the sunrise accomplished.

Babies in Germany.

[Cor. Baltimore American.]

The babies of Germany are not allowed as large a liberty as those of America. They are, for the better part of the first year of their earthly pilgrimage, tightly wound up in swaddling clothes, with both arms and legs pinioned, and carried about on a pillow especially made for the purpose. After they escape from their wrappings, a bag of feathers is tied on their backs, so that when they tumble over they have something to fall upon. Those of the poorer classes are laid in a bag with a little bag of sugar in their mouths, and are expected to behave themselves without much further attention from mother or nurse. The nurses on the streets generally carry the babies in their arms on a pillow, and they are tied to it with pink ribbons, lying as still and as motionless as if they were little mummies. They cannot kick or use their arms, and evidently they are not allowed to know during their puling days what their legs and arms are intended for. We don't think that our babies would stand it, as we observe that German ladies when they come to America, don't attempt to practice any such tyranny on their babies.

The Story of a Windmill.

[MAX Adler.]

We went out to Slaymaker's in June, to spend the summer, but we have been obliged to leave. Slaymaker had a small stream near his house, from which he used to pump water into the tank in his garret. It occurred to him some time ago that it would be a good idea to put up a windmill which could do the pumping for him, so he built one at a cost of $200. The first day it began to revolve it ran against the fence and was killed, and the arms were so long that they nearly brained Slaymaker's oldest boy, who was standing beneath watching the machine, when it stopped work, and refused to move an inch. Slaymaker accordingly pumped the tank full, and just as he stopped, the mill began to pump like fury. Slaymaker in alarm, procured a rope and tied one of the wings to a tree. When the tank was empty he tried to make the windmill fill it again, but the concern was immovable. Then Slaymaker waited for a couple of weeks, and carried the water up to the house in buckets, because he was afraid to fill the tank, when the mill might get to work at any moment. Finally, as there seemed to be no hope of the machinery getting all right again, he did pump the tank full, and then went to bed. That night there was the first hurricane ever known in that neighborhood. The windmill made about four hundred revolutions a minute, and left the bed of the stream below it completely dry, while it poured nearly six hundred gallons an hour into Slaymaker's garret. The boarders swam out of the windows, and spent the rest of the night in the barn, while Slaymaker took to a tree, from which, at daylight, he had a magnificent view of the falls as they poured picturesquely from the attic windows, every minute or two bringing out of with them a chair or a hair trunk, or one of Slaymaker's shirts, or a washstand. Mrs. Slaymaker will not clean house this summer, but Slaymaker has a windmill that he is anxious to sell. He will probably close it out cheap to a purchaser who wants to take it away right off.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.,

CONSUMPTION!

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with many preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

CALIFORNIA LIFE.

[Oakland Home Journal.]

The District Attorney of Murderer's Bar stood up to his knees in the Yuba. But as his rubber boots came as high as his hips, there was no fear of his getting wet, as he made the muddy river muddier by his unceasing labor at the rocker.

Distance lent beauty and picturesqueness to the District Attorney. A near view disclosed several details that were not creditable to the guardian of the legal honor of Murderer's Bar. His red shirt, that a hundred feet off would have set an artist to sketching incontinently, at ten would have made a laundryman groan. At photograph distance his mother would have wept, for although the District Attorney had only been away from Yale two years, and in California one, his nose had acquired a color that, like the hue of a choice meerschaum, could only have been gained by steady effort. If the parson of his native town could have been concealed on the bank of the Yuba he would have changed his opinion of the District Attorney's natural piety, for although the young man was of excellent family, he took a clay pipe from between his teeth and swore ably at the poor results of an hour's hard washing, lying in the bottom of the rocker. Then he looked up to the sun, and transferred his profanity to that body, as he took off his slouched hat and wiped his forehead with his sleeve. As the District Attorney thus stood scratching his matted head, a bravely arrayed figure, bestriding a gayly caparisoned mule, trotted down the bank and cried out:

"I say, sur, are you the boss lahyer over the Bar?"

"I am," said the District Attorney, putting on his hat.

"Are you on the marry?" the stranger asked pleasantly, as he got off the mule and took a seat on a rock by the water's edge.

"Eh?"

"Is marrying in your line?"

"I don't catch your meaning," said the District Attorney, anxiously.

"I mean have ye iver done any marrying yerself," explained the stranger, leisurely cutting a pipeful from a big plug of tobacco.

"Well no," said the District Attorney. "Why?"

"Bekase I'd like ye to splice myself an' Mary Brady over at the Flat the night—Mary, ye know, daughter of Ould Brady, what keeps the deadfall—kin ye do it?"

"Oh, certainly," said the District Attorney, without hesitation.

"Well, come on thin—there's a horse fur ye at the cabin beyant."

Brown, who is a distinguished lawyer now, with no bad habits, had his doubts about it. He had never heard of a District Attorney marrying people before. But he remorsefully reflected that his studies in his profession had not been profound. Any way, it was reasonable to suppose that law like morals and religion, might relax in the California atmosphere on this occasion. And so Brown has said, "I made up my mind to risk it and go with Mr. Finnegan over to the Flat. Besides, I have always prided myself on my good memory, so I hadn't any doubt, after my pious bringing up, that I could remember the marriage service perfectly.

The wedding was to be celebrated at the Cosmopolitan Saloon—Mr. Finnegan had been irreverent in calling it a deadfall—and the District Attorney found a large and tipsy company making a tremendous noise and pledging the expectant bride in raw rum, pending the arrival of the bridegroom and himself. The company was larger than select. The whole male population of the Flat had come out as a matter of course, despising the formality of waiting for invitations. There were only three ladies—the bride and her mother and Mrs. General Hardinge—the wife of General Hardinge, who was stopping for a few weeks at the Flat, with a view to investment. Mr. Brady having gotten money and lands, by means of the Cosmopolitan, took an interest in the General, and his beautifully dressed lady got an invitation. There were several other ladies living at the Flat, but I regret to say they were not such as could be invited to a wedding.

It was a very lively assemblage indeed. Old Brady himself could hardly keep his feet, and refused to charge for his rum—something that is handed down in the Flat to this day—for when Mr. Brady was sober, or even ordinarily drunk, he was a great skinflint. The boys were sitting round the tables playing cards or standing at the bar in knots. Everybody was speaking at once, and everybody was anxious to drink his glass with everybody else in honor of the bride. The healthy young lass sat between her mother and the General's lady, who were perfect batteries of sorrowing sympathy. Poor Miss Brady was red as a piece of cinnabar, with the excitement and the attention and an occasional bashful sip of watered rum, a dozen tumblers of which beverage were constantly extended by gallant hands. General Hardinge, the only man present who wore a white shirt, and his was very large and white indeed, kept near the blushing Miss Brady, and roused the envy of every Flatter by his suave manners and handsome person.

"Gintlimin, come to orther!" cried Mr. Brady, thickly, and knocking the glass on the counter in a shambling way; "the lahyer's come."

A deep silence fell upon the bar-room of the Cosmopolitan, as this important truth was given forth. And a great many jaws dropped, and numerous pairs of arms became burdens to their owners, as the District Attorney gravely followed Mr. Finnegan, who, looking neither to the right nor left, stalked solemnly to the side of the bride. Everybody felt oppressed and uncomfortable, somewhat as one would feel on being present at Court, if ignorant of the etiquette. General Hardinge in his slight embarrassment, smilingly lifted a pack of cards and shuffled them mechanically. One-eyed Jim, the gambler, took advantage of the occasion to slip an ace up his sleeve, and winked at General Hardinge when he saw that gentleman observing him.

"Hould on," murmured Mr. Brady, swaying behind the bar, "Mr. Lahyer, have a sup before the work." "Thank you," said the District Attorney, glad of any excuse for delay, for he found with alarm that his memory was not near so strong on the church service as he had thought. But he knew that it wouldn't do at all to look embarrassed, so he drank gracefully to the bride, and taking on a grave frown, he buttoned his shirt at the neck, and turned to the gaping assemblage.

"The friends will please gather in a circle." While this was being done on tiptoe, the District Attorney scowled impressively. "The gentleman and lady about to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony will now please to stand up—the gentleman on the right and the lady on the left—so. We will begin at your convenience, madam."

This was addressed to the maternal Brady, who, as if to add to the agony of the purple bridegroom's position, had thrown her arms about her daughter's neck and set up a howl. The General's lady came to the rescue, and drew off the fond mother in the midst of her lamentations, and soon the fearfully constrained silence was restored.

"Dearly beloved brethren, (hem)!" began the District Attorney in a sepulchral tone, "dearly-beloved brethren;" he paused again to blow his nose and scowl around at the Flatters, who looked guilty; "Dearly-beloved brethren, we are gathered here in the sight of God, and in the face of this company to—to—to—in fact to marry Mr. Finnegan and Miss Brady." The District Attorney cleared his throat, and seemed to challenge contradiction. "This is commended of St. Paul to be honorable among all men." Here the Attorney looked solemnly around again. One or two of the Flatters nodded assent, and Lanky Tom went so far as to murmur: "You bet, yer." "And therefore," continued Brown, "is not to be entered into slightly, but reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly, and in the fear of God, the laws of California—and—" The District Attorney, being in a mess again, had recourse to his pocket handkerchief. The Flatters improved the opportunity to relieve themselves by changing their positions and sighing. Mr. Finnegan also drew out a colored handkerchief to mop his brow, and the bride accepted a sip from the tumbler offered by the gallant General. Old Brady still smiled stupidly behind the bar and nodded approvingly.

"As I have said," resumed the Attorney desperately, "It should not be entered into lightly, but reverently, discreetly, and—and—in short, Miss Brady, wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?"

Miss Brady, after an anxious look at the General's lady, murmured that she would.

"And you, Mr. Finnegan—wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?"

"Ay," said Mr. Finnegan, stoutly.

Again the District Attorney was hopelessly stuck. He scowled and pulled out his handkerchief once more.

"And so you both say you will, do you?" Brown asked this as if clinching some damaging admission of a witness.

"Yis sur," said Mr. Finnegan, with the air of standing by his colors at all hazards.

"You do?"

"Yis, we do." Mr. Finnegan was becoming nettled. There was no time to lose.

"Then hold up your hands. You, Michael Finnegan, and you Mary Brady, do solemnly swear that you tell the whole truth, nothing but the truth, and the truth only, so help you God?"

"Yis," gasped Mr. Finnegan.

"Then, according to the laws of California and the United States, I pronounce you man and wife. And," added the District Attorney, with his eyes rolled up—"what God hath joined let no man put asunder—amen!"

No calm or decorous pen can describe the extravagances of congratulation that followed this impressive ceremony. Mr. Brady half an hour afterwards was carried up stairs, and forty minutes later the bridegroom was also borne to his chamber insensible. After these to-be-expected preliminaries the company settled down to solid enjoyment. In three hours after the retirement of the bride, every table was a roof to at least one deeply slumbering Flatter. By midnight only a party of four had not succumbed. Their employment was poker. General Hardinge had One-eyed Jim for a vis-a-vis, and the District Attorney sat opposite Lanky Tom. They were playing with that self-possessed excitement and quick-eyed eagerness belonging to old poker devotees.

"Bet an ounce," said the General, in the Danbury Editicians.

The question now arises among boys whether they or the managers of the school should furnish cigars at picnics.

A Danbury boy wants to know if it is right for his folks to pay $500 for a piano for his sister, and make him pick berries for cirents money.

At the fire on Sunday morning a Danbury man, in the excitement of the hour, shouted "Kene" instead of "Fire," and his wife wants to know where he was the night before.

To a man who applied to Colonel Berry for victuals, the Colonel said, "Haven't you got any money?" No said the man. "Advertise then," said the Colonel; "that is the way P. T. Barnum made his money."

When people were striving to bring a fainting woman to consciousness, on the Harlem road, Friday, a miserable peller forced himself into the crowd with the information that they were "five for a quarter," and "perfectly ripe."

Another and very sure indication of the departure of city boarders, is the reappearance of the family cat at the house, with a coat that looks as if it had been used to hold down a buzz saw, but with a hopeful expression in her eye.

A porter on one of the Pullman sleeping cars running on the New Haven road was asked by a rustic-looking passenger in shirt sleeves if he had a nail handy. He said he found a place for his coat, but wanted a nail to hang up his pants. The porter fainte ' dead away.

A Franklin-street boy found a pocket-book belonging to a Mill Plain man, on Saturday, and restored it to the owner, who gave him a five-cent piece. The boy looked at the coin an instant, and then handing it reluctantly back, audibly sighed as he said, "I can't change it."

A bird flew into the window of a house on Spring street on Saturday and so frightened a lady that she swooned away and was quite ill through the night. In the morning she was strengthened by the broth and one wing of the barbinger of death, which her practical husband had prepared for her.

Mr. Rylands of Slawson was in Danbury, yesterday, canvassing for a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. He drove about until noon, and then hitched his horse in front of a restaurant while he ate his dinner and smoked a cigar. Then he jumped in and drove around till night, and then went home, very much disappointed in his humane undertaking. It is not known how the horse felt.

The city people are going back home this month. You can see them loading up at the farmhouses and making for the cars. The head of the family wears a long linen duster and a tall white hat with a broad black band about it. He is mainly busy in thrusting children in the wagon and running back to the house after things his wife had forgotten. She, poor woman, has taken a whole seat to herself, and between expectations of the coming season and dread of something being spilled on her clothes, is in about as ecstatic a state as can be imagined. And the little olives are enjoying themselves, too, rasping each other's chins and threatening to fall out and be crushed to death. But they go off with the floating of handkerchiefs and hearty good-bys of the farmer's family, who immediately retire to the house to give thanks. And when the farmer's son returns from the depot, he takes hold of the grindstone, and the conversation that ensues between him and his sire while the various edged implements are being put in shape, calls for renewed efforts on the part of home missions.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

OUR UGLY DOG.

[Clara Guernsey in Appleton's Journal.]

Our ugly dog came to to us, one morning, like the McDonald's baby—

"Out of the everywhere, into here,"

and, similarly, the first thing he did was to howl to the full extent of his capacity, which was great. The first thing we knew of him, he was sitting upon the door-steps, a disconnected fact, and filling the air with his lamentations.

The captain went out to see what manner of a dog this might be, for we well knew that it was neither of our own, seeing that Fluff, the Maltese terrier, was curled up on the sofa, and Ban, the Newfoundland, was lying on the rug. An exclamation from the captain summoned us to the piazza, and there for the first time we saw "our ugly dog."

There was nothing about him to indicate the important part he was afterward to play in our family history. He was a big dog of no breed in particular, but, rather, as it seemed, of all races in general. The shape of his head and his blunt muzzle seemed to indicate a bull-dog stripe among the many bars sinister of his escutcheon; but then he had lop-ears, with a thin, scanty fringe, which dimly suggested a spaniel. He was neither smooth, nor shaggy, nor rough; but his coat resembled an old door-mat, worn out in spots. He was short-bodied and long-legged, and that half his tail, which malice or accident had left him, was, like his ears, thinly fringed with coarse long hair. As to his color, the groundwork seemed to be dirty yellowish white, irregularly spotted with patches of faded Maltese cat color, and he was also "ticked" here and there with pea spots of dull yellow. His one eye, for he had lost the other, was his one good point, being like a deer-hound's in color and expression. He was thin to starvation-point; he was dirty and dragged and disconsolate, to the last degree which dog nature can endure; and apparently he had made up his mind that all hope was gone, and he had taken his place on our door-steps, to sing his own despairing dirge.

"In the name of goodness," said the captain, "give the creature something to eat!"

Of course, something was produced; and when the stranger had in some degree satisfied his hunger, he testified, in every way which a dog could, his intense thankfulness.

"I suppose we shall have this beast added to our family menagerie, now," said I. "He doesn't belong in the village, for I think I am generally acquainted with all the dogs in the place."

"Of course, we can't keep him," said the captain. It would be too much to have another dog. I dare say he'll trot off, when he has rested a little."

Of course, the ugly dog did not trot off, and, though we declared, every day, that we could not have him, almost equally, of course, he became a member of the family.

At first, he insinuated himself into the shed, where Ban gave him a share of his own quarters; then he modestly and humbly took up a corner in the kitchen, and then followed the little boys into the parlor, bringing in his mouth Charley's gloves, which had been dropped in the yard; and in the course of a few days, "the ugly dog" had established an equal right with Ban and the cats. He was a knowing creature, and could fetch and carry, as well as beg. He was irreproachable in dog morals, and his soul seemed to overflow with affection for every member of the family; even for little, arrogant, contemptuous Fluff, who barked himself faint the first time the stranger came into the house, and omitted no opportunity to show his own superiority to the ugly dog, who could have swallowed him like a pill.

No one in the place knew anything about the creature, and we guessed that he had strayed away from a travelling caravan which had passed through the place a few days before. In a week "the ugly dog" had become a favorite with all, from the master of the house down to the cat and the three kittens, who contracted a habit of sitting upon him, a liberty which he seemed in no wise to resent. His very ugliness was a sort of recommendation. No one else had such a very ugly dog, and he was so meek, and grateful, and loving, that no one not constitutionally adverse to dogs could have resisted his advances.

A few days after he came, I heard that an old friend of ours was visiting at a relatives in Galoosa, a place about fourteen miles from the little settlement of Maysville, where our lot had been cast for the last few years. I was anxious to see Mrs. St. Clair, and to hear news of our friends in New York, but there seemed to be a difficulty in getting to Galoosa.

One of our horses happened to be lame, and the other, though peaceable enough in double harness, was apt to be skittish and ill-conducted when driven alone. It was quite impossible for the captain to leave his business at that time, and it seemed that, unless I could borrow or hire a horse, the visit must be given up.

Now, it was not easy to get hold of a horse in Maysville. There were, to be sure, three or four teams belonging to our saw-mill, but they were all deeply engaged in their legitimate business, and, as it happened, all the other horses in the place were either busy or sick. I reluctantly resigned myself to staying at home. Just, then, however, our friend, Mr. Calvin Bruce, a man somewhat given to horses, came home from Detroit, and, hearing of my necessity, he at once placed at my disposal what he called "a pair of colts." There was no trouble in finding a driver.

At that time Dick Monroe and his sister Diana were staying with us on a visit. Dick, at seventeen, considered that he knew all that was to be known about horses, and would have undertaken to drive the chariot of the sun with as much confidence as Phaeton himself.

Calvin described the colts as "gentle enough, only pretty spunky," and averred that "it was easy enough to manage them, if a fellow only let them have their own way;" and then Calvin made the colts the subject of a parallel with the female sex, which I will not repeat, lest I should draw down upon my head some of those phials of wrath which are always ready to be uncorked for the benefit of any one who says a word on either side of the much vexed and vexing question.

The captain demurred a little at letting Diana and myself go off behind the colts with no more experienced guardian than Dick, at which distrust of his powers Master Dick's dignity was a good deal hurt; but then I flattered myself that I too could drive a little, and I was very anxious to see Mrs. St. Clair, and, to be short, of course we went. Diana and I were ready for some time before Dick made his appearance with the horses. Diana, at sixteen, was a tall, slim, gray-eyed, black-haired girl, very much of a child in some things, and very much of a woman in others. Dick was also tall and slim and handsome, and he and Diana were the best of friends. Dick was more full of himself and more self-conscious than his sister. He was clever at his school-work, stood at the head of all his classes, and expected in another year to go to college. Such being the case, of course Dick felt extremely old, and capable of sustaining any responsibility whatever. I think his feelings were rather hurt at the idea of riding three in a buggy, and he would not have been altogether sorry to leave Diana at home, but she and I took no notice of the young gentleman's hints, and he was fain to content himself with the thought that we were in the country, and out West, and that it did not so much matter.

It struck me when Dick did finally come that he was in a remarkable hurry to start, and hastened us away without leaving me time to say those more last words which housekeepers are so apt to bestow on their cabinet ministers when they set out on a journey. Dick also demurred at our driving around by the mill, and stopping to speak to the captain, with whom I wished to leave a commission about some domestic matter. It was far out of the way, to be sure, but we had been delayed already, and the afternoon was getting on; and, as the errand was one of no very great importance, I gave up the idea, and Dick turned the horses' heads toward the Galoosa road, and drove swiftly out of the village.

As we turned into the openings, through which our path lay for some distance, we passed one of the teamsters from the mill going up to the village with a load of boards. This said teamster, commonly known as Dutch Jake, was an exceedingly slow man, and was never known, under any circumstances, to adopt any plan of action on the spur of the moment. As we passed, he nodded by way of salutation; but, after the swift colts had left the team far behind, we saw that he had stopped his horses and was looking after us, apparently pondering in his mind some matter with which we were connected.

We heard afterward that Jake had had "a great mind" to give us warning of the danger that lurked that day in the September woods; but, before his mind had become quite "great" enough for expression, we had passed out of sight.

"I wonder what he wanted of us?" said Diana.

"I don't know anything that he could possibly have to say to us," I said; "but yet I almost wish I had gone back to see."

"O, he only stopped to let his horses rest," said Dick, and yet glancing back, though a turn in the road had now hidden Dutch Jake from sight; and then suddenly Master Dick became very animated on the subject of the beauties of those openings through which we were passing.

The road lay through a rolling country, among what, in Michigan, for lack of something better, are called hills. It was the last of September, and there had been just frost enough to turn the leaves. The oaks in that part of the world put on a fall dress of rich, deep crimson, shading into browns and semi-purples, and flecked and spotted with the dark, glassy, unchanged green of summer. Here and there among the oaks stood a brown beech, and now and then a scarlet and yellow maple, that lit up the forest arcades like a pillar of flame. Each turn of the road showed some new vista of the wood. The clear, dark-blue sky was flooded with light and color, and the sunshine danced and necked in the cool shadowy greens and browns of the grasses and ferns that covered the ground. The air was inexpressibly sweet with the spicy smell of the oak-leaves. It was one of those days, rare in the North, which makes one realize that there may be a state of being where life, just for its own sake, is worth the having, and where the irrepressible conflict between man and nature may finally end in peace.

We had been silent for some minutes, when Diana suddenly exclaimed: "Why, there is the ugly dog!" There he was, sure enough. He must have followed us a long distance, and, now that he had come so far from home, he seemed to think it safe to make his appearance; and, running by the side of the buggy, looked up to us, wagging his half-a-tail, and barking his satisfaction till the woods rang.

"I never in my life saw anything so ugly as that dog," said Dick.

"He's a good creature, if he is ugly" said Diana, who was always ready to stand on the defensive for any person or thing, herself excepted.

"And his ugliness is so extreme that it becomes almost a beauty," said I.

"He's not much to look at, but he's a good one to bark," said Dick. And, indeed, the ugly dog's voice was a powerful organ. His bark was quite unlike that of any other dog I ever heard, and seemed a sort of cross between the sonorous ring of the fox hound and the half-roar of the mastiff.

A mile or two brought us to the entrance of the swamp, through which ran a log-road, which, if we followed it, would cut off full three miles.

"Hadn't we better take the swamp-road?" said Dick—"it's so much shorter; and then you'll have more time for your visit, and we can get home before dark."

"What's the hurry about getting home before dark?" asked Diana. "It will be beautiful moonlight."

"Oh, nothing," said Dick, carelessly; "only you know, Di, they say strangers that stay out at night sometimes get fever-and-ague and I thought that Mrs. Graham would like to get home as soon as she could."

I was rather surprised at this instance of prudence and consideration in Master Dick, but I consented to take the short cut, as I knew this particular "corduroy" had lately been mended. Otherwise I should have hesitated about subjecting Calvin's "colts" to the risks of the passage—corduroy in that part of the world frequently resembling the laird of Ellangowan's man-traps, where "if a man went in he would break a horse's leg."

We proceeded slowly though surely, and with no more pitches and bumps than was reasonable to expect. It was Diana's first experience of a log-road, and she laughed and chatted in high glee: but it began to strike me that Dick was even more silent than would seem to be justified by the attention the horses demanded, and I noticed that he occasionally glanced round with a look of apprehension, and once, at some sudden rustle in the bushes, he started and actually turned pale.

Dick Monroe was not a boy to be scared merely at finding himself in a strange place, and a vague nervousness and forboding of I knew not what began to creep over my own mind. Yet what possible cause of dread could lurk in the tamarack-swamp? In the depths of winter there might have been some possibilities of wolves, but none had been seen in the country for years, and, though it was just barely on the cards that we might see a black bear leisurely crossing the road, yet I knew at this season of the year, all the brute would ask would be to be let alone. But, in spite of myself there grew upon me a sense of danger of which I was ashamed to speak, so utterly baseless and absurd did it seem in that peaceful place and under the summer sky.

We had reached the middle of the swamp, where, on an island of firm land, stood a deserted log-house and barn. A sad story was attached to this place. A few years before, a young man had come from the East with his bride and had taken up this lonely bit of land. Though he and his wife were not more than 18, and though very poor, even for new settlers, they had gone on and prospered for the first year. Then the poor girl died with her first baby; and her husband in spite of the efforts of kindly neighbors to detain him, had wandered off no one knew whither, leaving his homestead to go to ruin. A mournful interest thus belonged to the "Meadowes place," and the superstitious avoided the island in the swamp after nightfall.

The Danbury Boy.

[Danbury News.]

That boy of Coville's has been in trouble again. He was playing in Mrs. Coney's yard, next door, right after dinner, Thursday. He had Mrs. Coney's dog harnessed to a wash boiler, and was driving up and down a cobble walk, when that lady came out with a finger in each ear, and told him he must clear out as she expected company at two o'clock, and his noise was altogether too much for the occasion. His obedience was more prompt than she had any reason to expect, or even desire. In fact, he left at once, first giving the boiler a kick that nearly decapitated the dog at both ends. Mrs. Coney was obliged to unhitch the dog herself, which she did after catching him. It appears that the bell at Mrs. Coney's door is somewhat stiff in the spring, and rather difficult to sound. This fact was well known to young Coville, and while Mrs. Coney was chasing the dog, the young miscreant stole into the house, and with the the help of a file fixed that door bell so it would pull easy. At two o'clock promptly the pastor of Mrs. Coney's church came up on the stoop of Mrs. Coney's house, and being aware that the bell pull required considerable muscle, gave it a sharp twitch, and immediately left the stoop head first, with the bell knob clutched in his hand, and six feet of wire swinging above him. In the descent he split his coat the whole length of the back, broke down the gate, completely ruined his hat, and seriously bruised both elbows. Mrs. Coney, who was looking through the blinds all the time was very much shocked by the accident, but promptly led the gentleman into the house, and as promptly dressed his wounds. An examination of the bell revealed that it had been trifled with, and as Mrs. Coney was quite confident Coville's boy did it, she reported to Mrs. Coville that she actually heard him say the other day that he would "fix that bell." The fall term of school commenced yesterday, but Coville's boy was not there.

Northwood Centennial.

Saturday last, Sept. 5, was a grand day for this fine rural township. It lies in the northwest of Rockingham County, and has hill, mountain, lake, forest and field scenery, not surpassed by any town in this section of the State. From its highest eminence now the center, quite a portion of the towns of the county are seen, also the ocean and mountains in other parts of the State. The prospect is good beyond description.

One hundred years since the incorporation having been completed, the event was celebrated. A procession was formed in the morning under the marshalship of Capt. W. M. Durgin, one of the volunteers of the town and an officer in the late war, late representative in the legislature, and at present one of the county commissioners. The Northwood band headed the procession, which was composed of a cavalcade of citizens and was very long. The exercises were on the common, near the Town Hall, seated for the accommodation of a portion of the great multitude in attendance.

Hon. Robert Morrison of Portsmouth and former mayor of that city, was president, who in well chosen remarks, welcomed all to the festivities of the delightful occasion. Response by C. H. Piper. Prayer by Rev. H. B. Wiggin of Orange, N. J. Music by band. Then the historical address was given by Rev. E. C. Coggswell of Northwood. This was worthy of the Centennial Anniversary. It was so valuable as a history of the place, to natives, citizens and former residents, that it ought to be published, and we trust it may be. Dinner in a very large tent. Provison was ample. We never saw so much cooked food brought together before. In the tent was hung a portrait of Rev. Josiah Prentiss, first pastor of the first Congregational church, long in office, and the most sober, sedate and quiet man we ever saw.

In the P. M. Miss Susan C. Willey of the town read a very excellent poem on the Centennial Year. Addresses were made by Hon. Edson Hill of Manchester, J. J. Cate, B. C. Hill of Rhode Island. S. C. Buzzell, J. G. Sherburn of Lowell, A. J. Pinkham of Chelmsford, Mass., Gen. A. Hoyt of Durham. Interspersed, a poem was read by Mr. Chase, one of the ministers, written by Mrs. T. L. Hanscom, and contained historical illusions of the past, its eminent ministers long since passed away, also a late physician. Robert B. Caverly, Esq., of Lowell also gave a very humorous poem, the subject of which was, "Old Daniel, his wife Molly, and dog." This caused roars of laughter. Union services of the several Societies continued the next day (the Sabbath.) A Centennial Celebration is very appropriate and Northwood has done honor to its former fame by the manner in which it carried this out.

Cholera in Europe.

The following report takes the statistics of cholera in Europe up to the 9th of August. On that day the reports from Galicia and Hungary indicated a marked increase of the disease in those countries. In Galicia, June 15, there were 88 cases remaining under treatment. From that date to July 15, 3,751 new cases occurred. Of the total—3,839—1,018 recovered and 1,000 died. In Hungary, from July 15 to August 1, there were 41,673 cases, of which 18,139 recovered and 15,865 died. In Pesth, on August 2, there were 88 new cases, making, with those already under treatment, a total of 307, of whom 55 recovered and 36 died. On the 3d instant there were, including 37 new cases, 303 cases under treatment; among these there were 35 recoveries and 37 deaths.

Three medical men, Drs. Ligetby, Munkacsy, and Maurer, have lately fallen victims to the disease in Hungary. Two cases of cholera are reported (August 6) to have occurred in Stettin. The first case of this disease occurred in Konigsberg on July 6; from that to the 22d there were six cases. After that the disease spread rapidly, so that up to August 5, 164 cases were officially reported, with 85 deaths, at the latter date from 20 to 25 new cases and 10 or 12 deaths occurring daily; and the disease did not appear to have reached its greatest intensity. In Dantzig, on August 4, there were in the town 33 cases, with 24 deaths. Several cases had also occurred in the surrounding country districts. At the mouth of the Vistula there were 105 cases, with 28 deaths. Among the Polish raftsmen there had been 76 cases, with 37 recoveries and 55 deaths. In Braunsberg up to August 5, there were 174 cases, with 67 deaths.

From July 26, there were 13 cases in the District of Graubinden, with 9 death. This disease has appeared in the neighborhood of the Memel. In Dresden, from May 19 to August 5, there were 82 cases, of which 56 were reported as having occurred after July 31. The number of deaths was 46, and of recoveries 12. In Munich, from July 30 to August 5, there were 13 cases and deaths. In Wurzburg, on August 3, there were 3 deaths, and 13 patients remained under treatment. Two new cases occurred during the day. In Venice, August 5, the daily number of cases during a week had fallen from 26 to 11. A few cases had occurred in Turin, and in Treviso and Friuli, but the disease did not, on August 5, appear to be spreading.

A Terrible Scene in the Taunton Insane Asylum.

[Providence Journal.]

We are informed that on Wednesday an old lady of eighty years, living on Beacon street, in this city, visited the Insane Asylum at Taunton, Mass., with her daughter, to see her son, who has for some time been confined there for insanity from the effects of a wound received during the war. On arriving there the mother was shown into the reception room, where were several more lady visitors, and one or two patients, and the son was brought into the same room, when the attendant went out and locked the door. There happened to be in the room at the time a lady who had gone there expecting to secure the release of her husband, but for some reason he could not be discharged on that day. This was a great disappointment to the wife, but the effect upon the husband, when she told him, was terrible. He raged and tore round the room in perfect fury, smashing up a marble-topped table as if it were paper, and commenced operations on the clock. This he had got partially, if not quite, demolished, when the son of the old lady from this city, who had been quiet up to this time, became excited and attacked the infuriated husband.

A rough and tumble fight ensued, which was frightful to witness, and the feelings of those women, shut up in a room with two infuriated insane persons, and unable to escape, can hardly be imagined. After a little fighting, the husband, with a piece of the furniture he had been demolishing, or with his finger-nails, cut or scratched the forehead of the son, making a frightful gash, from which the blood flowed copiously, and then catching him by the throat, he choked him till his face turned purple. Doubtless he would have killed him then and there, but the old lady, seeing her son's danger, went to the rescue and after a severe struggle succeeded in making the husband let go his hold. Fortunately the attendant came in and a stop was put to the proceedings, though it required five men to secure the disappointed and infuriated husband and put him beyond the power of doing harm.

Cure the Baby's Cold.

When your little baby or child is suffering with a cold, and can scarcely breathe, do not dose it with all sorts of medicines, but try this simple remedy—the best we ever knew:—Take a raw carrot, cut the top off smooth, and with a knife dig or scrape out the pith or tight-colored centre, making a hole in the carrot large enough to take in your largest finger. Fill the hole with white sugar, then suspend or stand the carrot up in cool place. In about twelve hours the sugar will be filled with a pure, golden-colored syrup. Give the child from six to twelve drops of this, from four to six times a day, according to the age of the child and the severity of the cold. We have seen this pleasant remedy, which children readily take, because it is pure and sweet, cure cases of colds after other remedies have been given for weeks in vain. It is comparatively a new remedy, but so efficacious it seems a duty to the public to make it known. If the syrup be kept in a warm room, it will sour in a few days, when it should not be used, but new made from another carrot.

New Publications.

"NATURE'S LAWS IN HUMAN LIFE; an exposition of Spiritualism, embracing the various opinions of extremists, pro and con, together with the author's experience. Rich and Colby, publishers, Boston." The contents of this interesting work will entertain any reader, believer or unbeliever in the spiritual philosophy. It treats of Mediumship, Presentiment, Dreaming, Prophecy, Spiritual Experience, and Civil and Social Rights. In reality, it is a defence of Spiritualism, but can harm no one's feelings. The author, a well-known magnetic physician resident in Boston, quotes at the end of the work: "Let truth and falsehood grapple; whoever knew truth to be put to the worse in a free and open encounter?" The phenomenal demonstrations assigned as the work of departed friends are being investigated in all parts of the world. The opening chapters of "NATURE'S LAWS" introduce the opinions of Prof. Phelps, Dr. Dwight, Elder Knapp, Rev. J. D. Fulton and others, some of whom declare that there is a personal devil as well as a personal God, and attribute the manifestations to his power. Elder Knapp's discourse should be read for its utter "ridiculosity," as Sumner hath it. Beecher's, Murray's and Theo. Tilton's ideas represented here are a mean between the extremes of belief and unbelief. The numberless instances of prophecy, spirit-communication, spirit pleasuring, etc., which from time to time are made public and afterward are half-forgotten, are woven ingeniously by the author into a web of evidence of the truth of his assertions. Among the messages, we find one purporting to be from Rev. E. S. Gannett, killed at the Revere accident, saying, "I have no recollection of anything but a sudden blow, and then I found myself viewing the wreck of matter, and wondering into what state I had been ushered." Very important—if true—but how can one believe it to be true? Investigation does no harm, and the investigator should read this work. Rev. Geo. H. Hepworth, who is said to be mediumistic, is reported as saying in a funeral sermon: "The very minute that terrible desolation enters a house and robs the family of a loved member, leaving as a memento of the past only the vacant chair, the holiest part of our human nature looks up to Heaven with a dim, vague expectation, with a belief that has never taken a definite shape, perhaps, that though we cannot see them, they do see and know us." If mortal soul can find consolation in what spiritualism pretends is real, who shall object to the good that it does?

A Narrow Escape.

The Poughkeepsie Eagle adds the following to the accounts already published of an accident on the Hudson River Railroad: "While the men were engaged in removing a big truck from the wreck across the up track, there came near being another disaster. They had got the truck about half over the up track, when the New York special bound north came thundering along on the same track. It was the train which leaves New York at 10 A. M. The flagman at the the curve below the wreck had failed to put out his flag. All present at the wreck saw the danger, Superintendent Toucey among the rest. The men moving the truck were implored to hurry, and men ran down the track waving their hats and handkerchiefs at the fast approaching train. Within eighty rods George Van Tassel, the engineer of the fast train, saw the alarm signals, and his fireman ran back in the the tender and pulled the patents, while the engineer reversed his engine and put on all steam.

It was a frightful sight, and I never wish to witness the like again. Every one believed the fast train would smash into the truck, and just before it reached the spot there was a scampering to get out of the way. The drivers of the engine whirled backward like lightning, and the fire flew from between them and the track in streams, but still the train came on, and every instant I expected to see the engineer and fireman jump from what all deemed to be instant destruction. But Van Tassel clung to his engine, with one hand on the reverse lever and the other on the extended throttle lever, and the patents held splendidly, so hard in fact that at every revolution of the wheels the train slowed rapidly, but the locomotive hit the truck with slight force and threw it bodily to one side, with no other damage but three bars broken out of the engine's pilot, and in in one minute after the train went on again, hardly any one aboard knowing of the miraculous escape from another disaster."

—A man about forty years old and a woman seemingly seventy years of age were at the Detroit & Milwaukee station, recently, waiting for a train, when the man strolled out on the dock and caught sight of one of the city life-preservers hanging to its hook. He asked what it was and a laborer told him, and then he asked: "How long will it preserve a feller's life?" The man told him a hundred years, and the information staggered the stranger. Walking around a few minutes as if meditating, he stepped to his informant and said, "See here, stranger, I'll take one o' them preservers, and if it wouldn't be askin' too much of you, I'd like to have you tell the old woman in there that you haven't another one for sale, and that the machine which made 'em has busted."

Business Notices.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only soft article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—(Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.)

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, briskness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are those who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, desponding victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this superior tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lockjaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, from swellings, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic-rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a pecuiar containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeneied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of machines. Which are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. No family should be without the Singer, adapted to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, why is it that prompted people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SIX HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,658) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. Thus, more than 200,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which best meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and adaptability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the Awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Portsmouth Conservatory of Music,

NO. 78 State Street,

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $8, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and application for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

Dennis Leary, charged with killing H. R. Stoddard's horse "Gipsey," plead guilty on Monday before Judge Page. On a charge of over-driving, he plead not guilty and the case was continued till to-day, Leary recognizing in the sum of $500.

The War department are employing twenty-five men at Jerry's Point, and a like number on Gerrish Point in the erection of earthworks for the defence of Portsmouth harbor. The foundations are of stone, broken in a crusher, and the earth is sifted before going into the embankment, which is simply a wide strata of earth open at the end.

George Hadley, of this city, died last winter on Marble island, in the far north. He was one of the crew of the whaling barque Orray Taft, which vessel was driven high and dry on the island by a gale in September, and was joined by the whaling barque Ansel Gibbs a month later, the latter vessel being stove to pieces. A large part of both crews died from want and exposure, during the winter; the survivors have arrived at New Bedford.

The small, inconvenient shanty at the navy yard landing, at the foot of Daniel street, which has long done duty as a porter's lodge, is to be replaced by a larger and better building, workmen being now engaged in making the change. While the dock wall is being rebuilt, we should think those interested would move it out to a level with the face of Adams & Co's lumber yard, which would make the place look better, and do no harm if it did no good.

Bathing at Long Branch.

A correspondent from Long Branch writes that "the fair damsel who tries to combine becomingness with use in her bathing suit, generally ends by looking not only very uncomfortable, but very ridiculous. For instance, a fair female at one of the lower hotels recently made her appearance on the beach at the bathing hour attired in a costume which struck amazement to the minds of all beholders. A very brief tunic of white alpaca, trimmed with pale blue, was belted around her slender waist. Her lower limbs were clad to the knee in Knickerbocker trousers of white alpaca, and below these appeared dainty striped stockings of blue and white, while her feet were encased in white shoes ornamented with blue rosettes. Acoquettish little hat trimmed with blue was perched on one side of her head, and from beneath it fell heavy braids of pale golden hair. With rapid step and unshrinking confidence she braves the perils of the angry deep. The waves break over her, the drenched alpaca clings close to her rounded shoulder and shapely arm, and opera-glasses are at a premium on the bluff. Suddenly a huge breaker is seen to arise and sweep majestically towards the shore. It reaches the group of bathers, thunders over them, and subsides. The air is vocal with shrill little shrieks of feminine dismay, but loudest of all rings a scream from the lips of the golden-haired nymph in white alpaca, and her arms are seen gesticulating wildly in the air. Alas! for her elegant toilet and elegant coiffure! The mighty wave has knocked her down, covered her dress with sand and seaweed, and, worst of all, has swept off not only her jaunty little hat, but her golden hair as well, and a tiny knot, about the size of a silkworm's cocoon, alone decorates the back of her head, where late those shining tresses waved resplendent. The hat, with its capillary treasures still attached to it, was recovered and handed to her, and she retired to the shades of her bath-house a balder and a sadder woman—perchance a wiser one."

A "young fellow" took a friend into the police station for a drink of water, recently. Telling the stranger to put the pipe of the fire extinguisher in his mouth, the young fellow turned the "soda" on and stranger got a mouthful of the worst tasting water he ever irrigated with.

—A Bridgeport, Conn., carman had a dream. He thought he was trying to back his horse, but the animal was obstinate. Rising in his bed and seizing his bed-fellow by the chin-whiskers, he said, "back, ye ould divil, or I'll knock yer dashed head off." In another moment he found himself on the floor on the opposite side of the room, very much wide awake, while his room-mate stood over him with clenched fists and wanted to know what he meant "by such conductions as those."

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Dressing Low.

The following caustic article from the Home Journal will be read with varied feeling: No woman ever dresses low from a high motive. No lady goes to the opera, (continues the Cosmopolitan), to balls or dinner parties with her bosom bare for the purpose of pleasing her husband or her affianced lover? Neither does she denude her breast for the gratification of her own sex. What can be the motive for "this scandalous undressing" in public? Let us treat this delicate subject philosophically, yet fearlessly. We readily confess that there is nothing so exquisitely beautiful on earth as the bust of a beautiful woman. And for this very reason it should not be exposed to the wanton gaze of vulgar eyes. No woman who truly loves her husband ever desires to exhibit her charms, "sacred, secret, sweet and precious," to any eye but his. And yet what do we see, or rather, what do we not see in the shape of naked arms, shoulders, backs and bosoms at every evening gathering among what is called the "best society?" One is continually reminded of the sarcasm of Dr. Franklin, nearly a hundred years ago, who, when present at one of these gatherings of undressed English women, was asked if he had ever seen anything like it before, blushingly replied, "not since he was weaned." But we did not dwell on the fact of the existence of this fashionable scandal. Let us strike at the root of this immoral custom of "low dressing." The motive, as we have said, is not a good one. We have heard men who consider themselves connoisseurs at these exhibitions of female nudity declare that they "like to see it, but would not like to see their own wives half naked in public." No man who properly prizes and appreciates his wife ever did or ever will like to see his better half exposing her naked bust in public. It is clear and conclusive, then, that this low-necked fashion never was designed or followed for the delectation of husbands. And even woman will always "pick to pieces" the most audacious undressed belle of the ball. Why, then, do women indulge in this immodest, immoral and unhealthy style of dress? One is afraid to press the question to an honest, logical solution. The true answer is derogatory to women.

She bares her bust to excite something more than envy in woman and admiration in men. And this she knows full well when she looks at her undraped form in the mirror in the character of a statue vivante. It is, in plain English, simply the fashion and the art of seduction. There—we have got the word out which has long been sticking in our throat. Decollete dresses are only fit to be worn by wantons who are sufficiently honest to confess their purpose. On the score of health the fashion cannot be too severely denounced.

How many fatal cases of consumption have been caused by sudden exposure to chill midnight air, on coming out of steaming ball rooms and opera houses, with the most vital part of the body unprotected? On the tombstone of many a beautiful woman might be truthfully inscribed: "Death from low-necked dresses." Turning again to the moral aspect of the folly, it is no exaggeration to say that more cases of seduction, elopement and domestic ruin have arisen from these wanton temptations than from all other social causes.

The apples of Eve are too tempting to the hungry eyes of our yielding Adams. Therefore, let all modest women remember the injunction of the poet—

"Hide, oh, hide those hills of snow!"

And also remember that a fine form, well and completely dressed, piques the imagination and excites far more intellectual admiration than only half-covered bodies, however perfect the outlines and soft the surface may be.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a Journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

OUR UGLY DOG.

[Concluded.]

I had been with Alice Meadowes when she died, and had taken home the poor little baby who, however, lived but a few days, and was buried in her mother's grave. As I looked at the desolate log house, there came to me a vivid remembrence of John Meadowes as he stood in the door and watched me as I went away with his child.

But I had small time for thought, for the next instant the ugly dog, who had run on before us out of sight, came tearing back along the road and barking and yelling apparently out of his senses; he sprang at the horses' heads, and seemed determined to stop the buggy or even turn it from the path.

"Good Heavenes! The dog is mad!" said Diana in alarm.

The next instant, snorting, screaming, wild with terror, the colts wheeled short around, overturned the buggy, and kicking desperately, broke from the traces and dashed back on the homeward road. We were all thrown on the soft grass, and sprang to our feet unhurt. Diana was in mortal fear of the dog, for she thought him mad; but I knew that some other danger threatened, and, looking round for a place of refuge, made toward the log-house, to which Dick was already urging his sister; while the dog, running backward and forward from one to the other, whined and yelped in an ecstacy of impatience and distress. The one room of the house was bare and empty, but a ladder led to the loft above.

"Up the ladder, up the ladder, Mrs. Graham, quick?" cried Dick, and he flung to the door. "Quick! I know what is coming! Good God! This door won't fasten!"

Flying from we knew not what, we rushed up the ladder into the loft, and, as we stood together on the boards, Dick, with desperate strength, tore the ladder from its fastening, and sent it crashing to the floor below. Most happily for us, there was a trap door over the opening, and Dick pulled it from the rusty wire which held it to the wall, and secured it with a large iron hook which slipped into a staple in the floor. On the trap door the dog took his stand; and, alternately growling and wagging his tail, seemed at once to defy the coming danger, and encourage his friends.

There was a small window in the room. The glass was broken, but the heavy wooden shutter still swung to and fro on the wind, and Dick pulled it close and fastened it on the inside, so that but for the faint light that shone through the cracks in the roof and up through a hole in the floor we were in darkness.

"What is it?" I asked, in a whisper, but, before Dick could speak, I was answered.

There was a terrible sound between a yell and a roar, the door below was dashed from its hinges by some great weight and then roar on roar of baffled, brutal rage rent the air. We clung close together, expecting death, though, as yet, neither Diana nor I knew the nature of our enemy. There was a moment's pause in the deafening uproar, and I looked down through the space left by a missing board in the floor. What was the creature that carried its vast tawny bulk to and fro across the lower room, swift, easy, and graceful as a bird? As I looked, the thing lifted its huge head and showed its green eyes, glaring with hate, and the white glitter of its terrible teeth. There was no mistaking the nature of our peril. The beast was the Bengal tiger we had seen a few days before in the caravan.

Spiritless and dull as the brute had been in his cage, he had struck me then as uncommonly powerful and fierce, and we had been told that his temper was untamably savage.

What were we to do? We had no means of defense should the creature break in upon us. It was a lonely place, and very few people passed that way. Any traveller who saw our wrecked buggy and came to seek us would only be rushing on certain death. The horses might run home, and our friends might come in search of us, but the worst they would apprehend would be some accident from the runaway horses, and if they came to the lonely house in the swamp, it would only be to meet death at the threshold. For the moment we were safe. I had natural history enough to know that the creature could not get up to the rafters and tear away the boards of the upper floor.

Probably the beast had been missed immediately, and I thought it likely that more than one party was out searching with dogs, and might follow up the trail, but it might be some time before they could fall on the traces, and in the meantime here we were besieged by a wild beast as cunning as it was cruel. The most exposed portion of our fortress was the little window in the gable. The shutter opened nearly flush with the floor, and beneath there was a little lean-to from the roof of which the window could easily be reached, and I knew that the boards would not long sustain the attack of those claws.

The beast might not, however, find out this point, and, in the meantime, it behooved us to keep as quiet as possible. He might get tired of waiting and watching and go away, but, even if he did, we should never dare to stir from our shelter. My greatest fear was that the horses might go home, and that my husband, on thinking of nothing worse than the overturn, might come to look for us unarmed and defenceless. My mind was so full of this dread that I do not think I fully realized the terrors of our own position.

Diana, happily, was not one of those girls whose first impulse in any danger is to scream. She slipped down on the boards, and, laying her head in my lap, held Dick's hand tight, but she did not say a word nor utter a cry.

Dick was far more moved than his sister. He trembled all over, and turned on me a face so white and miserable, that in all our distress I was conscious of a surprised feeling at seeing a boy of his spirit and character so overcome.

"All is not hopeless yet," I said, in a whisper.

"O Mrs. Graham," said he, "it's all my fault!"

"Your fault? How can that be?"

"Oh, I've been such a self-willed fool! When I went for the horses I met Mr. Moore and he told me he had just heard that the tiger had got loose, and I never let him know that we were going to Galoosa, because I was sure if I did he'd come up and put a stop to our ride; and I didn't want to drive round by the mill, for I thought the captain might have heard, and all because I was so determined to show I could drive and to have my own way, and do what I'd set out to do, and I wouldn't believe there was any danger till after we had started, and then it began to come over me what I had done, and that was why I wanted to take the short road, and now I have killed you and Diana!"—and poor Dick hid his face with a moan of remorse and despair.

Poor Dick! Many a piece of boyish willfulness and self-confidence I had known in my time, but none that seemed likely to bear such bitter fruit.

"Oh Dick!" was all that Diana said.

It was no time for reproaches, and I used none, I am glad to think; but I confess that for a moment I felt bitterly resentful. The beast below, hearing our voices, reared himself on his hind legs; and, as his head nearly touched the boards on which we stood he tore at the wall with his claws until the whole house shook, and the great splinters flew from the solid oak logs. He switched his tail to and fro, and whined and chattered his teeth like an angry cat that sees a bird just out of her reach, and then resumed his swift, restless movement to and fro. I could not but gaze with a sort of horrified admiration at the creature's dreadful beauty, the union of perfect grace and tremendous power displayed in every motion. The dog pressed close to my side, and licked my hand; and then, as the tiger repassed the opening in the floor, he set up his bristles with a low, deep howl. I don't know how long we sat together there on the floor in the twilight. The garret was hot and close, but we dared not open the shutter for a breath of air.

After a time, our foe seemed to weary of his restless march, and throwing his vast weight and length along the floor, lay with his eyes fixed on the hole in the ceiling, like a cat watching a mouse-hole. Even now sometimes in a dream, I see those eyes as I saw them then, It began to grow dusk, and the little light there was in our prison grew dimmer.

Suddenly, the dog began scratching at the window-shutters, as though anxious to get out. I tried to quiet him, but in vain; and then, longing for a breath of fresh air, I ventured to open the shutter by a finger's breadth. The instant I did so, the dog forced his way through, and from the roof of the little shed sprang to the ground, and sped away to the swamp, but not toward home. I bolted the shutter instantly, but the noise aroused the tiger, and, starting to his feet, he made the place echo and re-echo with hoarse roar.

Had he been a genuine wild beast, used to providing for himself and to hunting his own dinner, our lease of life would have been short; but having been brought up in a cage, he was not acute enough to look for another opening into the place where his expected prey had taken refuge. I have seen a petted house-cat wholly at a loss to account for the disappearance of a mouse, which she had chased into a crack having an opening at the end opposite to that where Mrs. Puss had sat down to watch, quite confident that the game was her own. Darker and darker it grew, and still the brute would not leave his place.

I wondered that no one had come to seek us; but I did not know till afterward, that "the colts," instead of going back to Maysville, had returned to their old home, eight miles away from the village.

Diana kept herself very quiet, and poor Dick, except a word or two of remorse and self-reproach, was equally silent. I thought of our oldest boy, our Ion, expected home from school, the next day, after a year's absence; of the two little ones at home, and their father, and for a time there came upon me a horror of great darkness.

The beast grew more restless. He whined and snarled, and struck savagely at the rafters overhead; but the great beams held. Then it seemed suddenly to occur to his mind that there might be other means of reaching us, and he rushed out doors and began prowling round and round the house, as we could see through a crack or two between the logs.

We knew that, unless help came soon, we were lost, and we drew closer together. There were a few words of whispered prayer, and then Dick, pale and determined, took his place near the window.

"I've heard he don't take but one when he springs. It's my place," said the boy.

Diana clung to him, sobbing for the first time, and he gently put her away from him. The next instant the creature bounded to the roof of the shed. The crack in the shutter was darkened; we heard him snuffing impatiently, and then the shutter shook and trembled. Dick opened his clasp-knife, a piteously insufficient weapon against the fearful claws that were then rending and tearing at the frail boards.

"Open the trap door," he said. Perhaps we can swing ourselves down and get away."

I undid the fastening, but Diana clung to her brother. The shutter held out longer than we could have hoped, for I saw that the creature would be upon us in another moment. To our surprise, he seemed suddenly to pause in his attack. There was a long, low hiss and whistle, a half-strangled roar, a heavy fall, a shout, and then again the strange sound, in which old experiences on the plains enabled me to recognize the whir of the thrown lariat.

Not daring to believe that we were saved, we looked through the cracks, but the desperate struggle which we could hear going on below was out of sight. Through the shouting and the half-choked roar of the tiger we could hear the ugly dog barking and growling furiously. In a few minutes, he came flying into the lower room, and unable to reach me, he yelped and danced in frantic excitement.

He was followed by a tall, fair, blue-eyed giant of a man, who, beholding a lady above him, climbed up the wall more like a cat than a man, and reaching our place of refuge, remarked as to society in general: "Well, I swan!" and then finding that expression of feeling inadequate, "well, I do vum!"

"Is the creature dead?" I asked.

"Well, no, ma'am," said the showman, for such he was; "the ain't dead, but he's safe enough. You see, he's a vallable kind of an animal; and he ain't bad, as tigers go," he concluded in a tone of apology.

"Here poor Diana, with an hysterical burst of tears and laughter, said that he might not be as bad, as tigers went; but that, as they stayed, she thought him highly objectionable.

"Well, I s'pose he is, miss," said our new friend; "but we never calculate to have him lying around loose; but he's a vallable animal, and I'm kinder fond of the critter, and I'd hate to kill him.'.

"I'm sure we don't want the poor thing killed," said Diana nervously; "but oh, we want to go home!"

"Yes, certainly," said the big man soothingly. "I guess the best way to get out will be right down out of this window on to the roof."

In a few minutes we all stood safe on the green sward, while the ugly dog ran to and fro from one to the other, and then, finally, exhausted with his exertions, lay down and panted for breath until the state of his mind once more impelled him to dance and yelp.

The tiger, wound round and round with the tough folds of more than one lasso, and with his feet chained, lay helpless on the ground. Two stout fellows armed with knives and pistols, stood over him; but Dick turned away from the sight with a shudder.

"How did you find him?" he asked the showman.

"It was all that dog," said our friend. "I declare the way some critters act does beat all natur. You see, we lost the dog going on more'n a week back. One of the men got mad at the dog when he was drunk, and give him an awful whipping—and I expect it hurt his feelings, and he run off. As for the tiger he got out early this morning; and we didn't want to make none too much fuss about it, and we just set out after him; but I suppose half the country's out looking now. Me and Jim and these two we took the lariats—I learned how to use the thing out on the plains. It comes kind of handy to know most things generally. We'd meant to exhibit this afternoon, and after we'd hunted the critter pretty much all the morning, we went back to the tent over in Galoosa to see if any one else had heard of him and we hadn't more'n got there when in bounces this dog. He hadn't got no name, only 'the ugly dog;' and he comes up to me and begins to beg and whine, and then he catches hold of me and tries to drag me along with him, and I felt that something was to pay. So, having the tiger on my mind, I naturally thought of him first; and as long as I didn't know where to look for him, I was just as like to find him by following the dog as any other way; so we set out, and you never saw a critter so tickled as that dog was. He led us along through the swamp, and by and by I was sure I heard the beast.

"So we kind of stole a march on him, and when he jumped on the roof we'd got quite comfortably close to him; and he was so busy clawing the shutter he never suspected nothing; and I threw the lariat, and it took him just as slick as a whistle. I'm awful glad of it, because I'd have hated to shoot him only for acting according to his nature. Tain't as if he was a Christian, you know," concluded the showman, excusing his pet.

"But how could the dog know he would find you in Galoosa?"

"Well, critters know more things than folks think they do. May be he remembered we were there last year, or, likely enough, some of the other dogs told him."

"I hope you'll let me keep him." I said, as the ugly dog pressed close to my side.

"Oh, my; yes'm! I ain't the kind of man to take a dog away from a lady," said the gallant showman. "I've sent one of the boys to Galoosa for the tiger's cage and my buggy, and I'll see you home. I'm awful sorry the beast has put you and the young lady to so much inconvenience; but he ain't a bad fellow now, really."

We reached home before any rumor of the runaway colts had come to Maysville; but we found the village in great excitement about the tiger, and the captain, in rather an anxious state of mind, preparing to go out and meet us. He looked rather grim when he heard of our adventure, and received poor Dick's penitent confession; but had the discretion to do nothing more than to express the hope that it would "be a lesson to him," and, indeed, I think it was.

As for the ugly dog, he was the hero of the family. So long as he lived, his was the warm place on the rug in winter, the shady piazza in summer, and any quantity of affection and caresses. He lived to extreme old age, and, in spite of growing infirmity, preserved his loving and amiable temper to the end. His last act was to drag himself to my feet, and he died with his head on my arm, feebly trying to lick my hand. There were some tears shed over his grave, and we did not think it necessary to enter into an argument against the firm belief entertained by our children that "the ugly dog had gone to heaven."

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1873.

Maine.

The Pine-Tree State seems to have gone for Dingley about the same it was once profanely described to have gone for Gov. Kent. A two-thirds vote has been polled, and the Republican state ticket has three-fourths the usual majority. This will sit very well for an "off" year. There was something of a "reform" spurt in portions of the State, but it seems to have got lost in the woods away down in Aroostook, or thereabouts. It makes no show in the returns. Evidently the people in Maine are satisfied with Republican rule; and on the other hand, the manly fashion in which the Democrats went to the polls and took the drubbing which they knew was in store for them, must afford cold comfort to the uneasy souls who long for some new departure. The people in Maine don't seem inclined to break down party lines yet.

The "Impoverished South."

Considering how irretrievably the Southern States have been ruined by "negro domination" and "carpet-bag rule," it is astonishing how well they stand up under their burdens. The sympathizing wail of Northern democrats for the sufferings of the erring sisterhood goes up unceasingly; yet unsentimental figures are continually telling us that in few portions of this worldly vineyard are enterprise and industry so richly rewarded as in most of the Southern States.

Even in South Carolina—the pet grievance of our democratic friends—production is increasing at an astonishing rate. Evidence of this is furnished by the Charleston News and Courier in its annual statement of the business of that port for the past year. According to this statement, the cotton receipts at Charleston, as compared with those of 1868-9, increased 92 per cent.; rice receipts, 38; exports of naval stores, 182; exports of lumber, 12, and bank capital 500 per cent. This last statement is extremely significant. The money must have come either from profits saved, or from other places, and such accessions to the resources of a city are rarely made unless there is a good prospect of profit. The trade in phosphates has grown to 50,000 tons of raw material, of which 20,000 tons were used in Charleston, and 30,000 tons exported. Of manufactured fertilizers Charleston sent, this year, into the interior 56,000 tons—a gain of 180 per cent. over 1871. The export of fruit and vegetables to the North has risen from almost nothing at the close of the war, to a handsome figure, 27,000 bushels of potatoes and 90,000 crates of other articles having been sent forward—a gain upon last year of 73 per cent. in the former case and 5 1-2 in the latter.

The magnitude of the present trade of Charleston is seen from the figures which the News gives; it amounts to $40,000,000 for the staples (cotton, rice, naval stores, &c.,) and $30,000,000 for the local trade in dry goods, shoes, hats, &c. As to the State at large, the News states that the prospect is equally encouraging. The use of phosphates as fertilizers has brought about a great revolution throughout the State generally, since the poor but healthy lands of the upper and middle sections of the State, where the white man can successfully work, have been brought under culture, and cotton is now raised up to the very mountains, and in regions formerly supposed to be entirely unsuited to its culture.

The picture here given of the prosperity of one port and one State, by a paper whose standing in the democratic church cannot be questioned, will answer for any portion of the South where the whites do not chiefly occupy themselves in loafing around the bar-rooms, "d——ning the niggers because they won't work." The South is blessed with a fertile soil and a genial climate; it has an almost undisputed monopoly in the production of certain agricultural staples; it abounds in mineral wealth far surpassing that which has made England the richest nation on the globe; if, with these advantages, the South allows poverty to sit by her firesides, and ruin or decay to fasten upon her cities and towns, it is because her people are incapable of grasping the opportunities that lie thickly around them.

Readables.

The Massachusetts republican convention meets to-day. At this writing Washburn seems to have the inside track. But in politics doubtful things are proverbially uncertain.

About ten o'clock Friday morning, Sir Edward Thornton, accompanied by Mr. Archibald, British Consul General at New York, called on Secretary Fish at the State Department, Washington, and handed over to him a coin certificate representing fifteen and one-half millions gold, the amount awarded to the United States by the Geneva Arbitration. Secretary Fish wrote a receipt in full for payment of the money, and thus a great controversy between two nations was settled, in a financial point of view.

Senor Castelar is elected president of the Spanish ministry, and has organized a new cabinet. He is resolved upon a determined effort to put down the Carlists and intransigentes, proposing to call out 150,000 men and arm half a million reserves.

Several hundred Kickapoos and Potawatamies are on their way from Mexico to the Kickapoo reservation in Kansas, under the direction of the special commissioners, and the successful transfer of all these Indians is confidently anticipated.

Mrs. Charles S. Stratton (General Tom Thumb,) who was so severely injured in Middleborough a few weeks ago by falling down stairs, is so far recovered as to be able to ride out occasionally. She and her sister, Miss Minnie, are famous horsewomen, and frequently ride to the village with their trim little ponies and carriage.

The postmaster-general declares the action of Postmaster Filley of St. Louis in assessing his employes five per cent. of their salaries, to be unwarrantable, and will cause him to refund.

Extravagance at Saratoga.

[John Paul in N. Y. Tribune.]

But there is some extravagance at Saratoga which I do condemn, and that is in the housekeeping of these hotels. The table expenses I would cut down materially. Instead of the present multifarious bill of fare, meandering through which, in the attempt to find what one wants, one gets hopelessly lost, I would just give a good soup or two, some seasonable fish (salt cod is always in season), a joint or so, a bit of game (when game is cheap), and a standard dessert for those given to flummeries—I never waste my sweetness on the dessert air. Everything should be exquisitely cooked, served smoking hot—except the ice cream—and from day to day the bills should be varied. Under the present system the polyphagous personage surrounds himself with dishes up to the chin, some of which he smells, a few of which he tastes, but the majority of which he sends away simply mussed and spoiled—for a man can't eat everything on the bill. The same man and his wife would order very differently where they serve things a la carte; if the traditional idea of one plate of ice cream with two spoons were not really carried out, an approach to it would be made by ordering "one portion" of each course and making it do for both. Men of moderate stomachic requirements are put to immense and unfair expense by this lavish regime; some one has to pay for it all, of course. It might correct the evil somewhat to have the bill of fare graded off in inches, charging so much for eating down. Then one would have to pay only for each inch one ate. And, depend on't, a good many wouldn't travel so far or so fast as they do at present.

Business Notices.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, briskness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, despending victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeniod horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-EIGHT (219,756) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Portsmouth Conservatory of Music,

NO. 78 State Street,

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $8, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and application for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

Local Matters.

Systematic Thieving Scotched.

City Marshal Johnson arrested, on Tuesday morning, a man named Nathaniel Haskell, of Gloucester, Mass., who has for some time past carried on a systematic practice of stealing from the freight cars of the Eastern Railroad, in the Gloucester station. His peculations in this direction will amount to upwards of one thousand dollars. Haskell is also charged with breaking and entering the house of Jeremiah Cook of Gloucester, from which place he succeeded in obtaining quite an amount of property, a part of which was found in his posession when arrested. He has a female accomplice claiming to be his wife, who was arrested about the same time by Marshal Johnson. Deputy Sheriff Lane, of Gloucester is in this, city, to take the prisoner Haskell to Massachusetts for trial.

President Jones, of the Portsmouth and Dover Railroad, has concluded a contract with S. B. Bornes, of Chicago, for a Howe truss, 190 feet in length, which will complete the bridge across the Piscataqua river at Dover Point. The cost of this truss will be $24,000, and the contractor is to assume all risks.

Merrimac Encampment, No. 7, I. O. of O. F., of Newburyport, will visit this city on Friday, Sept. 19th, and will be the guests of Mt. Sinai and Strawberry Bank Encampments. Strawberry Bank Encampment will parade for the first time with their new uniforms, consisting of chapeau, royal purple baldric, gauntlets, sword and belt. The two encampments will receive the Newburyport Patriarchs upon the arrival of the 10:50 train.

Mrs. Jane L. Patterson occupied the pulpit of the Universalist church, according to announcement, on Sunday. The attendance was very large. Mrs. Patterson possesses an excellent delivery, the effect of which is enhanced by a sweet, clear voice, and an assured yet modest bearing. Her text was from Psalm cxxii, 2: "Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem." She occupied thirty-one minutes in the sermon, giving great satisfaction, as she did when occupying this pulpit on a previous occasion. Her husband, Rev. A. J. Patterson, is at present at Poland Spring, Me., an invalid.

Mrs. Ellen Milton, nee Beals, an Irish woman living in Holmes' Court at the South End, was found dead in her bed on Tuesday morning. She was a person of intemperate habits, and these, with exposure, brought on an intermittent fever, which resulted in her death as above stated. An inquest was held, and the jury found a verdict of death from natural causes, although it appeared in evidence that the deceased was much neglected during her short sickness and left to die alone. Mrs. Milton's age was about 55.

Escape of Diehl.

[Nashua Telegraph.]

Jesse Diehl, who deliberately murdered Robert E. Blair in this city on Sunday, the 18th of May last, has escaped—escaped the extreme penalty of the law. By a process which we confess we do not understand, the court became convinced, on examining the evidence given before the Grand Jury, that Diehl would not be convicted of murder in the first degree. This conviction influenced the Attorney-General to accept a plea of guilty in the second degree, although he expressed in open court the opinion that the murder was deliberate and premeditated.

We suppose there is not a person in Nashua but knows that the murder of Blair was deliberate and flagitious, and not a little astonishment will be felt that Diehl escapes the penalty of life for life. Under such a state of things, it seems to us that it would be infinitely better for the cause of justice that a verdict in the second degree should be found by a jury than in any other way.

—A Detroit dog accidentally bit a woman whom he was assisting in the pursuit of a rat, some time ago, and she has just died of hydrophobia, though the dog went on about his business, and has never let on that he had it at all.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most officinal cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Selsey Bill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

LEHIGH, WILKESBARRE, PITTSTON

And other first class Coal. For sale by the Cargo, Car-load or at retail from our wharf.

Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessary for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great skill and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. ONE of the large and splendid Steamships of this line will leave Pier No. 42, North River, foot of Canal St., New York, at 12 o'clock M., on the 5th, and 20th of every month, (except when those dates fall on Sunday, and then on the preceding Saturday,) for ASPINWALL, connecting via Panama Railway with one of the Company's Steamships from Panama for SAN FRANCISCO, touching at MAZATLILLO.

All departures connect at PANAMA with Steamers for SOUTH PACIFIC and CENTRAL AMERICAN ports.

For Japan and China, Steamer leaves San Francisco first of every month, except when it falls on Sunday, then on the day preceding.

One Hundred Pounds of Baggage allowed each adult.

Baggage received on the dock the day before sailing, from steamboats, railroads and passengers who prefer to send their baggage, by experienced surgeon on board. Medicine and attendance free.

For freight or passage Tickets or further information apply at the Company's Office, on the Wharf, FOOT OF CANAL ST., NORTH RIVER, NEW YORK. GEO. H. BRADBURY, President.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fever, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Daily Chronicle.

The Water-Bug Pest.
[New York Herald.]

Like the locust swarms of Egypt have the so-called "Croton-bugs" taken possession of nearly every dwelling-house, office, warehouse and other buildings in the various parts of the city. Scarcely a desk, bureau-drawer, closet, wardrobe, or even the refrigerator, is exempt from the presence of these annoying insects. The flour barrel is a special hive for them, resting and breeding there by the million under the hoops, headings and wherever a crevice can be found. Even the sanctity of beds and bedding is not exempt from their visitations, and, no matter how careful and tidy a housewife may be, she cannot overcome the myriads of these pests as they swarm from wainscotings, mantels, surbases, dining tables, window sills, floorings, under-carpets, from cupboards, and elsewhere and everywhere. They revel in the "dead shot" powders that are represented to be their "sure exterminators," and dance—it may be the "dance of death"—in he dough trough and bread basket, if they are dosed with Paris green, a poison so fatal to human life, and which they can track with hem wherever they travel. They are said to be as harmless as crickets, but unlike the cricket, which is seldom visible, they are to be seen with the naked eye almost everywhere. The cricket is heard, but not seen; the Croton bug is seen, but not heard. It does not bite, but it pinches and scratches.

On their first appearance they were supposed to be without teeth or fangs, but by cultivation and high living they are now not only able to show their fangs but to rake over the sheepskin binding of a copy of Blackstone as if it were simply a copy of the "Cricket on the Hearth" in paper or pasteboard. Of the genus cockroach, they seldom get so fat as that insect, and hence are not so valuable as an article of food to produce obesity or plumpness of form in the Circassian and Georgian female slave marts of Turkey and Egypt.

A friend determined to lay a trap to catch a swarm. He laid a cloth in the spot where they most did congregate in his kitchen, close by the range, for they covet warmth, hence may not be considered a Siberia or a northern bug, but rather a bug of the Timbuctoo tribe. In a few minutes the cloth was covered with, perhaps, a million or more of the insects. Our friend cautiously gathered the corners of the cloth together, and in a twinkling dumped the whole cargo into a sinkful of Croton water—their natural element! Instead the sneeighn sink and drown, what was the surprise of our friend to see them curveting around like champion skaters on a skating rink, cutting the celebrated figure "8" and other capers. After disporting themselves to their satisfaction they crawled up on the family towel and aired and dried themselves at their leisure.

Pulverized borax has been recommended for their extermination; but instead of driving them away they seem to think that the borax should be used as young ladies do a solution of the same to improve their complexions. Powdered alum also has been tried for their riddance, with no more effect than a green persimmon would have had—perhaps not so much. They have been known to travel over a bowl of broken ice, and reaching a champagne bottle, crawl up and perch themselves on the cork, looking as if they were giving a lusty "cock-a-doodle-doo!" over their achievement. It is all very clever for quacks to assert that their compound, or liquid, or powder, will drive them away. Perhaps it will, unless they are hungry; but it drives them only from one shelf in a cupboard to another, from one drawer to another, from one crack or crevice to another, to return in a brief period with a grand army of re-enforcements.

It is stated that the large number of furnished houses to let up town arises from the fact that their owners have been actually overwhelmed and driven out by these bugs—and some of the owners consider themselves "big bugs" too. They are supposed to be partial to French flats, but this is not so; they shower their favors alike upon the high and the low tenements, the rich and the poor. Being truly democratic, all flats are alike in their national greed. Some of them are quite large and have wings, and in flying around it is so pleasant to have them pop into your face and then drop into the plate of ice cream of the young lady who is enjoying the luxury and your pleasant conversation at the same time.

But it is useless to try and make a little fun out of these pests. They are a positive and a growing nuisance almost everywhere in the city, and whether or not the Croton water or the Croton pipes or the Croton reservoirs are to be held responsible for their creation and propagation, it is certain that any philosopher who can invent or suggest a plan for their complete annihilation will deserve the thanks of the community.

A Japanese Bridge.

A writer in the People's Magazine thus describes a Japanese bridge: "When we came in sight of the Fuji-kawa (river), we found we had to cross it by a suspension bridge built entirely of bamboo. The Japanese are naturally very proud of this work, and they may well be so. It is the only one in the country, the river being too broad and swift to allow of bridges being built, except at enormous cost. At this place their ingenuity was displayed to perfection, and it is a sight worth seeing. The surrounding scenery is very pretty, the river running down a lovely valley, the hills covered with trees on each side, of great height, rising abruptly from the banks. The bridge we had to cross was about a hundred feet above the water, and its width a single span of sixty feet. It is made by the bamboo being twisted into a sort of rope, and a single plank is laid on it to walk over upon. The bridge shakes and sways very much as one crosses, and there being no railing of any sort at the side, it looks more unpleasant to cross than it really is. The best method of getting over is to look straight to your front, and walk quickly; to double across is perhaps better, though, of course, nothing can prevent its swaying from side to side in rather a disagreeable manner. The bridge is about four feet wide—not a bit too much for any one who may possibly lose his head, as the river rushes below over huge rocks in a very uninviting way."

Gull Hamilton on Clerks.

A plainly but perfectly dressed lady, with the best blood of the world in her veins, and—what is more imposing to the haberdashing heart—with plenty of money in her pocket, went, not long since, into a shop to buy napkins. The potentate of the counter showed her such napery as he thought suited to her social position. "These are rather coarse," she suggested. "Have you nothing finer?" "Oh, yes," said the gentleman, "but they are more expensive." It is ever to be regretted that the lady turned in silence and left the shop, because that clerk will never know that it was his own idiotic effrontery, and not the expense of the napkins, which lost him that customer.

A lady who never made any great figure in the world, and certainly not in a waterproof cloak on a rainy day, was seeking a parasol. The clerk showed her some very common, not to say shabby, specimens, which she declined. A little further down the counter she bought a whole piece of fine and costly linen, observing which, the knight of the parasol came down and begged her to re-examine his assortment, of which he had contrived to unearth an altogether different and better collection. She, too, fell below the requirements of the occasion, and bought her parasol without enlightening him upon her discovery of his stupid mistake.

A lady, large and lovely, a serene Quaker goddess, made some benevolent casual remark to the clerk with whom she was trafficking, just as she would have patted the head of a strange dog who might have run up and sniffed at her gown, and the little whipper-snapper clerk followed her to the door and—winked at her! And while she stood staring at him in her first amazed consciousness of his individual existence, he winked again! Thus vacuous do the gods make a human skull, yet furnish it with all the ganglia of life.

Happy those merchants who can secure the right sort of clerks—for a right sort there is. I bought a table-cloth of him yesterday. I had forgotten to take the size of the table, or a pattern of the color to be matched. Patiently he evolved my probable needs from my fragmentary facts, discussed pleasantly the presumptive evidence, and seemed as much interested in the harmonies of my dining-room as if he expected to eat there thrice a day during the remainder of his natural life. Did he deceive me? Not a bit. I know of a surety that my dining-room was no more to him than the peanut stand on the common opposite. Me and it has he already alike forgotten. None the less was his momentary and friendly, but not familiar, assumption of interest in me and mine, altogether winning and encouraging; and doubtless also was it for that moment altogether sincere. His sympathetic and refined nature does unquestionably and spontaneously ally itself for succor and good cheer to all who appeal to him. May his kind heart, his welcoming face, and his engaging manners, be a mine of wealth to himself and all his employers and dependents.

—A negro minister, who married rather sooner than some of the sisters thought proper and becoming, excused himself as follows: "My dear brethren and sisters, my grief was greater than I could bear. I turned every way for peace and comfort, but none came. I searched the Scriptures from Ginisee to Reverlations, and found plenty of promises to the widder, but nary one to the widderer. And so I took it that the Lord didn't waste sympathy on a man when it was in his power to comfort himself; and having a first rate chance to marry in the Lord, I did so again. Besides, bretheren, I considered that poor Betsey was just as dead as she would ever be.

—The Louisville Courier-Journal answers a contributor as follows: "Your communication, 'Junius Junior,' is declined. It is quite too full of quotation marks and Italics. You should not honor with quotation marks every stale, hackneyed sentence you choose to borrow. And you may often write for half a day without finding the use for a single Italic letter. Give your reader credit for some intelligence—for at least enough to know when a word needs to be emphasized without having the fact thrust down his throat by a tipsy squad of reeling Italics."

—Two Milesians were standing at the Fairmount water-works in Philadelphia, watching the big wheels splashing the water in every direction, when one of them remarked; "Mike, isn't this a quare country, where they have to grind their water before they can use it?"

The ascension of the transatlantic balloon is postponed until to-day. Wise grumbles about its "rottenness," but says he will make the trial.

The Massachusetts rebublican convention met yesterday. It is conceded that the nomination is lost to Butler. The fight now will be on resolutions denouncing the salary grab.

Judge Crawford and District Attorney Harris of Louisiana were assassinated by some unknown persons in Franklin parish on Monday.

Three persons were killed and twenty wounded by a railway accident on the Southwestern Railway, near Guilford, Eng., Tuesday.

Suing the estate of a dead man for damages for a breach of promise of marriage, is a new thing. It has been done in Brooklyn. Mrs. Mary Jane Wade began a suit for $150,000, for this cause, against the late Mayor Kalbfleisch, but while it was in progress, the defendant died. The prosecutrix will not give it up so; she has made application to re-open the case, and the court has so ordered. The heirs of the late defendant, who was very wealthy, will oppose this suit in the courts.

A new Russian war-vessel, known as the circular iron-clad, is said to be the most remarkable vessel that has floated since Noah's ark. The ship is perfectly circular, and is driven through the water by six screw propellers. So far as handiness is concerned, nothing could be more perfect. The propellers disposed around the ship—it would be useless to talk of stem, or beam—afford unlimited power of locomotion. Ahead, astern, or spinning around like a top, the vessel is equally at home. In a sea-way the behaviour of a circular ship is said to be peculiar, but for buoyancy they are difficult to surpass. This new war-vessel, of which photographs have been received in London, attracts much attention.

Nebraska named a town Vanderbilt and then wrote to the Commodore. He replied that he didn't care a —. They have informally changed the name of that town to Vanderbilt Dam—only they put the dam first.

Barnum weeps when he thinks what a phenomenal star will be lost in Captain Jack.

Jesse Fremont has posted up, along the shores of her husband's Porcupine island, off the coast of Maine, notices in her own handwriting, forbidding all persons from landing. This is done because a careless picnic party on the island set fire to a valuable tract of woodland. Gen. Fremont himself is seriously ill.

Ex-Governor Yates is to address the old settlers of Adams and Brown coun ies, Illinois, at their reunion. Yates has swallowed an old settler before breakfast every morning for years.

Political Notes.

The democracy of Ohio are disheartened, and already begin to give up the campaign. Senator Thurman's meetings are very poorly attended, while on the other hand thousands turn out to listen to Noyes and the republican speakers.

Hon. James F. Johnson, who has up to the present time acted with the Conservative party in Virginia, has written a letter, in which he anounces that he will no longer act with the leaders of the railroad rings and lobbyists who are dragging the State down to financial ruin and destruction. Mr. Johnson's abandonment of Mahone and Kemper is a severe blow to the rule-or-ruin party.

Dan. Rice wants to be Governor of Pennsylvania, but he was no show.

The Democracy must be in a very bad way in Pennsylvania. The Scranton Republican thus describes their situation: "In several other states of the Union the Democracy has occasionally had a ray of sunshine to cheer it, or a little shower to stimulate it for a time, but in Pennsylvania it has been a long and dreary night of hopeless despondency—defeat has followed defeat until last fall, when the Democracy were utterly overwhelmed and buried under a majority so stupendous that for a time it was doubtful if any life remained. Since the Republican party came into power in 1860 the Democracy has only twice come to the surface in Pennsylvania, and then only for the reason that the Republicans permitted the elections to go entirely by default. In 1862 the Democracy carried the State by a small majority, and again in 1867—both unimportant elections—but in no campaign of any importance have they been successful."

The Oswego (N. Y.) Times thinks that under the circumstances, it is interesting to witness the vigor with which Democracy denounces land grants to railroads. The first grant of that kind made, that to the Illinois Central railroad, was fathered by Chief Justice Breese, of Illinois, who was then a Senator in Congress, engineered by Stephen A. Douglas, and enacted by a Democratic Congress. There is scarcely an evil precedent in our political history for which the Democratic organization is not responsible.

Ben. Butler will be justified in tearing up something when he hears that he has been called "the slant-eyed father-in-law of General Ames."

The Rochester Democrat (republican) very kindly says of the venerable candidate for Governor of Ohio: "We read too much about 'Old Bill Allen.' It is altogether too irreverent and undignified. Mr. Allen is extremely old, and great age deserves no such treatment. Possibly he is a bad pill, as well as an old one; but we must insist that he be treated respectfully until he is withdrawn from circulation."

This is the practice of the Texas democracy, drawn by the El Paso Sentinel: "Democracy has tainted the fair name of our State with repudiation. Democracy has abolished our excellent common-school system, and substituted in its stead a miserable plan that could only have originated with the old slave-holders. Democracy has checked the iron horse in its grand career, and caused the tide of immigration to pause in its beneficent march. The democracy came into power clamorous for retrenchment and reform, and went out of power with largely increased taxation and an accumulation of the public debt. In a word, the democratic leaders of Texas stand branded and blistered with broken promises and pledges unredeemed."

State News.

Football will be put under ban at Dartmouth College if "rushing" is practised by the sophomores and freshmen.

Mrs. George Hodgon of Barrington claims $10,000 from Dover for causing the death of her husband by a defective and dangerous highway.

Mr. D. B. Chace of Fremont, who died recently, left $5000 to the poor of that town and a like sum to the Universalist church.

An old gentleman—on a visit from the country—was left in charge of one of the telegraph offices in Manchester, a few mornings since, with instructions to say to any one who might call at the office that the operator had gone to breakfast and would be absent but a few moments. Shortly afterwards he heard the machine click, and, surmising it to be a call from over the wires, bent his head over the instrument, which soon ceased its noise, and in his loudest tone of voice informed the caller that "the operator had gone to breakfast and would be back in a few moments," and then resumed his seat with a smile of satisfaction beaming upon his countenance, at the thought of having performed his duty.

That Boy.

[A Boy in Chicago Tribune.]

I pity a boy. As a general thing, he is considered an unmerciful offender. It there is any mean little trick done outside of lawn and corn exchange offices, that is, among the smaller portion of humanity—it's "that boy" did it.

No one likes to see a lad go shuffling along the street, head down, stealing glances out from behind his ears; looking altogether as fresh as a cast-off paper collar in a back alley, or as suggestive as a wad of a woman's hair on a basement window sill. One usually makes up his mind that "that boy" is one of Providence's blue blessings to the public, and he doesn't fall far short of the truth.

But, making due allowances for the interest taken in the juvenile class at the present day, the attention paid to the rising generation, the boy, generally speaking, has to make his way up in the world at a disadvantage. He is given the simple word, unvarnished and unadorned; his manliness, his taste—and it lies not all in his mouth, as many seem to infer—his sense of honor, of politeness, is not appealed to.

A boy is sent on an errand, with the injunction to be as speedy as possible. On entering the store he finds the clerks all busy with customers, and expects to wait his turn; but, just as he is stepping up to make known his errand, a young lady sweeps in. For some reason or other young clerk does not see the boy, and immediately begins to deal out his "lavender scent-bag" civilities to said young lady. If the boy does not make a general stampede, tread on the poodle's tail, knock little children down, step on the lady's train, tearing it half off, he waits until the final, "Is there nothing more that I can have the pleasure of showing you?" Then the familiar, "Well, what do you want, youngster?" sounds on his ear. Perhaps he mopes home, knowing he is too late for supper.

In the parks, concert rooms, street cars, churches, he is everywhere welcome to the invitation to "get up" and "stand out of the way."

The characters we want the future men of our country to bear, we must help the boys to attain; and nothing will so help them to respect themselves and others, to be kindly and agreeable generally, as to treat them as men, with deference to their wishes, and an appeal to all that is noblest in them. And many a man occupying a position of influence and usefulness has often said, with tender gratitude, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to him who, in my boyhood, spoke many an encouraging word, an advising word—remembering that he, too, was once a boy."

English Tea Gardens.

M. H. B., writing to the Missouri Republican of her English experiences, says: "The more enterprising proprietors of tea gardens send out their handmaids as runners, who nab you as you pass the boundaries of the garden and give you a card inscribed: 'Mrs. Crumpet's World-famed Tea Garden, No. 10 Rose Cottage. Tea and shrimps 1 shilling. Tea and cresses 10 pence.' The runners secured me, of course. I went to Rose Cottage first. You pass through a little porch whose stones are whitewashed every morning, through a tiny hall-way to the back yard, ten feet square, and a perfect wilderness of shrubs and creepers. Tiny trellis partitions divide off little arbors in which the tea is served. It is very nice tea, by the way, and with it you get a plate of butter, a big loaf of bread that fills up most of the arbor, and the beautiful little boiled cockroaches so dear to the British tea-drinking female. I had no sooner emerged from this place than the runner for the next cottage seized me. It was useless to tell her I'd had my tea; she knew how many cups a woman could bear, and she toted me right into her garden. There were twelve cottages in this row, and I drank tea in every one of 'em. Finally, however, beginning, like Dickens' fat boy, to swell visibly and feel uncomfortabe, I waited in the last den to which I was lured till the shades of evening fell, and under cover of the night I fled, escaping that most awful of fates, drinking myself to death."

Feed or Fight?

[N. Y. Times.]

Gen. Custer's report of the two days' battle on the Big Horn, fought by the cavalry of his command with the Sioux under Sitting Bull, confirms what was lately said in these columns of the impolicy of permitting the prairie tribes to leave their reservations under any pretext whatever. Many of the savages who fought against Custer were fresh from the agencies on the Missouri River, where they had been supplied with food and clothing, and, in all probability, with the very rifles and ammunition which they afterward used with deadly effect against the Government forces. "Many of the warriors," says General Custer's report, "engaged in the fight on both days, were dressed in complete suits of the clothes issued at the agencies to Indians. The arms with which they fought us (several of which were captured in the fight) were of the latest improved pattern of breech-loading, repeating rifles, and their supply of metallic cartridges seemed unlimited, as they were anything but sparing in their use."

Now this sort of thing ought to be stopped at once. The idea of providing these savages with the very means of defying the Government authority and resisting the Government forces, would seem ridiculous, if its consequences were not so deplorable. The Indians can ask to be furnished with weapons on only two pretexts—to kill game for their support or to protect them from hostile tribes. If the Government supplies them with rations, as it practically does, the first pretense is done away with. If each tribe is confined to its own reservation, and hostilities between them being strictly forbidden under pain of being punished as actual rebellion against the Government, the second reason will lose its force. This, we believe, is the view of General Sherman and of army officers generally, whose opinion it is fair to consider, not only because of their experience, but because on them falls the brunt and the danger of civil mismanagement. It would be less expensive to feed the Indians altogether than, as now, to feed them all the Winter and fight them all the Summer.

Toothache.

The New Brunswick Times says: A citizen of New Brunswick, who had been afflicted with toothache, concluded at length to have the tooth pulled. It had decayed somewhat, and a very small hole was visible at one point. extremely minute, and nothing less than a very sharp vision could plainly discern it. He called at a dentist's office, and had the tooth extracted, rolled it in a sheet of note paper and took it home with him. The pain had been so intense and protracted that he concluded to examine very thoroughly the tooth which had annoyed him so much. A very careful inspection of it revealed nothing strange or peculiar. It was apparently sound at every point but one, and so minute was the perforation that it would not admit the insertion of a delicate needle. He finally took a hammer, struck lightly with it, and the tooth was broken—but what a sight! It was perfectly hollow, and snugly ensconced within it was a nonde script much larger than an ordinary ant. Upon exposure to the light it took to its legs (six in number) and ran across the table with great speed. It seemed to have no eyes for it ran against every object he placed before it. At length it ran off the table, falling to the carpet, and in trying to recover it he accidentally stepped upon and killed it. He describes it as being a most wonderful looking object, and differing essentially from anything he had ever seen or heard of. He is confident that it could not have made its way into the tooth, and feels sure that it was generated in the decaying dentine substance. He presumes that small atoms of food may have made their way through the perforation and served to furnish sustenance to the queer looking object. He feels the utmost certainty that this is an indubitable instance of spontaneous generation.

A Newspaper Thief.

The San Francisco Chronicle is responsible for the following:

"For more than a month past residents in the vicinity of First, Second, Washington and Broadway streets, Oakland, have been the victims of a determined war against their morning dailies. The raids have been so regular, general, and successful, that positive action in the matter became a necessity. A meeting of the residents was held, and it was unanimously agreed to employ a watchman to arrest the object thief. Day after day passed, the papers still disappeared and the thief remained undiscovered. The watchman then claimed that the carrier failed to leave his papers at the doors of his subscribers. The movements of the carriers were then closely watched, but this only resulted in proving that the papers were delivered regularly. The idea of being thwarted in the attempt to capture the author of the mischief added to the fury of the subscribers. They finally decided to watch and wait themselves and it was accordingly agreed that a guard armed with a Remington rifle should be appointed for duty each evening. After many tedious hours of investigation and anxiety, early on Tuesday morning a King Charles spaniel was observed to walk up cautiously and remove one of the cherished papers. This action was repeated systematically, house by house, several times before the guards followed their victim to his place of refuge. Near the foot of Washington street, behind a large pile of rubbish, was found the receptacle sought for. It was here the dog was seen to plant his journals. The earth around the pile was subsequently turned up and revealed fully one hundred of the stolen papers."

Business Notices.

VEGETINE purifies the blood, renovates and invigorates the whole system. Its medical properties are Alterative, Tonic, Solvent and Diuretic.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach back to healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have a perfect combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, brightness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if it should happen to ail. Also, the persons who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, despending victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a medicine of simple origin which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk; poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But demonstrably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any city or town, shall cause such child to be annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend a public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that such child is in mental and moral health, or that he has attended a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

Local Matters.

The Austin School.

The new school-house in District No. 7, of Kittery, is a very handsome building, reflecting much credit upon the taste and skill of the designer, Mr. Wm. A. Ashe, and upon the enterprise of the people of the district and the energy and ability of Horatio Trefethen, the district agent. It is called the "Austin School," in honor of Rev. Daniel Austin of Kittery, who has presented a fine bell which was hung in the belfry on Wednesday; Mr. Daniel L. Fernald, a working painter, is another special contributor to the school, having furnished a very handsome and costly vane for the tower. The mason work of the structure has been done by Wm. Frazier and the painting by Wm. B. Grogan, both of this city; Wm. B. Locke of Kittery being the master builder. The building is forty-eight feet long and thirty-four feet wide, with twenty-five feet posts, and will be occupied by two schools —a primary school on the lower floor and a grammar school above; the former is fitted with forty-two double seats, and the latter with sixty-four single ones, all of the "Triumph" pattern furnished by J. L. Hammett, of No. 39 Brattle street, Boston, and very handsome and serviceable; each room has two ante-rooms for clothing; and sink-rooms and closets have been provided at the rear of the building, in such a position that they can be entered from either school-room, but cannot possibly become offensive to any one within the building. The entire cost will be well up towards $7000, which is a large sum for a country school-district to lay out; but the public-spirited citizens may congratulate themselves on having got a very ornamental, roomy and convenient school house for their money,—one which will compare favorably with any in the county. The formal dedication will take place in about a week.

"The Season"

at the beaches and islands is about over, the cool weather of the last three weeks having thinned out the visitors remarkably, even before the arrival of the fashionable date for clearing out and getting home to the cities. There is plenty of room now at even the most popular houses; no need to sleep under the billiard tables or on the verandah; and the big dining rooms, instead of being crowded almost to suffocation at meal hours, as they were during the heat of July and the early part of August, now look rather cheerless, with but a few dozen guests around two or three tables in one corner. The patronage of all the hotels in this vicinity has been very heavy this year, and the enlargement of many old houses and the erection of several new ones (in Newcastle and Rye) are assured. There is not much danger that the business will be overdone, however, for increased and improved accommodations are sure to draw a corresponding increase of custom.

Lacontcs.

A meeting is to be held to-day of a number of gentlemen interested, to confer with the executor of the will of Mrs. Cutts in regard to the plans for the improvement of Richards Avenue.

The office of A. F. Craig, insurance agent, on Congress street, was entered, Tuesday night, and his desk broken open. About twenty-five dollars in stamps and change were stolen.

The maple trees have commenced their annual grand display of nature's fall fashions; as in years past, different shades of red are the favorite colors, but no full suits have appeared as yet.

Thompson, with his "Tree of Life Treatment," will be at room No. 35, Franklin House, all this week. If you are sick or ailing, do not fail to see him. Consultations free—Medicines easiest, safest, surest, and quickest way to health in the world. No permanent cure to cost over one dollar.

The Salisbury, (Mass.) Beach gathering will take place on Thursday, the 18th inst., and the usual crowd is expected to be present. This annual "gathering" at Salisbury seems to be a hybrid—about half-way between an ordinary picnic and a camp meeting; there is a vast influx of people, mainly from a radius of ten miles or so, and all the barns and sheds are filled with horses, the hotels with guests and the acres of sand with carriages and perambulating humanity; and after it is over "the season" at that place is pretty well past, though the Atlantic House is kept open for the accommodation of transient visitors up to the advent of winter. The distance from this city is rather greater than pleasure-seekers like to drive on a hot day, but the roads are good and the country pleasing, and with the present cool weather and decently-careful driving any good horse will do the journey without distress, and allow three or four hours to be spent at the beach, where all comers are welcomed with pleasure and have their wants carefully attended to by the proprietors of the Atlantic, Messrs. A. J. and E. A. Morrill, formerly of this city—may their shadows never grow less!

The Evil of Cutting Away the Bars of the Horse's Foot.

[Mr. Murray's Book on "The Perfect Horse."]

The bars of the foot are but the prolongation of the outer wall of the hoof. Their object is to protect the frog, and strengthen the foot itself. Their value in this direction can scarcely be overestimated. To cut them away is like removing the beams that keep the walls of a house from falling outward or crushing inward. If a healthy foot is placed upon a glass stand, it will be seen that the ground-surface of the wall, bars, and frog, all bear the relative proportion of weight. These might be called the three great pillars on which the body of the horse, like some dome upheld by three columns, stands. To shorten or remove two of these three columns is, of course, fatal. The dome is of such weight as to crush the sole remaining support. This is precisely the condition of things under the common vicious system of shoeing. The bars are cut away so that they cannot touch the earth; the frog is pared down the same way; the sole, also, is gouged out; and the result is, that nothing is left but the wall of the hoof to support the vast bulk and weight above. When you remember that the wall is very thin,—scarcely half an inch in thickness where it touches the ground,—you will share with me the surprise, not that so many horses "pound their feet up" and break down, or "give out in their feet," as the saying is, but that any horses survive at all. The true way is to let everything grow, and grow to the fullest extent that Nature designs it to reach; and, in shoeing, seek only to protect from too rapid destruction what Nature has put together; least of all cut away that which Nature has provided so abundantly, and more efficiently than the art and skill of man can ever hope to effect.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, during a longer-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most astonishing cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Thousands suffering, often life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP!

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up. Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Our Girls—Their Habits and Language.
[Harper's Bazar.]

When Lord Dufferin, in a speech lately delivered at some Canadian gathering, pointed out to his royal listeners the danger of letting their offspring become anything like those little terrors to life, the American children, we were prompted to recall our youth, and discover if we really were all that such fancies have painted us. But as we read further in the nobleman's careful address, we could not help wondering if he were, after all, much acquainted with American children himself, and especially if he knew anything at all about our school girl. For though it is tolerably true that she rules a large share of America, the world of parents being her abject servitors, and their opinion going for little or nothing on any topic until "the girls" have first pronounced upon it, yet experience leads us to believe that she is not altogether the enfant terrible that we are told; and one of Mrs. Woolson's charming essays makes the belief a certainty; for most of us were school-girls, we will not say how many years since, and were a part of all the experience of that little cosmos of theirs, and as we read of their exploits in Mrs. Woolson's pages, we live a portion of the past over again. Some one says that boys between the ages of ten and twenty should be put in a barrel, and fed and educated through the bung-hole; and surely if one is about to pass the same sentence on the girl of like age, it would be well to pause first, and remember those days of spontaneous delights and extravagant warmth—days when the hat was tilted a pitch beyond any fashion but its own, when twin cherries were worn for ear-rings, and mountain-ash berries for necklaces, when beauties were openly admired and faults were openly challenged, and when the sky was dark or bright as the chemistry lesson was learned or lost. The school-girl lives, in fact, not only in a world of her own, but, like the planet Saturn, inside ring after ring of her own; for the outer world is a vague nebulous world far removed; within that comes the home world; the world of blackboard and teacher is something nearer still; and close to her very existence in the world of confidante and bosom friend, of quarreling and admiring, of enthusiasms and hates, of pickled limes and taffy. Here in this inner world of all, novel laws are supreme as the code of Rhadamanthus—laws of honor; here what a literature obtains, literature at which the rest of the world has even done laughing, but to her all the pathos is pathos yet. What heroes rule in it, grand, gloomy and peculiar, and who, because she is so innocent herself, she has well spiced with sin as savoring most of the great unknown; heroes with an air of melancholy "that seems to hint at a terrible experience in the past, and an unlimited account of remorse in the present;" a hero who resigns without so much as a thought of being pushed from his supremacy by the nice young man who parts his hair in the middle, and is the adored of the school-girl's sisters, but whom she extinguishes with her ever-ready satire by the sobriquets of "Pretty Dear" and "Kids!" For certainly she has no reverence for the sterner sex, unless it is all compromised in an infatuated worship of the head-master, who seems to her something beyond a mortal, all the more when he detects her misdemeanors with his back turned and by the magical reflection in his blue spectacles. The boys, indeed, who accompany her in her classes, and always keep her dragging behind the rate at which she would advance, are regarded by her as the merest dead-weights; and she never suspects their intellects to be the superior thing she hears them declared when these same boys are safe in their colleges and professions beyond the chance of feminine competition. And if she has a literature and ideals of her own, she has secrets too; what secrets, administered under what pledges of silence, secrets about everything and practically about nothing, and teaching her the uselessness of secrets ever after! And certainly the school-girl has a language of her own, a language of slang that would do credit to a Paris gamin. "After reciting all day in the most correct and classic English at her command, she revels in a disregard of precedents, and dashes off her ideas in few and resounding epithets. Her exuberant feelings demand for their expression only the most intense superlatives. Simple adjectives are discharged from her service as too tame for burning thoughts. Nothing can be to her merely good or bad; it is either perfectly magnificent, or as horrid as it can be. The word "splendid" never fails her. She has, though, when that is powerless to express all emotion, another in "geloptious," signifying unimaginable raptures, and countless more mysterious yet, for she does not understand why the "well of English undefiled" should not bubble for her as much as for the ancient coiners of words. But another less pardonable liberty with her native tongue is taken by the school-girl, and that is in the adulteration of the name given her by her sponsors in baptism, and queenly appellatives full of associations with poetry and romance and history are metaphormosed into nauseating Lizzies and Katies and Maggies. It would be a waste of words, though, to reason with the school-girl on this or on almost any other subject on which her mind is made up, or on which she hesitates to express it. She does not condescend to argue, but she pronounces her conclusions true, because in some subtile way known to herself she feels them to be so. "It is only later in life," says Mrs. Woolson, from whom we quote again, "that she learns to resent the common masculine talk about woman's instincts as an attempt to deprive her of all credit for her actions by allying her with bees, beavers, and other curious creatures who work after a pattern set them in the garden of Eden."

Kentucky Romance.
[Madison (Ind.) Courier.]

A few years ago there graduated at Hanover College a young man who gave promise of great things in the future. His career through college had been of rare brilliancy. In the recitation-room and in the society hall he had been the object of envy and congratulations. His classmates were wont to think how, in years to come, when legislative bodies would hang upon his words, when his name would be in the mouths of all the children throughout the land—how they would say, familiarly, "Jim was a class-mate of mine!" How he fulfilled the predictions of his many friends it is the object of these few lines to tell.

After a commencement oration—"We Erect Our Own Monuments"—(prophetic words), which held spell-bound an audience of several hundred in the village church, while the mercury ranged about 101 degrees in the shade, and which, more than ever, convinced his hearers that he was destined to make his mark among the distinguished self-made men of the age, he announced his intention of entering that noblest of all professions, that which teaches the young idea how to shoot. For one year he enjoyed the society of his friends in this county, when his rising reputation as an instructor of youth obtained for him a call to the land of Clay and Webster. Loth to leave the society and companionship and his friends about the classic region of Hanover, he hesitated some time, but the call was imperative, and, after a sorrowful leave taking, he departed for his new field of labor in Kentucky, a beautiful village on the Ohio River, some twelve miles above this city.

A stranger in a strange land, it was but natural that he should appear downcast and dishearted during the first few weeks of his sojourn. The melancholy shade which rested upon his youthful countenance awakened first the interest, then the pity, and then the love of a fair Kentucky damsel, who was just about to give her hand and heart to a chivalrous son of Kentucky when our Hoosier pedagogue put his foot upon the sacred soil. The heart of our hero was not slow in responding, and it was not long ere it beat in unison with the heart of the fair Kentucky girl. The discarded lover protested, and for months endeavored to supplant his brilliant rival, but all in vain; the deep-rooted affection of the girl was not to be changed.

He considered the matter, and then called on our hero, and with candor truly admirable opened the interview. He loved the maiden with all the fervor of his Kentucky heart, a heart deeper, and broader, and more susceptible then the combined hearts of all the pedagogues in Hoosierdom. He would give the horse he was riding if his rival would surrender his claim. James hesitated a moment, then called on the School Trustees, drew the salary due him, mounted the gallant steed, and galloped down here and attended the Teachers' Institute, held in this city last week, in the proceedings of which he took the prominent part the high order of his abilities warranted. He has found employment on this side of the river, and there is now plain sailing for the Kentucky lover.

Bummers and Dead Beats.
[Memphis Appeal.]

"Whenever a gentleman wants anything published, whether it interests the public or only an individual, he is willing and will propose to pay. Somebody must pay for it, and hereafter it will not be the printer. The fact that the proposed publication would interest the public has nothing to do with the matter in issue. Newspapers are private, not public property. They are published to make money for their owners, and if anybody would use them they must pay the cost. Never did we go to a merchant and use his goods for any public purposes without paying, and if we and hundreds of others—the public—employ a lawyer about a street or other highway we pay the lawyer. The dodge is very tiresome, it is very old, and we hope to hear of it no more forever. If you want some scheme ventilated, whether it interests yourself alone or thousands, you and your thousands must not expect us to pay the cost."

Intoxication from Fungus.

From the statements made by an English physician, it appears that the fungus of India is more extensively used than ever for producing intoxication. The desired effect comes on in from one or two hours after it is taken. Giddiness and drunkenness follow in the same manner as from wine or spirituous liquors; cheerfulness is first produced, the face becomes flushed, involuntary words and actions ensue, and sometimes the loss of consciousness. Some persons it renders remarkably active, proving highly stimulant to muscular exertion; but, by too large a dose, violent spasmodic effects are produced. So exciting is it to the nervous systems of many that its effects are very ludicrous. A talkative person cannot keep silence or secrets; or one fond of music is incessantly singing; and if a person under its influence wishes to step over a straw or a stick, he takes a stride or jump sufficient to clear the trunk of a tree. Of course, delirium, coma, and death often result.

Daily Chronicle.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1873.

The Worcester Convention.

Gen. Butler gained all the laurels at Worcester except the Governorship. Reaching the ground when the Washburn men were boasting of their great majority, he made an impression that frightened them before the convention met. The General's audacity served him to good purpose, for no other leader in Massachusetts or New England would have had the pluck to have continued the contest. Single-handed, he had fought the combined forces of controlling politicians, the State constabulary and the press, with few exceptions. The organization of the convention was in the hands of his opponents, who did not neglect to use every advantage the fact gave them. If any person secured passage into the hall among the delegates, it is certain that no Butler man did. On the second test vote, with only 1041 accredited delegates on the floor, 1123 votes were cast, a motion to refer Butler's resolution (expelling a delegate who threatened to bolt) to the credential committee prevailing by a vote of 584 to 539. The large vote astonished everybody, but at adjournment it was found that between forty and sixty more persons were in the hall than there were tickets for, the interlopers securing that number of delegates' tickets in order to return in the evening, while the unlucky delegates left without tickets were forced to stay in the hall supperless, or go out with the certainty of being refused re-admission.

When every person was expecting a coup d'etat from the General,—the proposition to nominate a new man, perhaps at the opening of the evening session,—great was the surprise as Butler arose and withdrew from the candidacy. All through the day, his indomitable courage and energy had due display. He had ingeniously put his foes on the defensive, and the Butler men had the best of the debate, ready speakers being primed with answers to the weak defenses made by Messrs. Hoar, Rice, Codman and Clarke. It was evident that the brains of the convention was on the Butler side, but the Washburn men refused to desert their leaders when the just and impassioned appeal of the Butler advocates for fair play seemed sufficient to carry the convention by storm. Had Messrs. Hoar and Rice advocated the resolution insultingly offered by Col. Codman to expel Gen. Butler from the convention, it is evident their followers would have blindly voted for it. Under these circumstances, Gen. Butler saw that no effort to stampede his opponents would be successful, and no wiser action was decided on than his withdrawal, which left the convention better pleased with him than at any time previous during its session.

The bitterness of his disappointed opponents shows itself in the resolutions, which directly censure the administration in the eagerness shown to rebuke General Butler, if words mean anything. The exultant Allen, who penned them, was bound to push Butler to the wall and take all the advantage possible of a beaten antagonist, to please his co-partners. The intention was to drive Butler and his friends out of the party. As far as Butler is concerned, the attempt was an ignominious failure. Nothing excites sympathy more than abuse. The General took the floor and proceeded to eulogise the resolutions which called for impartial enforcement of the liquor law, favored ten hours for a day's work, opposition to railroad monopoly and referred to woman suffrage. All these he declared he had fought for, and was glad to move their adoption. He could not, however, endorse the others. If the Massachusetts convention chose to censure the administration, he could stand it if they could. Proceeding in this strain, the General made a most adroit speech, which elicited great applause from his friends, the Washburn men appearing stupified at his wondrous assurance. The Butler men went wild with delight, and as he sarcastically referred to prominent men, including Governor Washburn, who had drawn back pay in times past, he was tumultuously applauded, half the delegates rising and giving cheer upon cheer. No man ever had a more enthusiastic reception, and the Washburn leaders showed signs of deep chagrin. The gun they had so well aimed had recoiled from overloading.

The result of Wednesday's work at Worcester is not self evident. No greater mistake was made by a convention of intelligent men than the failure to pass Gen. Butler's resolution binding delegates to the support of the nominations. Persons who intend to bolt nominations in certain contingencies have no rights in a convention that makes those nominations. If there is any honesty in politics, this is a cardinal principle. Without it no party can exist. Gen. Butler will support the nominations made, but when November comes Governor Washburn has no claims for support on the part of Butler's friends because the convention deliberately repudiated them. The re-election of Governor Washburn depends wholly on a large vote from the stay-at-homes, who go to the polls in Massachusettr only in Presidential years. Without their support, Gaston, the democratic gubernatorial nominee, will come nearer an election than any democrat has in that State for many a year. The mistake at Worcester may cost the republican party 20,000 voters, who cannot well be spared.

—An old Troy river man says he is disgusted to hear people nowadays talk of low water in the Hudson. He remarks that he can remember well, years ago, when the river was low. He asseverates that at one time all the passengers on the New York boat had to close their windows during the entire passage down, because the steamer's wheels raised such a dust!

Political Notes.

Among the gratifying results of the Maine victory is the re-election of Hon. John E. Butler, editor of the Biddeford Journal, who will probably be President of the Senate. The Portland Press says: Mr. Butler was in the Senate last winter, and has been returned by an unprecedentedly large majority—handsomely leading his ticket throughout the county. He is a man of power and makes himself felt in all matters with which he is connected. He was very influential last winter, and goes back this year with the prestige of a great victory such as has never before been known in York county."

Dingley has 1428 majority for Governor in York county.

The Boston Globe says of the Democracy: "The party's work is done, and it is fast disappearing from even the local fields, where its vestiges will naturally remain longest. In the South, the contest between the negroes and their late masters; in the West, the struggle between the farmers and the railroads, and in Massachusetts, a contest which we need not name—are to day the live issues in the politics of the country. The Democratic organization can deal with none of them, and is incapable of taking up even the most trivial issues of the day."

Readables.

And now they say the baloon will go up to-day.

A herd of 115 short-horn cattle was sold by auction, Wednesday, at Utica, N.Y., and the total price obtained was $380,000. One animal alone brought $4,000.

The Halliday-street Theatre, Baltimore' was burned down Wednesday, and several buildings adjoining were partially destroyed. The loss is about $125,000. Fires are also reported at Whetherleville, Md., loss $50,000; Memphis, Tenn., loss $30,000; and at Providence, R. I., loss between $10,000 and $20,000.

Two men attempted to rob Paymaster Brook on his way to the camp of the sixth cavalry, near River Bend, Colorado, Wednesday. The highwaymen fired seriously wounding Captain John A. Irvin, of the sixth cavalry, and slightly injuring a Mrs. Roberts. The paymaster's party fired back, and mortally wounded one of the robbers, whom they captured.

A despatch from Commander D. L. Braine, of United States Steamer Juniata, reports the arrival of that ship at St. John's Newfoundland the 10th. The Juniata met the Tigress at Disco Aug. 25th, and coaled her. An abandoned camp of the Polaris crew had been discovered on Littleton island. The crew had gone South two months before, and it is thought were on a whaler. The search will be continued.

State News.

The Dover Enquirer has just ascertained that "the evil one" controls the editor of Foster's Democrat! Furthermore, the Enquirer says "unsuccessful men often remain in a place as long as their credit lasts." Just so!

Lassoing a Butcher.

[From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Sept. 9th.]

One of the most remarkable cases of robbery which has occurred for some time past took place this morning at the corner of Gates Avenue and Clinton, when a butcher who does business in Gates Avenue near Ralph was lassoed as he was riding in his wagon, and pulled off the vehicle in a dexterous manner, and afterwards robbed of $300 in money, a ring, and other valuables.

The butcher's name is Ferguson, and from the police it appears that he went over to Washington Market, New York, early this morning to buy some meat. He effected his purchase and was driving home with it, when he noticed some men following him. All the way up Fulton Street he observed these fellows, three in number, but never suspected they were about to assault him. They were strapping fellows, and one of them wore goggles and another had on a large pair of whiskers, which were evidently false.

Upon his reaching Gates Avenue he turned out of Fulton and got in the car-track, and was driving on his way home when these fellows set upon him, just as he had got to the corner of Gates and Clinton. They had a rope of considerable length with a noose at the end of it, and this they dexterously threw over his head, and pulling up on it tightened it, and dragged him off his seat into the rear part of his wagon, which was filled with meat.

The noose round his throat was so tight that he was nearly choked; he could hardly utter a word for a minute or so, and in the meantime the three thieves, with a boldness and cheek worthy of a better cause, jumped up in the wagon, searched the butcher's pockets and robbed him of his wallet which contained a little over $300, and they rifled his vest pockets of some small change. A ring which he wore is also missing, but he is unable to state whether or not they stole it, or he lost it in the scuffle.

One of the thieves had a revo ver in his pocket, and he showed the butt end of it to the butcher and told him he'd blow his brains out if he dared say a word. The robbery was consummated with considerable expedition and before Mr. Ferguson, who, by the by, is a brother of Cornelius Ferguson, had sufficiently recovered himself, the three men were running down Lafayette Avenue at the top of their speed.

Ferguson was so confused from the fall he had received, for the thieves pulled him eventually from his wagon to the street, on the stones of which he fell so heavily that he could not follow them, and so they got clear.

When the victim had sufficiently recovered himself, and saw that his assailants had got away clear, he returned to his wagon and drove home with the meat. He then went to the Ninth sub-precint station house, at the corner of Broadway and Green Avenue, and reported the robbery there.

Our Grass Crop.

The Philadelphia Ledger speculates as follows:

"Let us examine the figures of the recent census of the United States as to the capital employed in agriculture, and try to eliminate, in a rough way, what portion of it is devoted to the grass and hay crop. If we can arrive at a rough estimate of it for our own country, it will hold tolerably well for most other countries. The aggregate reported value of the farms of the United States in 1870 was $9,262, 803,861; the value of all live stock, horses, cattle, sheep, swine, etc., on farms, $1,525,276,457; the value of all farm implements, $336,878,429; the amount annually paid in wages, $310,286,285; and the aggregate of all, $11,435,244,282. This represents, approximately, the amount of capital employed in agriculture in the United States. How much of it is devoted to the hay crop? Let us see if we can make a rational guess at it by the following method: First, by taking the whole value of the agricultural product of 1870, and then tracing out after a fashion the grass and hay crops and their products, and thus get at the proportion of capital devoted to the grass crop. The aggregate reported value of all farm products for 1870 was $2,447,538,658; but as this includes additions to stock betterments, etc., it is probably too high. Now the hay crop for that year—that is the grass dried and cured for use or sold—is reported at over twenty-seven million tons. This, at half the selling price in large cities, would amount to $405,000,000, and is far greater than the aggregate home value of the cotton crop or any other crop. But the cured 'hay' is but a portion of the grass crop. The other portion is used on the ground, and it requires considerable calculation to get at the value of the part so used, even in the roughest way. We can make an approach to it, however. In the first place, live stock, including horned cattle, horses, swine, sheep, etc., to the value of $1,525,000,000, were fed from it that year. Averaging the lives of these at five years, we have one-fifth of that sum as representing the grass fed to them in 1870, viz., $305,000,000; next we find the value of the animals slaughtered for food in that year to be $399,000, 000, and as this is an annual product, the whole of it will for the present be credited to the grass crop; next we find that the butter crop of 1870 was over 514,000,000 pounds, which at the low average of 25 cents, amounts to $128,000,000, and this goes to the credit of grass; next we have 225,000,000 gallons of milk, which averaged, at the low estimate of 10 cents a gallon, adds $25,000,000 more to the grass crop; then we have 100,000,000 pounds of wool at 25 cents a pound, adding $25,000,000 more, and finally 53,000,000 pounds of cheese at ten cents, adding over $5,000,000 to the total of these credits to the grass crop of 1870, which aggregate $887,000,000. Now let us add the value of the 'hay' crop as given above, viz., $405,000,000, and we have a grand total for 'hay' and the products of grass consumed on the ground amounting to $1,292,000,000.

This is of course, subject to deduction, as the meat, butter, milk, cheese and wool-producing animals consume other food besides grass and hay. To make ample allowance for this, we deduct the entire value of the corn and oats crops of 1870, estimated at $270,000,000, and this leaves a remainder of $1,022,000,000 to be credited to the hay and grass crop of that year, when the reported aggregate of all farm products was $2,447,538,648. If our estimates make even the roughest approach to accuracy, the value of that crop was two-fifths of the aggregate value of all farm products, and hence we may infer that two-fifths of the capital then invested in agricultural pursuits was devoted to the grass crop, and this in the United States equals (in round numbers) $4,575,000,000! If any other of 'the earth's products' can make a better show, we do not know where to find it."

Women's Hats (or Bonnets.)

It is rumored says the, Chicago Tribune, writing on fall fashions, that the altitude is to be diminished; that the crowns will be low and large, fitting closely over the hair, while the coronets will be broad and embellished with full face trimmings. The crowns will be perfectly plain, but flowers will be placed on them anywhere,—for wzeaths beneath the brim, clustered at the sides, huddled behind, and sometimes clambering to the crown; but for the coronet, most recherche of all, will be a band of ostrich feathers. The coronet is to stand out well from the crown, to admit of a scarf of soft silk being twisted around the latter in a careless fashion, and held at the side with some one of the new ornaments. Streamers will not be as much worn, and feathers and flowers will join their forces in an all conquering effect which will be charming or otherwise, as they are blended by a skilled hand directed by exquisite, taste or are the result of such fancies as might seem to naturally arise in the brain of Angelica Todd. Roses will be a specialty, and the new groseille the favorite color. These, of course, are only possible upon black or invisible shades of color. The bronze-greens are also in high favor called in honor of the Shah, Persian greens. Two or three long cock's plumes in this shade, held by a cut-steel ornament, will be much worn on round hats. Small fruits are also seen among the flower garniture for bonnets, and two or three ostrich plumes are worn on these. For round hats, one long plume is more desirable; and happy is the woman who owns a variety of these expensive ornaments, so that she can change her hat as often as she does her dress. Some feathers are also made into aigrettes, and some are very conspicuous. Wings will be worn, but will not be considered so desirable as they were last winter. The ornament known as the Shah aigrette will be for a time the most sought after. Chief among the new colors are perruche, or parrot-color, and seal-skin red.

—One of the best ways to test a spider's ability to get himself out of a scrape is to fill an ordinary wash bowl with water, take a stick and place it in the centre of the bowl, and reaching some little distance above the water, put a spider on the top of the stick. The insect will get himself away from his isolated quarters in less than ten minutes, if undisturbed, and he won't wet his feet in the transit. Try and see how it's done.

Business Notices.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, brightness of spirits and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are those who know how to bring it into such a condition if disordered. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, despending victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain-reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no medicine ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeniel horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded in either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One-Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Local Matters.

Richards Avenue Improvement.

The subject of applying the generous bequest of the late Mrs. Mary Cutts in the improvement of Richards Avenue is being discussed and the matter seems likely to soon take a tangible form and prove a valuable addition to the beauty of our city. A meeting of some twenty or more of our leading citizens, together with the Mayor and two or three members of the Board of Aldermen, took place in the Common Council rooms on Thursday morning, having gathered at the solicitation of Messrs W. H. Y. Hackett of this city and Robert Mason of Boston, executors of the will of Mrs. Cutts, for the purpose of consulting with and ascertaining the minds of the public-spirited citizens in relation to the manner of the improvement provided for by the twenty-thousand dollar legacy of Mrs. Cutts. Mr. Hackett, in laying the subject before the meeting stated that it had not been the purpose of the executors of the will of Mrs. Cutts to act hastily in the matter under advisement, but to endeavor as far as possible to carry out the wish of the donor, which was, to make the Avenue as beautiful as possible with the money at hand. The question to be discussed was "how to do it?" Plans and estimates had been made by Mr. S. J. Johnson, a careful civil engineer, which he (Mr. Hackett) would like to submit to the meeting. Mr. Mason urged those interested in the movement to take into account the fact that whatever was done would be of a permanent nature, and as such would be a source of satisfaction or regret for many years to come; instancing the matter of rebuilding; that an arrangement should be effected whereby it might be a condition that wherever the present residences were rebuilt they should be placed back on the line of the street proposed by the suggested alteration.

Mr. Johnson submitted a report of his examination of the locality, and the estimated cost of improving it in the manner proposed in the plan. This drawing represents a roadway 28 feet in width, covered with a kind of gravel equal to crushed stone, raised and drained properly, with a sidewalk on each side, that on the west being 4 feet wide and the other 14 feet in width. This leaves a space of two feet around the trees now growing there which it is not proposed to disturb.

Hon. John Elwyn dissented from this proposition, and stated that if the parties interested would make the road-bed thirty feet in width, of good solid material, with McAdam's rise of three inches to the foot, leaving no walk on the westerly side, he would give fifty feet in width of land on the east side of the street, which, with the proposed walk of 14 feet, would make a public mall 64 feet wide running from the dwelling houses on the upper end of Richards Avenue to South Road. The meeting voted to submit the proposal of Mr. Elwyn to the civil engineer, Mr. Johnson, with the request that he make plans and estimates in accordance therewith, and have them ready at the next meeting, which is to be holden at the City Rooms on Tuesday evening next, at half past seven o'clock.

The Ownership of Campo Bello.

WELCH POOL, CAMPO BELLO, }
Sept. 10, 1873. }

Messrs. Editors:—The undersigned wishes to correct a statement made in all your City papers, your own included, viz., that Capt. Charles Emery and myself were the only owners of this island. I beg to say that no one had any authority for making such a statement, Campo Bello has many owners and Capt. Emery and myself are at present acting as agents for the owners of the Owen estates, comprising twelve thousand acres of land, with the forests, mines, minerals, real estate, fishing privileges and advantages appertaining to them, with authority to grant, lease, sell and making improvements to build houses, hotels, vessels or do any other business appertaining to the interest of the parties concerned. Respectfully yours, &c., J. M. HILL.

Last Triumph in Printing Machinery.

The new printing press, which Hoe & Co. have perfected at their works in London, is described as far superior to the Bullock (American) press or to the Walter (English) press, and is capable of printing 22,000 sheets on both sides per hour. The London Daily Telegraph, which has the largest circulation of any daily paper in the world, is supplying itself with this machine, which costs about $20,000. Only two men and a boy are necessary for running it; it lays off the sheets perfectly, and there is none of that "over-setting," as the printer calls it, that is the great objection to both the Walter and Bullock presses. As with those presses, however, the new Hoe press can be worked only with stereotyped forms, its cylinders being so small that the type cannot stand upon it.

How to Cook Corned Beef.

The Boston Journal of Chemistry says: "The rule has a Hibernian sound: Don't boil it, for corned beef should never be boiled. It should only simmer, being placed on a part of the range or stove where this process may go on uninterruptedly from four to six hours, according to the size of the piece. If it is to be served cold, let the meat remain in the liquor until cold. Though meat can be made tender by letting it remain in the liquor until the next day, and bringing it to the boiling point just before serving."

Disasters in Hudson Bay.

A dispatch from New Bedford, Mass., says that the schooner Abbie Bradford arrived there on Sunday morning from Hudson Bay with the news of the loss of two more New Bedford whalers, and bringing a portion of the crew of one of them. The particulars are as follows: September 14, 1873, bark Orray Taft, at anchor, near Marble Island, Hudson Bay, parted her chains and went ashore, landing high and dry, and in such a position that she cannot get off. On the 10th of October following, bark Ansel Gibbs went ashore at the same place, and in nearly the same manner, but went to pieces and was a total wreck. The Orray Taft had no oil, but the Ansel Gibbs had 550 barrels of whale oil and 11,000 pounds of bone, most of which was lost. A small amount was saved by the Abbie Bradford. No men were lost at the time the wrecks occurred, but both crews were obliged to live on the island until the 2d of August last, and from exposure and the lack of proper food were attacked by scurvy. The winter was fearfully cold, being the most severe for a number of years, so that the natives died by scores, and the wrecked crews suffered exceedingly. Ten of the crew of the Ansel Gibbs and four of the crew of the Orray Taft died. Their names and residences are as follows: Of the Ansel Gibbs—Charles Stiles, North Adams, Mass.; George Hadley, Portsmouth, N. H.; Emi'l Bender and Charles Sinsor, Germany, and five Portuguese. Of the Orray Taft—James Marshall, Montreal; James Gavity, Natick, Nass.; Frank Coleman, Brooklyn, N. Y.; John A. Graham, Liverpool, England. The second mate of the Abbie Bradford, Mr. Henry B. Martin of Springfield, died of scurvy on the 28th of June.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of remarkable cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most efficacious cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

COAL.

HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:

HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.

In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no means will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evil of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose, and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY RE-PICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"Mr. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

ONE LITTLE WIDOW.

She is modest, but not bashful,
Free and easy, but not bold;
Like an apple, ripe and mellow,
Not too young, yet not too old.
Half inviting, half repulsive,
Now advancing, and now shy,
There is mischief in her dimple,
There is danger in her eye.

She has studied human nature,
She is schooled in all its arts;
She has taken her diploma
As the mistress of all hearts.
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh and when to smile,
O, a maid is sometimes charming,
But a widow all the while.

Are you sad? How very serious
Will her handsome face become;
Are you angry? she is wretched,
Lonely, friendless, tearful, dumb.
Are you mirthful? How her laughter,
Silver-sounding, will ring out.
She can lure, and catch, and play you
As an angler does a trout.

Ye old bachelors of forty,
Who have grown so sage and wise;
Young Trifluvians of twenty,
With the love-look in your eyes;—
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Cupid since the fall,
But I know a little widow
Who could win and foot you all.

The Best Wife in the World.

"The best little wife in the world!" said Herbert Ainscourt.

"Of course—I dare say," responded Mr. Porterosss. "But what's your exact idea of the best wife in the world? Jones says he's got the best wife in the world, because she keeps his stockings mended, takes him to church three times of a Sunday, and never lets him have an opinion of his own. Jenkins says he's got the same identical article, but Jenkins' wife keeps all the money, draws his salary for him, and makes him live in the back kitchen, because the parlor is too good for the family to use."

"Oh! but Daisy isn't a bit ogre-ish—a little submissive, soft-voiced thing that hasn't an idea except what is reflected from me. I tell you what, old fellow, I'm master of my own house: I come when I please, and go when I please. Daisy never ventures on a word of reproach."

"Then you ought to be ashamed of yourself, larking round at the clubs as you do, dissipated-bachelor fashion."

"Ashamed! What of?"

"Why, I suppose you owe some duties to your wife?"

"Where's the harm? My wife does not care."

"Probably you think so because she is quiet and submissive; but if she were to object—"

"Object! I'd like to hear her try it?"

"Now, look here, Ainscourt; your wife may be a model wife, but you, certainly, are not a model husband. People are beginning to talk about the way you neglect that pretty little blue-eyed girl."

"I'll thank people to mind their own business. Neglect her, indeed! Why, man, I love her as I love my own soul."

"Then why don't you treat her as if you did?"

"Oh! come, Porterosss; that question just shows what a regular old bachelor you are. It won't do to make too much of your wife unless you want too spoil her."

Mr. Porterosss shook his head.

"That sounds selfish. I don't like the ring of the metal."

And he went away, leaving Mr. Ainscourt to finish his game of billiards at his leisure.

"What a regular old fuss-budget Porterosss is," laughed the latter. "Always poking his nose into somebody else's business. There's one comfort—I never pay any attention to what he says."

Meanwhile Mrs. Ainscourt was sitting alone in her drawing-room, her two little white hands tightly locked in one another, and her head slightly drooping—a delicate little apple-blossom of a woman, with blue wishful eyes and curly flaxen hair, looking more like a grown-up child than a wife of twenty-one summers.

"O dear!" sighed Daisy, "it is so dull here. I wish Herbert would come home. He never spends any time with me now-a-days, and I practice all his favorite songs, and read the newspapers so I can talk about the things he is interested in, and try so hard to be entertaining. It's very strange." And then her oval face brightened into sudden brilliancy, and the sparkles stole into her eyes; for the wife's quick ear had detected her husband's footsteps on the stairs. The next moment he came in.

"Well, pet, how are you?" with a playful pinch of her cheek. "There are some bonbons for you. Where are my light gloves?"

"O, Herbert! you are not going off again?"

"I must, Daisy. There are a lot of fellows going to drive up to High Bridge, and I'm one of the party. You can go over to your friends, or something. There, good-bye, puss; I am in a deuce of a hurry."

And with one careless kiss pressed on the damask rose of a mouth that was lifted up to him, he was gone.

Daisy Ainscourt neither went to her mother-in-law, nor sent for one of her girl friends. She spent the evening all alone, pondering on the shadow which was fast overgrowing her life.

"Oh, what shall I do?"

But, child as she was, Daisy had a strong, resolute, woman's heart within her, nor was she long in coming to a decision.

"Daisy," said her husband to her the next day, "you haven't any objections to my attending the Orion Bal Masque?"

"Are masked balls nice places, Herbert?"

"Oh yes, everybody goes; only I thought I'd pay you the compliment of asking you whether you disapproved of it or not?"

"Can I go with you?"

"Well—ahem—not very well, this time, Daisy. You see, Mrs. Frenchurch really hinted so strongly for me to take her, that I couldn't help it."

"Very well," assented Daisy, meekly, and Herbert repeated within himself the pæan praises he had chanted in Mr. Porterosss' ear: "The best little wife in the world!"

But notwithstanding all this, Mr. Ainscourt was not exactly pleased when, at the self-same Bal Masque, during the gay period of unmasking, he saw his wife's innocent face crowning the picturesque costume of a Bavarian peasant girl.

"Hallo!" he ejaculated, rather ungraciously, "you here!"

"Yes," lisped Daisy, with a girlish smile, "You said everybody went! And oh, Herbert, isn't it nice?"

Mr. Ainscourt said nothing more; but Mrs. Frenchurch found him a very stupid companion for the remainder of the evening.

He was late at dinner the next day, but, late as he was, he found himself more punctual than his wife, and the solitary meal was half over before Mrs. Daisy tripped in, her cashmere shawl trailing over her shoulders, and her dimpled cheeks all pink with the fresh wind.

"Am I behind time? Really, I am so sorry! But we have been driving in the park, and—"

"We! Who are We?" growled her husband.

"Why, Colonel and I—the Col. Adair that you go out with so much."

"Now look here, Daisy!" ejaculated Mr. Ainscourt, rising from the table and pushing back his chair. "Adair isn't exactly the man I want you to drive with."

"But you go everywhere with him!"

"I dare say—but you and I are two different persons!"

"Now, dear Herbert," interposed Daisy, willfully misunderstanding him, "you know I never was a bit proud, and the associates of my husband are good enough for me. Let me give you a few more oysters."

Ainscourt looked sharply at his wife. Was she really in earnest, or was there a mocking under-current of satire in her tone? But he could not decide, so artless was her countenance.

"I'll talk to her about it, sometime, was his internal decision.

"Daisy," he said carelessly, when dinner was over. "I've asked old Miss Barbery to come and spend the day with you to-morrow!"

"Oh, have you? I'm sorry, for I am engaged out to-morrow."

"You! Where?"

"Oh, at Delmonico's. I've joined a Women's Rights Club, and we meet there to organize."

"The deuce take women's rights!" ejaculated the irate husband.

"Of course I don't believe in 'em; but it's the fashion to belong to a club, and such a nice place to go to evenings, I am dull here evenings, Herbert!"

Herbert's heart smote him, but he answered resolutely:

"I beg you will give up this ridiculous idea. What do women want of clubs?"

"What men do, I suppose."

"But I don't approve of it at all."

"You belong to three clubs, Herbert."

"That's altogether a different matter."

"But why is it different, Herbert?"

"Hem—why? Because—of course any body can see why—it's self evident."

"I must be very blind," said Mrs. Ainscourt, demurely, "but I confess I can't discriminate the essential difference."

Herbert Ainscourt said no more, but he did not at all relish the change that had come over the spirit of Daisy's dream.

She did change, somehow. She went out driving, here, there, everywhere. He never knew when he was certain of a quiet evening with her; she joined not only the club, but innumerable societies for a thousand and one purposes, which took her away from home almost continually. Mr. Ainscourt chafed against the bit, but it was useless. Daisy always had an excuse to plead.

Presently her mother-in-law bore down upon her—an austere old lady in black satin and a chestnut brown wig.

"Daisy, you are making my son wretched."

"Am I?" cried Daisy. "Dear me, I hadn't an idea of it! What's the trouble?"

"You must ask him," said the mother-in-law, who believed—sensible old lady—in young married folks settling their own difficulties. "All I know is the bare fact."

So Daisy went home to the drawing-room, where Herbert lay on the sofa pretending to read, but in reality brooding over his troubles.

"What is the matter, Herbert?" said Daisy, kneeling on the floor beside him, and putting her hand on his brow.

"The matter? Nothing much, only I am miserable," he answered.

"But why?" she asked.

"Because you are so changed."

"How am I changed?"

"You are never at home; you have lost the domesticity, which was, in my eyes, your greatest charm. I never have you to myself any more."

"Does it make you unhappy?" she asked.

"You know that it does."

"And do you suppose I liked it, Herbert?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that the first year of my married life passed in just such a lonesome way."

"But why didn't you tell me you were unhappy?"

"Because you would have laughed at the idea, and called it a woman's whim."

"I do not like this kind of life," went on Daisy. It is a false excitement—a hollow diversion; but I persisted in it, I suppose, for the reason that you did—because it was the fashion. Now tell me, Herbert, which would you prefer, a fashionable wife, or Daisy?"

"Daisy—a thousand times Daisy!"

"But Daisy can not get along with a theatre-going, club-living husband."

"Then she shall have a husband who finds his greatest happiness at his hearth-stone—whose wife is his dearest treasure—who has tried the experience of surface life, and finds it unsatisfactory. Daisy, shall we begin the matrimonial career anew?"

And Daisy's whispered answer was "Yes."

"But what must you have thought of me all this time?"

"I know what I think now!"

"And what is that?"

"I think," said Mr. Ainscourt, with emphasis, "that you are the best wife in the world."

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1873.

The Resolutions

adopted by the Massachusetts republican State convention:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Massachusetts emphatically disapprove of and condemn the action of the members of the last Congress, Republicans and Democrats, who availed themselves of the occasion of an increase of the salary of the President and of the judges of the Supreme Court and of the members of the Cabinet, supposed to be just and necessary for the future, to secure to themselves a disproportionate and extravagant compensation for past as well as future services.

Resolved, That while we recognize the full right of every citizen to express and act upon his convictions upon all questions of public interest, no person holding federal office has the right to seek to influence the action of his subordinates by exciting their fears of loss of place if their opinions or actions shall differ from his own; and we call upon the President forthwith to remove every public officer who has thus improperly interfered with the independence of the Republicans of Massachusetts in the management of their local concerns, wherever the fact is proved to his satisfaction.

Resolved, That the adoption of a policy which shall so reduce freights on railroads that the raw material, food and coal of the West and South shall be exchanged at the least possible cost for the manufactures of New England, is interesting to the whole country and vital to the industries of Massachusetts; that the powers vested by the Constitution in Congress to regulate commerce between the States includes jurisdiction over this great subject, and that we call upon Congress and our State legislatures so to exercise all their powers over the railroads of the country, as, without injustice to them, may reduce freights and fares to proper rates, and secure the advantages of these great highways to the whole people, free from all preference or monopoly.

Resolved, That the Republican party is the party of temperance, order and law; that it favors the honest and impartial execution in good faith of all laws, especially those for the suppression of crime, intemperance and disorder, that the character and details of such laws must be such as the people shall decide through their representatives chosen to the two branches of the legislature, and, when so determined, should be obeyed cheerfully by all law-abiding citizens until repealed by the same authority.

Resolved, That we demand such legislation on the hours of labor as will secure the ten-hour system for women and minors employed in the factories of Massachusetts.

Resolved, That every great achievement for personal liberty, for the preservation of the Union, for education, for the elevation of women, for the extension of the suffrage, which has been accomplished in this country for a generation, has been due to the Republican party; that while none of these great causes has any thing to hope in the future from any other source; while every new truth, every claim founded on justice, will in the future, as in the past, find its earliest converts, its most generous recognition, its strongest advocates and its first victories among the Republicans of Massachusetts; that the pressing duty of the day is to secure honesty and purity, the right of the people peaceably to assemble and take counsel on public matters, and select their agents free from violence, intimidation and fraud; the right to hold caucuses and conventions without being cheated or bullied; and we therefore call upon all honest Republicans, however they may differ on other questions, or how far soever they may have advanced in their reception of new ideas, to unite in purging the Commonwealth and nation of violence, treachery and corruption.

Resolved, That the Republican party of Massachusetts feels a just pride in the achievements of that national administration which they so largely helped to elect and to which they have been so faithful and true; that they renew their expressions of gratitude to President Grant for his great services, civil and military; and that they will stand by him in all his efforts for the honest payment of the national debt in gold to which the faith of the nation is plighted; in his efforts to place the civil service of the country on a purer and a higher level, so that federal officers may hereafter be used to serve the people and not to bribe them; and in all the other great measures foreshadowed in the Republican platform of 1872.

Resolved, That the Republicans of Massachusetts look with just pride upon the Republican administration of the Commonwealth, and recognize in their candidate for Governor, William Barrett Washburn, the same qualities of good sense, fidelity and uprightness, the same watchfulness for the public interest and care for the public welfare which he had so conspicuously exhibited as one of our representatives in Congress; and we commend him and his associates upon the ticket this day nominated to the hearty support of the good people of this Commonwealth.

Gen. Butler's Speech.

We give in full, Gen. Butler's speech on the resolutions adopted at Worcester:

Mr. President, Gentlemen of the Convention,—I have listened with care to the resolves of your committee. In that which recognizes the adoption of ten hours of labor for the operatives of Massachusetts, I recognize the result of a life-long struggle with the manufacturers. [Applause.] And I most heartily endorse it. I am glad we have brought up the Republican party at last to this high plane. In all that has been said in the resolutions in regard to the cheap transportation of the necessaries of life over the railroads, I recognize also one of the cardinal principles for which I have ever labored. [Applause.] It is, thank God, a blow at monopolists which will ring from this Commonwealth in answer to our younger sister of California, who has already taken the same ground. [Applause.] And when we can have it understood that the railroads are made for the people and not the people for the railroads, and that there shall no longer be made a profit out of the transportation of the common conveniencies and necessaries of life, then we shall have come to that system of the carriage of passengers and freight which the railroads were designed to secure to the people of the Commonwealth, and which in the earlier days, in 1830, was embodied in the charter of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, by which every man should have the right to compete with every other man by putting on the railroad whatever conveyances he might and not make a dividend on watered stock and watered bonds. [Laughter and applause.] Again, I am glad to see that we have at least got a ringing platitude upon the elevation of woman. [Applause.] I suppose that this must mean woman suffrage, because in no other sense of the word is there any such thing on earth as the elevation of the women of Massachusetts. [Applause.] Whether as mothers or sisters they are above all and beyond all, second only to the angels in heaven. [Renewed applause.] In all the resolutions relating to the civil service reforms I most heartily concur, but I differ somewhat upon the method of enforcing the service which makes the school-master the superior civil servant to the one-armed soldier who has shed his blood in the service of his country. [Applause.] And I rejoice and am exceeding glad that at last we have got the word "impartial" in connection with the enforcement of the laws of the Commonwealth. [Applause.] I have labored for it, for two years past, and I rejoice again and again—no, reverentially I thank God that impartiality is made the test of the enforcement of the law, and that the rich man, with his champagne and his brandies, is not to escape the penalties of the law, while the poor man's beer is seized and destroyed. [Applause.] In the resolution which says that federal office-holders should not intimidate the people I most heartily concur. [Laughter.] Which of you have been intimidated? Who feels the insult? Who's afraid? [Renewed laughter.] The difficulty is that men cannot understand why loyalty and fealty—why a man who stands by his friends when his turn comes—causes the men to stand by him when their turn comes. [Applause.] And men who are unable to appreciate the high and honorable motives of true friendship always attribute them to some sordid reason. In regard to another resolution, which censures a republican administration, a republican Senate, a republican House of Representatives by full majority, I have only to say that I stand it as long as the party can. [Laughter and applause.] I observe the gingerly manner in which those that voted for the increase of salary are singled out, while others that took the pay and put it where it would do the most good are passed over. [At this point many in the convention rose, cheered lustily and waved handkerchiefs and hats heartily for some minutes.] One word further on this subject. As every public man in Massachusetts, for the last twenty years, has at some time taken back salary, and has used it for his own purpose, and as the people never have found fault with it before, I suppose it must be some exigency of the republican party which requires this resolution to be passed at this time. I shall not enter into any defence of that measure, because it was passed, let me repeat, by the House of Representatives which had a majority of thirty republicans,—passed by the Senate of the United States, which had a three-quarters majority, and which was signed by the President of the United States in accordance with every precedent established since the foundation of the government. When every member of Congress from Massachusetts has taken back salary from 1856—when that is the condition of the question I do not go into any defence [applause,] especially when I look back and see that Daniel Webster, Timothy Pickering, Chas. Sumner, Henry Wilson, and others that Massachusetts has delighted to honor, come under like condemnation. I would rather be wrong with them than right with some other persons I could name. [Applause.]

There are one or two considerations, which, perhaps, it is well, before you vote upon this resolution, you might consider, and those are, that, for the first time in the history of the legislation of any Congress upon the question of salaries, in 1873 the Congress of the United States cut off every perquisite, every allowance, mileage, franking privileges, stationery, newspapers and every useless expenditure. [Laughter.] Every other Congress of the United States that have raised salaries have voted the back salary and increased salry, and holding on to all these allowances and perquisites. So that this is the first instance of equalization of salary. Let me repeat it, because you have never learned this anywhere else, except from the history of the country, which you never find in the public journals; that for the first time the entire perquisites of Congress have been cut off and every man receives an exact level compensation. And I here ask that no vote be withheld from your candidate for Governor because in 1866 he took rightly under the law, salary, back salary and forward, keeping all his perquisites and allowances, a greater percentage than any member of Congress of the present day. [Laughter and applause.] He did right. The only fault I ever found with him on that subject was that when the vote was taken and passed by a vote of 100 to 101, he was not there to vote on the question and have suppressed that salary grab. [Laughter.]

Mr. Hoar said: Will Gen. Butler allow me to make known one thing to him? Gov. Washburn was at home in Greenfield on a sick-bed when that final vote was taken. He voted against it at the first ballot, but was called home to be confined to a sick-room.

Mr. Butler continued: I am exceedingly glad to hear an explanation for the first time. That excuses him from the only fault I know of him in that connection, and I am glad that the gentleman from Worcester has made the Commonwealth acquainted with a fact I did not know. [Cries of "But he took the money."] Pardon me, he took the money, as did everybody else down to the 4th of March, 1873 from the beginning of the government. [Applause]. I think General Grant can survive this, because the first back-salary bill was signed by George Washington, and General Grant should not have animadversion upon his course providing he can justify himself by what Washington did, as other gentlemen have attempted to justify themselves by quoting what Washington did with his money that he got from the State of Virginia. * * * Therefore, as I have said, the resolutions give so much of good and so little of evil that I hope that they will be adopted—as they will be, without any consent on my part. [Applause.]

Business Notices.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfecta combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, briskness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, desponding victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweeniod horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuble is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of only $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and application for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the usual travelled direction of residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

Local Matters.

Board of Aldermen.

In Board of Aldermen on Thursday evening a number of minor matters were disposed of and but little business of public importance was introduced.

A petition from the officers of the P. & D. railroad for a new highway from Freeman's Point road over the P. & D. railroad to the Freeman's Point road again, making a curve from Uriah Blaisdell's, to land of Frank Jones. A hearing for the abutters was appointed for Monday evening next at 7 1-2 o'clock.

A petition was received from Rev. Jas. DeNormandie and others relative to the prohibition of the sale of liquors, and a hearing thereon was appointed for Thursday evening next at 7 1-2 o'clock.

It was voted to repair and paint the bell frame in the North Church belfry.

The committee on streets reported in favor of accepting that part of Union street between Lincoln avenue and Hawthorne street, and that Broad street be accepted. Also, that Mr. F. W. Miller be paid $21 for expenses on pump on Miller Avenue, and to pay him $3 per annum for keeping same in order. The report was accepted and recommendation adopted.

The committee on Police to whom was referred the petition of the Assistant Marshals for increase of pay, reported the same without recommendation. The petition was recommitted.

Robert N. Anderson was appointed special policeman without pay.

Charles W. Gardner and J. Horace Kent were appointed inspectors of petroleum and its products under a new law passed at the last session of the New Hampshire Legislature compelling the proper storage of and tests applied to all crude or refined oils bought or sold. The fee of the inspectors was fixed at one cent per gallon.

Old and New.

The merchants of Portsmouth, we suppose, will take liberally of the stock of the new Sagamore House Company, as such an investment will pay them largely by "consequential" profits, even should the hotel itself merely pay expenses. Frost's Point is within such easy distance of this city that the patrons of the old Sagamore constantly did their trading with our merchants,—and their trade was worth securing, one of the principal dry goods dealers asserting that the burning of the hotel made a difference of three or four thousand dollars annually in his receipts. No other summer hotel, of the many within ten miles, begins to be of so much pecuniary benefit to this city as the first Sagamore House was and as the second one will be. A part of the visitors to Rye Beach, and all those for the Shoals, pass through the city, making things lively and profitable for the hackmen and giving things generally an appearance of briskness for a few hours each day during their transit; except for transportation, however, these visitors lay out very little money here. But guests at the Sagamore, so far as their trade is concerned, were practically residents of this city, and parties of them on shopping expeditions could be seen any pleasant afternoon during the season, flitting from store to store and leaving a good deal of money in some of them. With the re-building of the house the same thing will undoubtedly occur again, on an enlarged scale, commensurate with the increased size of the house; and this, with the reasonable certainty that a first-class hotel on such a noted and favorite site will be patronized to the extent of its capacity, will probably suffice to keep all the stock of the new Sagamore Company in the hands of our citizens.

A Patriarch.

Elder Moses How and wife celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on the 11th, at New Bedford, a large company being present, including Prof. Lyman B. How of Dartmouth college and Moses G. How, Esq., of Lowell, sons of the aged couple. The elder commenced his ministry 58 years ago; he has preached over 8000 sermons, attended 2248 funerals and married 1879 coubles. Poems by B. P. Shillaber and Daniel F. Drown, the blind poet, were read; and the wedding gifts were numerous and costly. Elder How married Miss Frances Dearborn, of this city, in 1823, and preached here from 1827 to 1837, the rest of his ministry having been spent in New Bedford.

Laconics.

Rev. A. J. Patterson will preach at the Universalist church to-morrow.

The forthcoming races at the Rockingham Trotting Park are creating a buzz among our horsemen.

The Grandee is only waiting for a northwest breeze to take her departure for New York without the aid of steam power.

Fruits of all kinds are now plentiful, and some of the most luscious varieties may be had at reasonable prices.

It must be a highly favored country that is blessed with better weather than was vouchsafed to this section on Friday.

Some one inquires what the Boston papers will do for a subject now that Butler is defeated? The man interrogated replied, "I Kent say." Then he travelled.

The lecture season is at hand, and the usual announcements are being published in almost every city of importance in New England—except Portsmouth.

H. C. Barnabee was in town on Friday. By the way, we notice that he is announced among the lectures and other entertainments of the Boston Bay State lyceum course.

The Dearborns took their departure for Lynn yesterday morning, to the music of Harlow's band. They were accompanied by Mayor Marvin and the fire wardens. They will return this evening, and will be welcomed and feasted by the Sagamores.

Gardner's history of the grand re-union of the "sons and daughters of Portsmouth" is making rapid progress, and will soon be out. Those whose names are not on the subscription list should hasten to put them there, as a limited number of copies will be printed.

Mr. Newton Johnston brought into our office, Friday morning, four tomatoes raised in his garden, one of which weighed two pounds, two ounces—the four weighing seven and a half pounds.

At noon to-day Wm. H. Hackett will sell at auction the three-story brick dwelling house and lot corner of State and Washington streets, formerly the residence of the late Joseph Clark. Real estate investments promise finely at this time, and there will no doubt be plenty of bidders.

The analysis, by S. Dana Hayes of Boston, of the spring water of South Poland, Me., is as follows: Potash, 0.265; soda, 0.677; lime, 0.951; magnezia, 0.067; protoxide of iron, traces 0.000; carbonic acid, combined, 0.576; chlorine, 0.378; sulphuric acid, traces, 0.000: silicic acid, 1.196. The New Hampshire Medical Society hold a semi-annual meeting at the Sente House, Centre Harbor, on the 16th, the North Essex Medical Society being their guests. Papers will be read by Dr. Crosby of New York, Dr. Hurd of Newburyport, Dr. Cromwell of Haverhill, Dr. Carter of Concord, Dr. Hall of Portsmouth, Dr. Cook of Hillsboro' and others, Messrs. John W. Stavers, Plumer D. Norton, Geo. W. Marston, James H. Dow, Chas. A. Hazlett and James A. Rand started for a camping tour through the mountains, Friday morning, having sent their camp equipage to the Twin Mountain House the day previous. The party go in light marching order and expect to leave North Conway this morning, sleep at Crawford Notch tonight, visit Mount Washington to-morrow, go to the Twin Mountain, Monday, Profile and Flume region, Tuesday and Wednesday, down the Pemigewasset valley, Thursday and Friday, and leave Plymouth by rail for home next Saturday.

There was a slight alarm of fire on Friday afternoon caused by the discovery of smoke issuing from the cellar of the liquor shop in the building formerly occupied by F. W. Rogers, corner of Deer and Vaughan streets. An examination of the premises revealed the fact that quite a large collection of wood and shavings freely sprinkled with kerosene oil had been carefully arranged under the cellar stairs, and had it not been for the damp condition of the timbers of the foundation of the building it would, without doubt, have been a successful case of incendiarism. The occupant of the saloon could not be found, and an entrance was only effected by bursting open the door. The fire department rallied promptly but there was no need of their services, and they were as promptly sent back to their houses.

The Best Music Books

FOR HIGH AND FOR GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

THE HOUR OF SINGING,

BY L. O. EMERSON & W. S. TILDEN.

PRICE $1.00.

This High School Singing Book is admirably fitted for its work, containing a good elementary course and a large quantity of the best vocal music, well arranged in two, three and four parts. Has been received with the greatest favor by practical teachers.

Just ready, THE TRIO, a collection of three-part songs, arranged especially for high schools and seminaries. An excellent companion or successor to the HOUR OF SINGING.

CHEERFUL VOICES.

PRICE 50 CENTS.....BY L. O. EMERSON.

The new, sprightly, and very musical Common School Song Book is by a gentleman who "hits the mark every time," and never fails in satisfying the musical taste of the people. Of his previous school song books, about 300,000 have been sold.

All school-teachers are invited to give this new and popular book a trial.

Any book published by Ditson & Co. will be sent by mail on receipt of the retail price.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Prepared as one ever secured a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their house, ready at every call, prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely precaution. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

The Baby Shown to Visitors.

[MRS ADELER.]

It is an odd fact, no baby ever did, and no baby ever will, behave in company. The mother always brings it into the parlor where the visitor is, dressed in its clean dress, and its father and its aunt come in smiling at the same time. After the visitor has kissed the baby and taken it on her lap, and declared it is the dearest little thing she ever saw, the baby's mother and she begin to talk. Each talks about her own baby as fast as she can rattle, and both talk at once, apparently without caring what the other is saying. In the midst of the conversation the baby "throws up" on the visitor's dress, and is suddenly handed to its mother.

The visitor smiles a sickly smile, and says it makes no difference, but she is mad. The conversation is resumed, but presently the father winks furiously at the mother and frowns, and clears his throat and makes mysterious signals at her side of the chair with his hand. The mother looks down and perceives that some of the baby's undergarments are dropping off, and she snatches up that infant and flies from the room. When she returns the child cries to go to its father; and no sooner is it settled on his knee than it betrays an irresistible yearning to go to its aunt, after which it cries furiously because its mother won't take it.

Then the aunt gets a piece of candy to quiet it, and when its hands have acquired sufficient stickiness, it reaches over and mauls the visitor's bonnet. Then its mother tries to show off its accomplishments; but it utterly refuses to make a display; it is as stupid as an owl. It won't say "mamma" or "papa," and it won't show how big it is. Its father tries to coax it to say "papa," but it pays no attention to him. He tries again and again, getting nudder all the time, and dreadfully afraid the visitor will think the child is dull.

At last he grabs the child by the arm and shakes it, and yells, "Why don't you say papa, as I tell you?" Then the child screams like a back-yard full of cats. The more the mother soothes it the louder it gets, until at last the father exclaims, "Gi' me that brat!" and picks it up and dashes out of the room, and is heard spanking it in the entry. Then the visitor goes home looking at her dress and deciding that the end of that infant will be the gallows, if its characteristics are allowed to develop fully as it grows up.

Trunks vs. Passengers.

Two demure damsels, both of New Jersey, recently played a very sharp game on the Morris & Essex Railroad. The ladies were going to the seaside, and had the usual amount of feminine baggage with them, seventeen trunks. When they showed their tickets to the baggage-master and desired him to check their seventeen trunks, he demurred, saying that each passenger was allowed but one hundred pounds of baggage, and that the fifteen trunks would have to be paid for. The ladies remonstrated, but in vain; so they demanded to know the additional charges they were to pay, and were informed that the extra trunks would cost them one dollar each. Now it so happened that a passenger is carried over the road for eighty cents, and is allowed to take one trunk. The young ladies, remembering this, went to the ticket office and bought fifteen more tickets. They showed these to the baggage man, and he checked the trunks as for fifteen passengers. The ladies saved three dollars by the operation, and have fifteen tickets, worth twelve dollars, in the bargain, for the conductor of course, only took up two tickets, and, as these are good till used, the company may be called upon, any day, to transport fifteen passengers with fifteen trunks between New York and Morristown. Now that is what we call a very neat operation, and is another argument to be added to the many already enumerated in favor of the fitness of woman to vote.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON.
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhea, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Glimpses of English Farming.
[Rev. E. B. Fairfield.]

We made the journey between Liverpool and London, 200 miles, in 5 hours and 15 minutes, including stops. In no other country does one travel so fast as in England, nor so safely. The reasons are the roads are well built, have double track, and highways and railways never cross each other on the same level. They must either pass over or under each other. So there is little danger of collision.

Now take a seat beside me, and we will talk as we ride. You will notice the high cultivation of the country as we proceed. All England is a great garden. Land is worth $300 to $500 an acre. Fields are generally small, most of them from 5 to 10 acres. The crops look well. The season is about a month behind Richland County, Ohio. The wheat is just beginning to grow yellow. The haying is not yet finished.

"Raining, is it?" "Certainly." "But it was very bright an hour ago!" Yes, and it will be very bright two or three times before night. Never go out without your umbrella. An English proverb runs: "Take your umbrella when the sun shines; when it rains, do as you like."

You see no apple orchards scarcely. England is not the country for apples. And no corn. You'll see a stalk now and then in a flower garden as a curiosity,—nothing more. That most majestic of all crops you will miss everywhere here. You will see wheat, barley, oats, potatoes, turnips, beets, rutabagas, peas,—and what are those? they stand about two feet high—a single stalk—unlike anything in Ohio. They are a species of beans,—large and flat. I have seen them in flower gardens at home. And that red blossom, of which there is a myriad in a single field, making it perfectly glorious in the distance,—they are weeds, showing neglected cultivation—wild red poppies!

You will not fail to notice the hay stacks. The sides so plumb, the corners so square, the top so regular, and covered with a thatched roof, to protect the hay from this wet climate. For it rains more than 365 times a year here, probably more than twice that. They build their haystacks, we would imagine, with a plank, a level, and a square. You will see some good outbuildings, with thatched roofs no better than these covering the stacks.

An American is attracted by the beautiful roads he sees everywhere. This is an old country. They have burned coal for generations, and the refuse coal is good material for roads.

And you will observe that all the houses are brick. Not a frame house between Liverpool and London. And few of stone. The bricks are generally a third thicker than ours, and for that reason do not look so well. We are now flying past a brickyard. And the tons that are drying, preparatory to going into the kiln, are thatched over to keep them from the rain.

The great crop of England is grass, and the cattle and sheep show that it is good. The business of the country is grazing. I never, till to-day, saw a whole flock of black sheep, and it was of a very respectable size. And a herd of black cattle, jet black, without a spot of any color that I could see, riding 40 miles an hour. Perhaps if the cattle had turned around I might have found one!

One's first day in England will impress him with the beauty of the country everywhere. A fellow traveller said, as we drew near to London: "This ride more than pays for all the sea-sickness." Few miles of fence, many miles of beautiful hedges, fly past you every hour. Some of the hedges are trimmed and trained in exquisite taste.

There is a home-life in England such as is found in few countries beside. The great drawback is the law of entail. Estates descend with the first-born. The men who till the soil do not own it. There is little land for sale. The farmer rents at $25 an acre, and never expects to have a free-hold of his own. It was Dickens, I believe, who said: "Some people came over with William the Conqueror, and some came over without him, and the former have got all the land." But some day this law of primo-geniture will go down with a crash, and the English nation will be delivered from a great thralldom.

Ministerial Trials.

Infinite are the trials and vicissitudes of gospel ministers. Here is the Rev. Mr. Hageman, of the Paterson Congregational church, brought up on a charge of conduct unbecoming a Reverend. Specifications: 1. Playing base ball; 2. Sending to a store for cigars on Sunday; 3. Being in debt. To these grave accusations the reverend gentleman made answer before a prayer meeting the other day. As to the base ball, he acknowledged the soft impeachment, but he had learned it at Princeton and did it for exercise. As to the cigars, he sent to his boarding house and not to the store for them, and didn't think that any more harm than sending for a piece of pie. As to being in debt, how could he help it when the congregation had dropped down his salary, after he had made his estimated expenditures? This last plea was somewhat of a clincher, and being followed by a tender of resignation, a trustee immediately offered a resolution that the calumny against their pastor was unsustained. But the word "calumny" being objected to, the meeting adjourned without action, leaving the accused just a little ahead.

A Suggestive Story.

The Chicago Tribune prefaces a long article in which it urges the necessity of nominating the best men for local offices, irrespective of party, with the following suggestive story.

Some twenty years ago there happened to be a good deal of excitement over a local election in the the little town of Northampton, Mass., which, at that time, had a population of between 5,000 and 6,000 inhabitants. For several weeks prior to the day of election the candidates were canvassed with that fervor which the strong friendships and deep-rooted prejudices of a small community can always provide on any given subject. The little differences in regard to school management, or the location of the town pump, were magnified into the importance of great national issues. The citizens of Northampton—there were fewer bad citizens in those days—had divided themselves into parties and factions. The local weekly papers had been engaged in the important work of giving direction to public sentiment. The people had been thoroughly worked up to the duty of the hour, and passed a final Sabbath in meditation and prayer just prior to the election, which occurred on Monday. The preceding Saturday, a bright printer boy, about sixteen years of age, who desired to have his father elected to the School Board, went to his case, and set up a complete ticket of his own, selecting, with admirable judgment and perfect impartiality, the very best men the town of Northampton contained, without reference to any of the tickets already in the field. Having made up his ticket and corrected the proof, he struck off a few hundred copies from the old Washington hand press then in use, carefully tied them up, and carried them home. The ticket had no title or designation whatever. The boy kept his plan to himself, and put his tickets into his trunk over Sunday. Bright and early Monday morning, he went down town with his bunch of tickets in his pocket. He selected some of his companions, all glad of an opportunity to peddle election-tickets, and distributed the ballots among them without explanation or instructions. They, in turn, passed them around among the honest and independent electors of Northampton. When the votes were counted that Monday evening, it was found that the printer-boy's ticket was elected throughout by a considerable majority.

Ventriloquism Easily Acquired.

A writer in the Chicago Advance says that "the ventriloquist's art is as easy to learn as falling off a log. He maintains that there is no difficulty in acquiring the power. In the first place, he says, speak any word or sentence in your natural tone; then open the mouth and fix your jaws fast, as though trying to hinder any one from opening them further or shutting them; draw the tongue back in a ball; speak the same words, and the sound instead of being formed in the mouth, will be formed in the pharynx. Great attention must be paid to holding the jaws rigid. The sound will then be found to imitate a voice from the other side of the door when it is closed, or under a floor, or through a wall. To imitate a sound behind a door partly open, the voice must not be altered from the original note or pitch, but be made in another part of the mouth. This is done by closing the lips tight and drawing one corner of the mouth downwards or towards the ear. Then let the lips open at the corner only, the other part to remain closed. Next, breathe, as it were, the words out of the orifice formed. Do not speak the words distinctly, but expel the breath in short puffs at each word, and as loud as possible. By so doing, you produce the illusion in the minds of your listeners that they hear the same voice which they heard when the door was closed, but more distinctly and nearer on account of the door being open. The lips must always be used when the ventriloquist wishes it to appear that the sound comes through an obstacle, but from some one close at hand."

English and American Enterprise.

The London Globe says: The projected tunnel through the Rocky Mountains, already begun, promises to be the chief of all the engineering wonders of the world. The box tunnel astonished people in its day, but in future the Mont Cenis tunnel itself, the length of which is more than seven miles, is to be looked upon as mere nothing. The Rocky Mountain tunnel is to be twelve miles long, and there will be 6000 feet of earth and rock, or considerable more than a mile, over its greatest depth. The expense will naturally be enormous, but it is hoped that not only will most of the Western railway traffic be drawn through this "short cut," but that large mining profits will accrue incidentally. The company is sanguine of finding gold, silver, diamonds and other precious stones; so that, if these hopes are well founded, the poetry of steam will have reached its climax in thus conquering and throwing open to human traffic the inmost recesses of the earth. The bore is to be effected by diamond pointed drills, driven by powerful machinery, and it is reckoned that the tunnel will be finished at the rate of sixty feet a working day. The Mont Cenis work was fourteen years in construction; this, it is hoped, will take no more than four.

The Balloon Fiasco.

What promised to be the most daring venture the world has known since Columbus sailed from Palos "in three ships," has at last run down to a most ridiculous fizzle. Big blowing by the Graphic has been successively followed by quarrels among the æronauts, apparent reconciliation, and at last by the bursting of the great gas-bag before it was one-third filled. The story of the finale of this last advertising dodge is told by telegraph as follows: "An immense crowd of people went to Brooklyn on Friday to see the balloon inflated. Many estimated the number as high as 50,000. The process of inflation commenced Friday morning and continued steadily during the day and afternoon. Many people believed there would be a bona fide ascension, but others were sceptical owing to the fact that, when Professor Wise and son appeared at the gate of the ground they were denied admittance and were driven away by orders of those in charge of the balloon. At ten minutes past four the balloon swayed to the north, and ripped half-way around with a great tearing sound and fell flat upon the ground. The immense volume of gas which had been pumped into it, nearly 400,000 feet, escaped at the same moment, nearly suffocating those who stood on the lee side. Police Inspector Folk and Police Commissioner Briggs had but an instant before shifted their positions and thus escaped being buried in the netting and canvas. The crowd made a general rush over the rope with the intention of tearing up the balloon into small pieces and carrying them off as mementoes, but the strong force of police on the ground charged and drove them back, but not before many succeeded. Mr. Steiner, who had contracted to fill the balloon, said that it would be all folly to attempt another inflation, as the bag was not made of proper material, so the enterprise is abandoned for the present. Those having charge of the undertaking have made a great deal of money out of it."

Readables.

The jail at Pleasant Hill, Neb., was burned Wednesday night, and its inmates, four prisoners, perished.

Eleven trustees of the First African Methodist Bethel church of New York have been found guilty by an ecclesiastical court on charge of embezzlement, dereliction of duty and other offences.

Six persons were killed and thirty-two wounded by a railroad accident between Madrid and Vitoria in Spain, Friday morning.

The situation in Spain is said to be improving. The new reserves are being armed rapidly.

Hon. Schuyler Colfax will deliver the address at Potsdam, (N. Y.) Sept. 23, before the Eastern St. Lawrence Agricultural Society.

The October number of the Galaxy will contain an article by Ex-Secretary Welles in answer to Charles Francis Adams' eulogy on Mr. Seward. Mr. Adams placed Mr. Seward above Mr. Lincoln both as a statesman and a patriot. To this Mr. Welles takes exception, and presents the other side of the picture.

A dispatch has been received in London from the commander of the British steam sloop Daphne, announcing the capture by that vessel, in the Indian Ocean, near the Seychelle Islands of a slave ship upon which there had been horrible suffering. The small pox had raged on the ship, and out of 300 slaves taken on board 250 died and the remaining fifty were terribly emaciated from disease and want.

Details of the Labrador gale show that the destruction was dreadful. Twenty-three women, fourteen men and as many children were killed on the shore and the people left alive and unhurt are in danger of starving.

A dispatch from Shreveport says the city is in great need of help. The yellow fever is of a malignant type and does not yield readily to treatment. There is a great scarcity of people to attend the sick. There were 30 deaths on Thursday. A letter from Shreveport dated the 7th says that 60 had died there and the city is nearly depopulated. No one who had then been attacked by the fever had recovered. A few cases since had dropped dead in the streets.

State Items.

Hon. Amos Tuck, is about to set sail with his wife and granddaughter for a European tour. His son accompanies them to France.

Daniel Russell, Esq., of Milford, died on Tuesday, aged 78 years—a most excellent citizen, and an exemplary liberal christian.

The fall term of the third year of the State Normal School began on the 10th at Plymouth. About fifty students were present at the opening.

—The following is given by a correspondent of the Rochester Union as the cost of a day's sojourn at Niagara Falls: First you enter Prospect Park, on the American side, charge 20 cents; descending the plane to the foot of the American Fall, 25 cents; crossing the ferry, 25 cents; to Goat Island, 50 cents; to the Cave of the Winds, $1.50; crossing the Suspension Bridge, 25 cents, in addition to carriage toll of 25 cents; under Horse Shoe Falls, $2; Prince of Wales Tower, 50 cents; Burning Springs, 40 cents; Tower at Lundy's Lane, 50 cents; Whirlpool, 50 cents; Whirlpool Rapids, 50 cents; Tower on Suspension Bridge, 25 cents; making about $7.50, exclusive of carriage hire, which may be safely put down at $6, making an aggregate of $13.50; to which must be added hotel charges, say $5 per day, and you have $18.50 as the cost of a day's sojourn at Niagara.

Butler's Defeat.

Messrs. Editors:—The political events of the past week, in New England, have both (for there have been but two) been entirely satisfactory—to me! I allude, of course, to the Maine election, and the much more important contest at Worcester, Mass., and with your permission will now give vent to my hitherto pent-up feelings, through the medium of printer's ink. As to Maine, nobody had any feeling; that state always goes right; its democratic and liberal republican party long ago did what Prof. Wise's mammoth wind-bag don't seem likely to do to any great extent—went up; and the result of the late election was so certain that little outside interest was felt in it. But the Washburn-Butler conflict did excite interest, so intense as to be almost painful, and was conducted with a savage zeal in strong contrast to the apathy of the Maine contest; but then civil wars are always the fiercest. Some of the Massachusetts papers were very sarcastic concerning the interest taken in the Massachusetts scrimmage by papers outside the State, and kind'y notified all meddlers that the Bay State could take good care of its own affairs,—which was rather amusing to those who remembered the part taken by the Boston press in the last senatorial contest in New Hampshire. Circumstances do indeed alter cases greatly.

Butler's determined attempt to capture Massachusetts was almost successful; and he was defeated, not by the caucus nor any other system of electing delegates to the State convention, nor by the convention, but by Representative B. F. Butler,—not at Worcester when Washburn was nominated, but in Washington when Congress made the famous dive into the treasury known as the salary grab. The writer, for one, was earnest in hoping Butler would win two years ago; and he knows of many Massachusetts men who worked for Butler then, and would have worked for him this year but for the salary steal, who supported Washburn in the late contest. The bitter and manifestly unfair treatment of Butler by the leading Washburnites, who were so afraid Representative Butler would become Governor Butler that they endeavored in every way to belittle the acts of General Butler,—sneered at his splendid management of affairs at Baltimore and New Orleans, and called his reckless hardihood in presence of the assembled crime of New York "out-blackguarding a New York mob,"—won for him the sympathy of many who could not appreciate the power and audacity of his defence; and the frantic appeals of the Washburn press that the respectability of Massachusetts politics might be preserved would have been found insufficient to keep in line the thousands of working men who think the gain of a little more ability and energy would be ample compensation for the loss of a little "eminent respectability," of which Massachusetts has for years had more than enough for use.

The facts that Butler was opposed by nearly all the "eminent respectables" and that they threw so much mud at the object of their dislike, distorting facts and making misstatements in their eagerness to defeat him, only strengthened him with the working men of the party; and it is hard to find an argument of the Washburn press which could reasonably have been expected to influence many voters, except those arguments based on Butler's engineering of the salary steal through Congress. His remarkable speech at the close of the convention was a good illustration of his wonderful ability to make the best of circumstances, as well as of his undaunted pluck and perfect readiness to "hit back," and to hit hard too. And the strong show he made in the contest and the ludicrous terror he spread in the ranks of the respectable conservatives, in spite of the salary grab and its denunciation by the people of the whole country, is proof that but for that obnoxious measure B. F. Butler would to-day have been the nominee of the republicans for Governor of Massachusetts. The lesson to be gathered from this is that audacity, brilliant ability, eminent services in the past and strong promises for the future, and even the unstinted abuse of opponents, are altogether insufficient to overcome the antagonism aroused by a dishonest or equivocal act on the part of a public official.

NIX SALAHY.

Gross Inhumanity to Seamen.

Some of the crew of the whaler Ansel Gibbs, of New Bedford, before reported wrecked in the Arctic Ocean, and who were brought to that city in the whaling schooner Abbie Bradford, have reached Boston, and tell a horrible story of suffering and torture. They say that on account of the neglect of the owners to provide suitable provisions they were attacked with scurvy. They were terribly beaten by the captain and first mate, and after the vessel was wrecked ten men died of scurvy, and those who had been foremost in protesting against the action were left on the Island, the captain of the Abbie Bradford refusing them a passage.

The names of the sailors making these charges are Albert A. Sweet, of Boston, nephew of Mr. Sweet, of the firm of Brewster, Sweet & Co., and Charles Kugler, of Germany. They, with some others of the crew who have reached home, meditate instituting legal proceedings against the captain and owners of the Ansel Gibbs, and have already retained counsel. The charge against the captain will be cruelty and improper treatment of his men; against the owners criminal neglect in not supplying the vessel with proper provisions.

—The first instance of failure of a divorce suit ever chronicled in Indiana occurred the other day in the case of a lady whose husband died just before the judge's decision could be rendered, and there is a strong feeling in favor of committing the attending physician for contempt of court in not keeping the defendant alive long enough for his matrimonial career to be terminated in the regular way.

A Baby-Show in Missouri.

The St. Clair (Mo.) County Agricultural and Mechanical Association combined a baby-show, open to all comers, in connection with other attractions of their Fair. The results are thus described by a correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat: "At 9.30 o'clock exactly the procession was formed, and fifteen minutes later the mothers were seated in Hiram Barfield's restaurant booth, and the competing babies were seated in their laps. The booth selected was an excellent one for the purpose. It was open on all four sides, thus affording the vast crowd that had assembled an opportunity of speculating on the enterprise of Belleville's citizens.

After the babies were seated it was a beautiful sight. Thirty-four little noses evoked admiration; sixty-eight little fists alternately churned the air, and were crammed into thirty-four little mouths; sixty-eight little eyes were fixed upon vacancy; sixty-eight little lungs were inflated ready for a starter; sixty-eight little legs stuck out straight, and 340 little toes sawed the air. It was a beautiful sight, and presently there arose a sound not altogether as attractive as the sight. Then the committee went to work and the crowd looked on curiously. The committee was composed of Mr. J. B. Van Court, Mrs. J. B. Van Court, Mrs. M. Stuckey, Mrs. William Flescheit, Mrs. Seitz, and Mrs. Begole. The babies were seated in rows, and the examiners passed along, attentively regarding each one. As they passed by the flush came and went in many a mother's cheek; a feverish light came into each mother's eyes as she gazed hopefully upon the impassive faces. Little faith would any one of them put in the decision that robbed her darling of all the praise. At length the verdict was agreed upon, and it was announced that the children would be driven around the amphitheatre before the decision was given. The first prize, a sewing machine, was mounted in a spring wagon, the committee occupied the second, and eight followed, filled with the babies and their mothers. Slowly they moved around the ring, while from out 10,000 throats poured a noise like thunder. Once more the wagons drew up at the booth and discharged their squalling freight. Then the decision was announced. The blue ribbon was awarded to Frances Victoria, aged one year, daughter of Mrs. Kate Phelps, for being 'the handsomest, best formed, most sprightly, and finest for size and beauty under two years.' The prize was a $90 sewing machine. The baby is from Chester, Chester county. The white ribbon, or second premium, was awarded to a thirteen months' old baby, never named, the daughter of Mrs. Edward Sikkeman, of Belleville. The price was $20 in cash. The bouquet, or third premium, was awarded to twins Margaret and Mary, aged four months, the daughters of Mrs. Josephine Schroeder, of Belleville. The prize was $10 in cash, offered by Mr. A. G. Badgley, a bachelor, and the Cashier of the People's Bank. There were pale faces as the verdict was rendered, and there were tearful eyes as thirty-one mothers turned away. But one incident occurred to mar the interest in the show. It had scarcely closed when it was reported that one of the twins who took the third prize had been seized with spasms, and was in a dying condition. It was immediately removed to town and medical attendance summoned, but up to the time the Democrat reporter left the child had not recovered."

An Instructive Experiment.

The principles in the circulation of the waters of the sea were beautifully shown before the Royal Geographical Society, England, recently by a simple experiment. A trough with plate-glass sides, about six feet long and a foot deep, but not more than an inch wide, was filled with water. At one end a piece of ice was wedged in between the sides to represent the polar cold, while the tropic heat was represented at the other end by a bar of metal laid across the surface of the water, the projecting end of which was heated with a spirit-lamp. Red coloring matter was then put in at the warm end, and blue at the cold end, so that the currents could be traced. The blue water, chilled by contact with the ice, immediately fell down to the bottom, crept slowly along, and gradually rose toward the surface of the equatorial end, after which it gradually returned along the surface to the starting point. The red water crept first along the surface of the polar end, then fell to the bottom just as the blue had done, and formed another stratum, creeping back again along the bottom and coming to the surface. Each color made a distinct circulation during the half hour in which the audience viewed the experiment.

The Balance of Trade.

The Providence Journal says the prospect now is, that for the year ending in December, the balance of trade for the whole country will be in our favor. Our imports are much less than in 1872, and less than in 1871. Our exports are larger than for the corresponding time last year. Now is there any reason why this favorable state of things should not continue? It is only necessary that as a people, we should resolve to forego a small proportion even of our needless luxuries; and that the system of careful husbandry should be pursued west and south, in order to so reduce the general individual indebtedness as to give relief to the farmers who have mortgaged their farms, the people of limited incomes who have been tempted beyond their means, and leave our State and national credit in such condition that the money we need for railroads and which it would be good business policy to borrow can be had at a low rate. One years abstinence from silks and champagne would place the country in a position to command the money of the world.

—A Swede walked into a Leavenworth book store the other day and remarked: "Got any overalls for letters?" He was handed a bunch of envelopes.

A Treasure for a Bibliophile.

The Appletons have come into possession of a treasure dear to the hearts of the lovers of costly and rare books. It is a remarkable and unique copy of Joseph Spence's "Anecdotes, Observations and Characters of Books and Men," more familiarly known under the title of "Spence's Anecdotes." The copy to which we refer is due to the personal labor of a skilled collector. It is printed on a small page with a wide margin, in two volumes quarto, each page inlaid. One hundred and seventy-five rare and beautiful old portraits of the persons from whose works and conversation the anecdotes have been collected, are bound with it, as well as many plates of residences and localities to which reference is made. The whole is bound in crushed Levant morocco. There are quaint etchings, rare-line engravings, and treasures in almost every form of artistic skill in this collection. Among the portraits specially noticeable are those of Pope, Dr. Johnson, Addison, Swift, Cowley, and Bolingbroke.

Devastating Aerolite.

The barn of Mr. Nathan Nye, in West Sandwich, Mass., was totally consumed by fire recently, during a thunder-storm. The lightning stroke was seen by a man about half a mile distant, who states that when within about twenty degrees the bolt appeared to change, and looked as if fire was being poured from a bucket and waved itself to the barn, entered, and immediately the whole barn was in flames. Afterwards, among the ruins, about a barrel of greenish-looking, porous, but extremely hard substance was found scattered about, principally in one corner. There was nothing about the barn to melt into and form such a peculiar, lava-like matter, and it is supposed to have descended with the lightning. A fragment has been sent to Professor Agassiz for examination.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, briskness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, desponding victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. E Pluribus Unum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, sallow-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not try Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 52 Broadway, New York.

Portsmouth Conservatory of Music,

NO. 78 State Street,

(OPPOSITE POST-OFFICE.)

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the third of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $8, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and application for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, six weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child rendered it inexpedient or impracticable so to do for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, or having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

FOR THE FIRST OFFENCE A FORFEIT OF $10, AND $20 FOR THE SECOND AND EVERY SUBSEQUENT OFFENCE.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by errors returned to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Shall the Liquor Law be Enforced?

The city of Portsmouth has not impressed the writer of these lines as being a place remarkable for hard drinking. No doubt a great deal of liquor is drank here, and there is more drunkenness than there ought to be; but a visiting stranger, if questioned on the subject, would give it as his opinion that the people of Portsmouth constitute as moral and temperate a community as can be found almost anywhere, even in New England. There is a law on the statute books of the state, however, which utterly forbids the sale of alcoholic liquors, except for medicinal purposes. It is a notorious fact that this law is not enforced in this city. On the contrary, its violation is pursued as a regular and legitimate business, and there is not the slightest attempt on the part of the authorities to break up the traffic. Shall this state of things continue? A large number of our most respected citizens desire that it shall not. They want the law enforced because it is a law, and because they believe it to be a good law. On Thursday evening these gentlemen presented to the board of Mayor and Aldermen the following petition:

To the Hon. Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Portsmouth:—We respectfully ask your honorable body to give such instructions to the City Marshal as will tend to stop the illegal sale of spirituous and malt liquors in this city; and we furthermore pray that if the present police force is inadequate to the task, that you will create a police force of sufficient power and integrity to accomplish the result desired by your petitioners.

This petition is signed by James De-Normandie, Carlos Martyn, W. H. Alden, A. C. Hardy, John A. Goss, L. L. Harmon, Elder Damon, Eleazer Owen, Joseph W. White, Wm. M. Harmon, Canon Walsh, Jos. Hiller Foster, Joseph A. Grace, Joseph Pettigrew, Samuel W. Moses, J. Horace Kent, Benj. Cheever, J. F. Bingham, D. H. Pierce, E. B. Goodall, Geo. E. Hodgdon, Adams Perry, James A. Spaulding, N. B. Coleman, Elbridge G. Pierce, Joshua Stackpole, Saml. H. Goodall, John E. Ham, E. G. Pierce, Jr., and about 200 others.

A petition so respectably signed—simply asking the city authorities to do what is their bounden duty—should have respectful and earnest consideration. The hearing on the matter, which is appointed for next Thursday evening, should, and probably will, excite great interest. If the friends of the liquor law are in earnest, now is the time to make the fact manifest.

The Churches on Sunday.

Sunday brought with it a cold driving storm from the northwest, accompanied by a drizzling rain. The effects of such inclement weather were most conspicuously noticeable in the thinned attendance at the churches, although the services at several were of an unusually interesting character.

At the Universalist church the morning services were conducted by Rev. A. J. Patterson, who was warmly greeted by former parishioners and old friends, many of whom came forward at the close of the services to grasp him by the hand. The altar, table, and each side of the platform were decorated with numerous bouquets of beautiful flowers, whose brilliant hues told vividly of the approach of the autumnal season. On the wall in the rear of the pulpit living flowers were arranged in the form of a cross, the body being of scarlet petunias, bordered with pure white—a combination of colors as pleasing to the eye as the whole was suggestive and symbolical. This was the work of Mr. Lyman Broughton, and indicates the possession of rare taste and artistic skill. Mr. Patterson looks in improved health, the result probably of needed rest afforded by his summer vacation. He spoke from St. John, 14th chapter, a part of the 8th verse: "Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us." The sermon was an argument in behalf of the paternal nature of God, and was marked by the power of illustration, tender pathos and earnest eloquence so familiar to all Portsmouth people. Mr. Patterson will remain in the city till to-morrow, and then returns to his pastoral duties at Boston Highlands.

The morning service at the Middle street Baptist church was very well attended, considering the weather. This house has been closed for the past six Sabbaths, for the purpose of improving its interior. The walls and ceiling have been beautifully frescoed giving a fine effect and making the house one of the prettiest and neatest audience rooms in the city. The ventilation has been greatly improved by placing four ventilators in the centre of the ceiling, to be opened and closed at will by adjustments that are accessible without difficulty. The expense of refitting and painting the auditorium, galleries and vestibule is $1200, raised wholly by subscription. The work was done by Philip A. Butler of Boston, whose rare ability in this direction is so well known here as to need no encomium from our pen. The display of flowers on Sabbath morning was profuse and beautiful. On the right of the pastor's desk were large vases of handsome flowers of all shades, intermingled with myrtle, while on the left was a stand containing a splendid bouquet of autumn flowers of varied hues. In front of the desk depended a large anchor of flowers formed of white flox and ambrosia, arranged with much skill and taste by Miss Lizzie Marden, a devoted member of the Middle st. church, and daughter of Mr. Francis Marden of this city. The pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Alden, spoke from Isaiah, 60th chapter, and a part of the 13th verse: "To beautify the place of my sanctuary," the point of his sermon being to show that churches ought by their stateliness and beauty to indicate the material prosperity and growth of a community; that inasmuch as they are the temples of God, they should be fittingly and richly adorned as a testimonial to the value of religion. The speaker cautioned his hearers, however, against the tendency to worship the material rather than the spiritual; that God was reached through humility and purity, and that beautiful surroundings and adornments should only serve as aids to inspire us with a proper devotion.

At the Unitarian church, Rev. William G. Nowell preached from Acts xii., 8: "And ye shall receive power after the Holy Ghost has come upon you." The music at this church is always of the most excellent character, and on Sunday maintained its usual high standard.

Swift Witnesses.

We have already published an account of the accusation of one Mary West, at Boston, by two police officers who charged her with being idle and disorderly, the woman denying that she was in Boston at all during the time specified by the officers, and finally producing a man calling himself James Perry of Portsmouth, who swore she was at work for him during that time. The committee on police of the Boston city government have been investigating the case, and the two officers have been dismissed from the force, the committee believing the officers' action to have resulted from gross carelessness and not from any intent to commit perjury. During this examination it was developed that the woman West was a notoriously bad character, and that the man who swore to her having worked for him in this city was merely a hired liar; but it was also proved that she was in the House of Correction in this city from the 29th of June to the 21st of August for non-payment of a fine and costs imposed for drunkenness, which was conclusive that the statements of the Boston officers could not be correct. The Portsmouth police say the woman has been well but most unfavorably known to them for several years, under the name of Josephine West, as being about as low a specimen of degraded and abandoned womanhood as vice can manufacture. Had the Boston officers merely accused her of being an idle and disorderly drunkard they would probably have been able to easily substantiate the charge; but they could not prove that she was leading an idle and disorderly life in Boston and at the same time living in the Portsmouth House of correction, so they were dismissed.

Laconics.

The paving of Market street is completed, and the appearance of that thoroughfare is greatly improved.

Hackett knocked off that house corner of State and Washington streets, on Saturday, to Andrew Loud for $2,920.

The Grandee took advantage of the northwest breeze and sailed out of the harbor in fine style, about 6 o'clock on Sunday morning.

Our exchange wrestler made his usual call on Saturday. Why is he like the poor? Because we have him always with us.

The new building of the Mechanics' Association is making rapid headway, and, from present appearances, will be one of the most imposing structures on Congress street when completed.

At the reception of Dearborn S. F. E. Co., No. 1, by Kearsarge, No. 3, last Saturday evening, the "Sarges" were surprised by Stewart Sheldon, Esq., presenting them with an elegant oil painting, valued at $100.

The fall season promises to open briskly. Our merchants are laying in new stocks of goods, and mechanics who have had their play-spell during the summer are sharpening their tools. The prospect for a large amount of building is good.

Mr. James Chadwick, the occupant of the store where fire was discovered on Friday afternoon, informs us that it was probably caused by the careless throwing of a lighted cigar stump among a pile of rubbish and shavings.

We invite the attention of persons interested to the advertisement of Miss Mary E. B. Miller, who will receive a few advanced pupils in Latin and the modern langauages, mathematics, etc., and also proposes to form classes in drawing and painting. Miss Miller is too well known as a competent and faithful instructor to need any warranty other than her own reputation, in this city; and pupils entrusted to her care may be counted on to make all the progress their natural abilities render them capable of making.

Stoddard has our sympathies. Another of his teams ran away with a couple of young men on Saturday afternoon. Turning from Middle street into Richards Avenue, one wheel of the carriage came off and the horse became unmanageable, but having good steerage-way, the driver turned him into a gulley. The animal made a very short stop when he couldn't go any further, and the young men sailed over his head, and landed safe and unhurt among the tall grass beyond. The carriage was badly smashed.

What She Said.

A colored man living in Detroit, having long admired a colored widow living in the next block above, but being afraid to come out boldly and reveal his passion, went to a white man of his acquaintance the other day and asked him to write a letter asking her hand in marriage. The friend wrote, telling the woman in a few brief lines that the size of her feet was the talk of the neighborhood, and asking her if she couldn't pare them down a little. The name of the colored man was signed, and he was to call on her the next Sunday night for an answer. The other day the writer of the letter met the negro limping along the street, and asked him what the widow said. The man showed him a bloodshot eye, a scratched nose, a lame leg, and a spot on the scalp where a handful of wool had been violently jerked out, and he answered in solemn tones: "She didn't say nuffin, an' I didn't stay dar mor'n one minute!"

English Ritualism.

[London Letter to the New York Times.]

In the Church of England the High Church party, or Ritualists, as they are called, are also doing their best to bring matters to a crisis. A furious agitation is now raging on the subject of baldacchino in one of the London churches. A baldacchino is simply a canopy, which may be more or less gorgeous, over the altar, and is intended to enhance the dignity and honors of that part of the fittings of the church. An application for leave to put up this canopy has been made to the Bishop of London. The Bishop has gravely referred the question to his learned Assessor; the Assessor has had a solemn sitting to hear the question argued, and there will, no doubt, be a long, intricate, and highly-edifying inquiry.

There can, of course, be no doubt as to the grounds on which the Ritualists desire to decorate their churches in this manner. It will carry them nearer to Rome, and will supply another outward and visible sign of the mystic relations between the priesthood and the Deity. Protestant feeling has been keenly roused, and the canopies are denounced as Papal superstitions and inventions of the devil. It will very likely be found that baldacchini are not illegal, and all the hot-headed Ritualist parsons in the country will then insist upon having their altars dignified with trumpery hangings of velvet and fringe, like a shoddy mantelpiece. If this happens there is pretty sure to be fisticuffs. Even as it is, the choir-boys at some of the High Church chapels are frequently mobbed and beaten by the mob. It seems that there has been some question of erecting a baldacchino in St. Paul's Cathedral, but at present there is no example of this kind of ornament in any English church. It will, therefore, be absolutely new and strange, and its introduction is sure to be bitterly resented.

A storm is also brewing in regard to the confessional. For some years past the High Church clergy have been secretly encouraging confession, and have instituted special arrangements for the purpose, and now they have thrown off the veil, and have publicly appealed to the Bishops to organize a regular system of confessors and confessionals. The Archbishops, as usual, have giving a shuffling answer, deprecating attempts to subvert the principles of the Reformation, but pointing out their own helplessness, and urging that the laity must protect themselves against innovations which they dislike. There can be no doubt that the Ritualists, in carrying things to such an extremity, and doing all they can to offend and exasperate moderate men, are acting very foolishly for themselves. They are only boiling hot water for their own scalding.

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes The Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company.
COAL.
HAVING contracted for a quantity of the above coal, we would call the attention of Manufacturers, Dealers and Consumers to the following different grades mined and controlled by the Company:
HARD WHITE ASH COAL,
FREE BURNING WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN WHITE ASH COAL,
SHAMOKIN RED ASH COAL,
NORTH FRANKLIN COAL,
LYKENS VALLEY COAL.
In order that all coal shall be shipped in good order, a most rigid system of inspection, both at the mines and at the shipping ports, will at all times be enforced. In every district of the coal region there will be appointed a number of competent persons skilled in the preparation of coal, as local inspectors, whose duty it will be to visit the several collieries daily to see that a proper force is at all times employed in removing slate, and to prevent, if possible, any coal being sent from the mines in bad order. In addition to these efforts at prevention, no mean will be left untried at the shipping ports to cure the evils of careless preparation. At Schuylkill Haven, Port Clinton and Port Richmond, ALL COAL WILL BE SUBJECTED TO THE PERSONAL EXAMINATION OF A SKILLED INSPECTOR BEFORE IT IS SHIPPED, and if condemned by him, will be dumped in places provided for the purpose and before being loaded into vessels WILL BE THOROUGHLY REPICKED AND CLEANED BY HAND.
We keep a fine stock of the above coal on hand, also
LEHIGH, WILKESBARRE, PITTSTON
And other first class Coal. For sale by the Cargo, Car-load or at retail from our wharf.

Dog Yarns.

The Springfield, Mass., Republican thinks that the old story of Xeuxis and the grapes has been parallelled at the studio on Crescent Hill. The story is as follows: "Mr. Elwell had two pet kittens, about five months old, big enough to act 'cat' all over, whom he delights to see disport themselves around his studio. The other day, as one was wandering playfully there, she came suddenly in sight of a 'speaking' portrait of a dog, a keen-eyed black-and-tan. Suddenly kitty's back up-arched to the utmost, as, bristling from nose to tail to twice her size and growling under breath, she assumed an attitude of defense, against an expected attack of her painted enemy. So, for several minutes kitty stood her ground, till, finding the dog not at all disposed to pick a quarrel, she very warily backed out, as if she were treading on eggs, and made her exit with a scamper, congratulating herself, no doubt, on her safety. This is not the first time, either, that Mr. Elwell has been complimented. Years since, he invited a sturdy bulldog into this room, who snuffing around, speedily recognized his master's just finished portrait by squatting before it, and wagging with a ludicrous joy what bit of a tail he had. These are unbiased tributes, and better worth having than the begrudged praise of us dusty worldlings, stone-blind to natural effects.

It was an aggravated case of complicating circumstances. You see, Dick Slater is a Randolph street saloon keeper, and very proud of his skill with the rifle. He shot a lynx once, or claimed he did, and as lasting proof had the animal neatly stuffed and set up in one of his show windows. Four boys were passing the window the other morning, and stopped to look at the lynx. One of the boys had a bull dog, and the bull dog stopped also. No sooner did he get his eyes on that lynx, however, than crush he went through the window, seized the game by the throat, and shook the stuffing out of it in less than no time. The glass breaking frightened a horse standing before the door, and with a splendid lunge he went on the sidewalk and gulched another big niche out of the same window, then fled, upsetting two boys who were in the buggy behind him. He was caught at Twelfth street; pieces of the buggy might have been picked up all along between that point and the starting one, and the boys are now nursed by anxious mothers. Slater set up some folding doors to protect his place till he could get a new window. Presently Mrs. Slater came down stairs, and being totally ignorant that anything had happened, opened the side door into the saloon. This knocked down the folding doors and completed the wreck. A piece gashed Mrs. Slater's nose painfully, and springing suddenly back in alarm she upset two junior Slaters who had followed down. At present the saloon has a bran new window, and in place of the lynx is a green frog, which prognosticates all kinds of weather.

A dog belonging to a Danbury man was killed by a mowing-machine on Friday. The owner was deeply affected by the loss, but he said we must all remember that death is no respecter of persons, and sold the hide for a dollar.

Blessings of Buttermilk.

M. Robing, in a recent communication to the French Academy, advocates the habitual use of buttermilk as a means of prolonging life. His theory—and such it is likely to remain—is based on the opinion that the mineral matter taken into the system remains in a great degree undecomposed, and thus serves to incrust and stiffen the different parts, and render them less active. Following out the common theory that the stomach is a furnace, and that digestion is only another form of combustion, he argues that mineral matter in the former is nothing more nor less than clinker, serving only to arrest the process of animal combustion.

"Life," he states, "exists only in combustion; but the combustion which occurs in our bodies, like that which takes place in our chimneys, leaves a detritus which is fatal to life. To remove this, he would administer lactic acid with ordinary food. This acid is known to posess the power of removing or destroying the incrustations which form on the arteries, cartilages, and valve of the heart. As buttermilk abounds in this acid, and is moreover an agreeable kind of food, its habitual use, it is urged, will free the system from these causes, which inevitably cause death between the seventy-fifth and the hundredth year."

—Responses to prayers and sermons may be good if they come in at the right place, not so, however, came in a response, recently, to a minister in an African church. He had come down from the pulpit to invite a stranger in one of the pews to preach for him, but was unsuccessful. "Brethren," said he, "I invited Brother S—— to preach, but he declines, "Glory be to God!" roared out a man from the middle of the church.

—A schoolboy's composition on tobacco: "This noxious weed was invented by a distinguished man named Walter Raleigh. When the people first saw him smoking they thought he was a steamboat, and as they had never heard of such a thing as a steamboat, they were terribly frightened."

—A red-nosed citizen of Springvale is recorded as saying: "I can always tell water when I see it, it looks so much like gin."

Readables.

The yellow fever is increasing at Shreveport, La., and has appeared at Memphis, Tenn., where about thirty deaths have occurred, chiefly among the negro population. Quarantine against New Orleans has been established at all the principal ports of Texas.

A vigilance committee in Vermillion parish, La., has been operating against a gang of cattle thieves and several executions under Lynch law are reported.

The Mississippi steamboat James Howard caught fire and was scuttled near Commerce, Miss., Friday. Loss $160,000.

Alexander R. Shepherd is appointed governor of the District of Columbia, vice Cooke, resigned.

Some of the New York Times has been sold lately at the rate of a million and a quarter for the whole. Jennings, the English managing editor, now owns 12 shares, Mr. Jones, the publisher, 38, and the other half belongs to the estate of James Taylor and Edwin B. Morgan of Aurora, N. Y.

A trial that will be watched with great interest by henpecked husbands is soon to come on at Baltimore. A woman of that city has been arrested on the charge of being a common scold. The laws of Maryland make no provision for the punishment of such an offense, and she is to be tried under the old English common law. This defines such an offense as common barratry, and provides as one of the means of punishment "boring a hole through the tongue."

A collision occurred on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Wilmore, Friday night, by which an engineer was killed and a fireman wounded. A passenger train and two freight trains came together, and a terrible disaster was narrowly avoided.

A New York policeman was fatally stabbed by a drunken man Saturday evening.

Mormonism is tabooed by the Paris authorities. A party of Mormon emigrants who have just arrived in that city on their way to America, have been notified by the Prefect of Police that if they attempt to hold their religious exercises in public they will be expelled from the city. The Parisians prefer to have their sins gilded, whereas Brigham and his devotees take theirs without adornment.

One of the most curious features of the Yellowstone region is to be found in the hot springs. On the borders of the Yellowstone lake are often to be seen elevated mounds, which jut out from the shore into the water. These contain pools filled with heated water, so that it is possible for a person standing on the mound to catch trout in the lake with the help of a fishing-rod, and to cook them in the boiling spring without taking them off the hook.

Vigilance committees seem to be on the increase in Indiana. At Charlestown, in that State, late on Thursday night, a body of horsemen rode into town and posted invitations for half a dozen obnoxious individuals of that place to leave the State within fifteen hours or do worse. The prescribed travelling will be done as desired without doubt. The loop-holes of the legal system form the origin of such lawless proceedings.

Wall street was greatly excited on Saturday over the suspension of Kenyon, Cox & Co., an establishment supposed to be as solid as the best banking institution in the country. As near as can be ascertained the suspension was caused by the firm indorsing the bonds of the Canada Southern Railway to the amount of $1,250,000, and also by the further indorsing of bonds of the same concern by Daniel Drew, who is a partner in the firm. It is also stated that the firm were long of Wabash stock, at a very high figure, and were compelled to close out at a considerable loss. They will probably be going along all right within a day or two.

State News.

Here is the classification of babies' premiums at the New Hampshire Agricultural Society: For the finest baby under six months old a gold necklace; for ditto, between the ages of twelve and twenty months, a golden cup; for the loveliest pair of twins, two golden mugs; for the child with the reddest hair, regardless of temper, $10 in gold.

The bi-centenary of Nashua is to be celebrated with an address by Hon. S. T. Worcester, and other appropriate exercises.

The oak trees in the vicinity of Nashua are being stripped of their leaves by a species of caterpiller.

Nay & Adams, of West Peterborough, have thrashed over 3,000 bushels of grain this year at their mill.

Among the Pensioners examined by Dr. W. G. Perry of Exeter, on Thursday last was Augustus Bradford of Newmarket, aged 97 years, who was at the battle of Tippecanoe, in 1811.

Mr. & Mrs. Andrew Lane, of Lebanon, celebrated their golden wedding, on the 19th inst. Five children and 14 grandchildren were present on the occasion.

The sum of nearly $400 has been raised for the benefit of Jeremiah Homan, who had an arm torn off in Pepper's Hosiery Mill, in Lake Village, recently.

A few days since, Baldwin Humphrey, of Croydon, turned a mare of his into a pasture belonging to Paul Jacobs: whereupon a two year old heifer, not receiving the new comer with entire complacency, sprung at her and hooked her so severely that she died within a few minutes.

Salem is building a school house, 30x45, costing 3000.

David Damon of North Hampton, a smart old man of eighty, grappled with and overpowered a burglar who broke into his house lately and held him till aid came.

Political Notes.

The Oregon republican convention nominated Hiram Smith for Congress, and adopted a resolution of confidence in Senator Mitchell.

Referring to the statement of the St. Louis Republican that the Democratic party has really ceased to live as a national organization, and that it is very unlikely that a Democratic national ticket will be in the field in 1876, the Philadelphia North American says: "It is fully warranted by the facts. In South Carolina and Mississippi no regular Democratic tickets are run, and the Iowa State committee has issued an address announcing that it has been deemed inexpedient there to make a separate rally. In New York the Democratic convention is called under the name of "Democratic Republican." In most parts of the South the opposition is called simply "Conservative." No Democratic party as such exists at all at the South. If this is not practical dissolution it is something very much like it, and if, as the World says, the present campaign is merely a review to enable the Democratic managers to know their force, it must be a most discouraging one to them."

The Utica Herald closes a thoughtful and timely article thus: "The danger to the Republican party is over-confidence. The magnificent majority of last fall may be lost if the State convention neglects or is careless of its duty. The only claims for nomination entitled to consideration are purity, honesty and integrity. The ticket must command success by its excellence. The people will not be satisfied with mediocrity or negative virtues. Candidates must be prominent, well-known, and not need introduction to the party."

The Golden Age draws this sketch of General Butler: "Nine-tenths of our present race of public men use their position to make money; General Butler uses his to gain distinction. He wants to stand well with his countrymen. He wants to be President. He has too much sense to steal, even if he had no moral monitor within. Nor does he ever shrink from the full, open and avowed responsibility of his own word and acts. He is a statesman, not of an ethereal type, but combines in about equal measure the brawny merits of Charles James Fox and Thaddeus Stevens."

The Texas Democrats are thorough-going, if nothing else. At the beginning of the last session of the State Legislature one of them moved that all the laws passed by the Republicans be repealed. And now one of the papers, referring to a certain measure, frankly says:—"Although the movement was originally Democratic, it is now advocated by the Republicans, and there is a very good reason for opposing it."

Lucky Miners.

[Carthage (Mo.) Banner, August 15.]

Two Carthagenians who went to Minersville a few weeks ago to try their luck have astonished the mining world with the discovery of the largest lump ever found in lead regions in the shape of float, or big clay mineral, making them rich in a single day. The 4,000 pound chunk raised at Joplin, a few weeks since, is but a pebble compared with the Swede discovery. Only eight feet beneath the surface this monster was found, and with a week's work they have been unable to get the dirt and rock away, so as to measure this mammoth chunk of galena, to ascertain the exact quantity, and come somewhere near the value of the prize those honest laborers have so luckily drawn. It is irregularly shaped, but all that is in sight has been measured and figured up by miners, surveyors scientists and mathematicians, and estimated to weigh 60,000 pounds. Just think of it—60,000 pounds of lead ore, worth almost two hundred thousand dollars in one piece, and two hard-fisted laboring men the lucky finders. Hurrah for the rich lead fields of Jasper! Young men in the East, we entreat you now, come West and get rich! Ah, this is not all, the rich agricultural prairies, valleys and bottoms of the banner county of the southwest are all benefitted by their proximity to the untold millions of mineral wealth that underlies the very ground we daily walk on. Of course everybody rejoices as the treasure is developed and brought to the surface, smelted up, transported to market and the cash returned here to make glad the hearts and supply the wants of the happy families of the toiling miners who are doing so much for our prosperity.

The shaft where this wonderful strike was made is near the northwest corner of the sheds of the Granby Mining and Smelting Company, and the company are endeavoring to have the big chunk brought to the surface whole. They offer to stand the expense if the object can be attained. It would be a big thing, indeed, and we certainly hope that machinery will be brought into requisition, and the "old fellow" lifted from his hiding place in the bowels of the earth, and deposited safely on terra firma, that our people may get a sight at the mammoth lump, that they may form some idea of what is underneath yet undeveloped.

—It is found that freezing of the waste pipes of kitchen sinks, etc., may be prevented by making them tapering toward the top, so that any thin ice that may form on them may fall away by slight change of temperature, and complete stoppage cannot take place even in continuous cold weather. Pipes about twenty-six feet long, about three inches wide at the top, and from 5.9 to 6.3 inches at the bottom, have proved very efficient, and cost little more than the usual cylindrical ones.

—An Indianapolis editor is responsible for this: "A young lady in Indiana sought to demolish an unfaithful lover by publishing some verses addressed to him, in which, after prophesying her immediate dissolution, she said, 'Come gaze upon my dust, false one.' But the compositor spelled dust with a 'b.'"

A Letter of John Brown, Written Just Before His Execution.

CHARLESTOWN, Jefferson Co., Va., 13th November, 1859.

Rev. Luther Humphrey—My Dear Friend: Your kind letter of the 12th instant is now before me. So far as my knowledge goes as to our mutual kindred, I suppose I am the first since the landing of Peter Brown from the Mayflower that has either been sentenced to imprisonment or the gallows. But, my dear friend, let not that fact alone grieve you. You cannot have forgotten how and where our grandfather (Capt. John Brown) fell in 1776, and that he, too, might have perished on the scaffold, had circumstances been very little different. The fact that a man dies under the hand of an executioner, or otherwise, has but little to do with his true character, as I suppose. John Rogers perished at the stake, a great and good man, as I suppose, but his being so does not prove that any other man who has died in the same way was good or otherwise. Whether I have any reason to be of "good cheer," or not, in view of my end, I can assure you that I feel so; and that I am totally blinded if I do not really experience that strengthening and consolation so faithfully implored in my behalf. God of our fathers, reward your fidelity. I neither feel mortified, degraded, nor in the least ashamed of my imprisonment, my chain, or my near prospect of death by hanging. I feel assured that "not one hair shall fall from my head without my Heavenly Father." I also feel that I have long been endeavoring to hold exactly "such a part as God has chosen." See the passage in Isaiah which you have quoted. No part of my life has been more happily spent than that I have here, and I humbly trust that no part has been spent to better purpose. I would not say this boastingly, but "thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through infinite grace." I should be sixty years old were I to live till May 9, 1860. I have enjoyed much of life as it is, and have been remarkably prosperous, having early learned to regard the prosperity and welfare of others as my own. I have never since I can remember required a great amount of sleep, so that I conclude I have already enjoyed full an average number of waking hours with those who reach their three score years and ten. I have not as yet been driven to the use of glasses, but can still see to read and write quite comfortably. But, more than that, I have generally enjoyed good health. I might go on to account unnumbered and unmerited blessings, among which would be some very severe afflictions, and those the most needed blessings of all. And now, when I think how easily I might be left to spoil all I have done or suffered in the cause of freedom, I hardly dare risk another voyage, even if I had the opportunity. It is a long time since we met, but we shall now soon come together in our "Father's house," I trust. "Let us hold fast that we already have," "remember that we shall reap in due time if we faint not." Thanks be ever unto God, "who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ, our Lord." And now, my old warm-hearted friend, good-bye. Your affectionate cousin,

JOHN BROWN.

—A Bridgeport paper tells a pretty story of an affecting scene before the Superior Court in that city recently. Two brothers named Adams of Westport, well along in years, who have for a long time been on unfriendly terms, recently came to blows, complained to a justice, were fined and appealed to the Superior Court. When the case came up Judge Foster called them before him, and, after talking and reasoning with them in a most fatherly and kindhearted way, appealed to them to be friends, and turning to one of them he put the question solemnly as in a marriage service, "You —— Adams, do promise on your part that you will be friends in future with your brother." The response came ringing out, "I will." Then to the other the judge put the same question, "You —— Adams do promise," etc., to which came an equally prompt "I will." "Then shake hands," said the judge, and as they did so there was not a dry eye in the court room. One of the brothers sobbed out, "By the blessing of God I will try and live peaceably with my brother." The other signified the same. "Then," said the judge, addressing the one who had been found guilty, "I impose upon you the lightest sentence of the court, one dollar, and I discharge your bond," the scene closing amid a general weeping of the judge, State attorney, brothers and spectators.

—Lawyer Prince's office boy took a good streak, Saturday afternoon, and gave the office floor a thorough drenching with water. Early in the evening Mr. Prince came in with a young lady client, and the moment he struck the wet floor one foot turned partly on its edge, and described a half circle with wonderful velocity. He clutched at a desk but missed it, when the other foot gave out, and again he was half way down but partly recovered, lost the other foot again, then both feet, and after vainly snatching at a chair, went down full length, turning over the chair and smashing the panel to the door of a bookcase with one heel. To add to the embarrassment of the affair the lady remained till it was over, and then abruptly left, and the next day there was a story in circulation that Mr. Prince had the tremens, and tried to murder one of our most estimable young ladies while in the fit. The office boy says if he could only stand still long enough he could give the particulars. So says the Danbury News.

—A Western journal says: "Miss Mary Campbell of Avondale, Ohio, during a stay of three months at Pittsburg last spring, used to go to the county jail every Sabbath afternoon and direct the musical exercises. She is a fine singer, and the prisoners were so much delighted that they have given her a silver goblet, inscribed, 'Presented by those unfortunates whose sufferings she has alleviated by her inspiring songs and unselfish kindness.'"

—The Cape May Ocean Wave has a leading article about mosquitoes, in which it says that the crop at that place, though late, is an excellent one, and that the size of the birds is rather above the average. Visitors are leaving about as fast as the railroad accommodations will permit them.

—A Detroit boy stood an umbrella, with a cord tied to it, in a public doorway. Eleven persons thought that umbrella was theirs, and carried it with them the length of the string. They then suddenly dropped it and went off without once looking back or stopping to pick it up again.

—A Milwaukee woman forger, on being convicted, applied to one of the newspapers for a situation as penitentiary correspondent.

Business Notices.

There is scarcely any disease in which purgative medicines are not more or less required, and much sickness and suffering might be prevented were they more generally used. No person can feel well while a costive habit of the body prevails; besides, it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases, which might have been avoided by a timely and judicious use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—35 cents by Druggists.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

The Symptoms of Health.

Health has its symptoms as well as disease. The clear eye, the fresh complexion, the steady hand, the firm step, the unclouded brain, briskness of spirits, and a disposition to look on the bright side of anything are indications that the animal machinery is in perfect working order. Happy are they whose running gear of life is in this excellent condition, and fortunate are they who know how to bring it into such a condition if disarranged. All who have experienced or witnessed the effect of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters upon the weak, broken down, desponding victims of dyspepsia, liver complaint, fever and ague, rheumatism, nervous debility, or premature decay, know that in this supreme tonic and alterative there exists a specific principle which reaches the very source of the trouble and effects an absolute and permanent cure. It Purifies Urum might be aptly inscribed on the label, for the preparation is a plurality of remedies condensed into one irresistible antidote.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue, and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, gall, &c., upon animals, in one year, than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing painreliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

Castoria is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

NO. 78 State Street,

(OPPOSITE POST-OFFICE.)

The subscriber would respectfully announce to the citizens of Portsmouth and vicinity that on the 25th of September, 1873, he will open in the city of Portsmouth a CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, which shall, in point of merit, equal any similar institution in New England. None but the very best of teachers will be employed to teach the following branches: Formation and Cultivation of the Voice; Singing in the English, German and Italian languages; Harmony; Counterpoint; Imitation; Canon; Fugue and Composition; Piano-forte; Organ; Cabinet Organ, and all brass and stringed instruments. Also, the French, German and Italian languages. The payment of $8, $10 or $15—according to classification—will entitle the pupil to a course of lessons in any one of the departments, besides a card of admission to all the free advantages of the institution.

Lessons will begin on the 25th of September, and application for examination and classification should be made as early as possible after the 15th of September to

Notice to Parents, Guardians and Masters.

YOUR attention is called to Sec. 1 of Chapter II of the laws of New Hampshire passed June session, 1871, which is as follows:—

"Every parent, guardian, master, or other person having the custody, control or charge of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, residing in any school district in which a public school is annually taught for the period of twelve weeks or more, within two miles by the nearest road from his residence, shall cause such child to attend such public school for twelve weeks at least in every year, from and after the first day of September next, at least of which attendance shall be consecutive, unless such child shall be excused from such attendance by the school committee of the town, or the board of education, or the superintending school committee of such district, upon its being shown to their satisfaction that the physical or mental condition of such child was such as to prevent his attendance at school for the period required, or that such child was instructed in a private school, or at home, for at least twelve weeks during such year, in the branches of education required to be taught in the public schools, having acquired those branches in other more advanced studies."

Section 3 provides the following penalties for non-compliance with Section 1:

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake, with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs; Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucho rrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

The Dearborns' Excursion.

Dearborn Steam Fire Engine Company No. 1, of this city, with Harlow's band, and His Honor the Mayor, Chief Engineer Marston, Assistants Ham and Locke, and W. L. Hidden, clerk of fire department, as invited guests, paid a visit to Lynn, Mass., last Friday. They were met at the depot by Tiger Engine Company, No. 4, and S. B. Breed hook and ladder company No. 1. Marching through most of the streets in Lynn, they were furnished refreshments by the members of No. 3, at their rooms opposite the Sagamore House; then the proprietor of the Sagamore, Wm. C. Thompson, showed that his heart was with the firemen by his doing the handsome thing. The company took dinner at the Kirtland House, S. T. Allen proprietor, who furnished a first class meal and everything was done handsomely. His Honor Mayor Lewis of Lynn introduced Major Wm. D. Chamberlain, who welcomed the Dearborns to Lynn, and was responded to by Mayor Marvin, Chief Engineer Marston, and Assistant Locke. Speeches were made by prominent citizens of Lynn, all bidding the Dearborns welcome. The line of march was taken up to the house of Tiger Engine Company No, 4, where a table was set with everything that a person could wish for. In the evening the company was escorted to Exchange Hall, where dancing was kept up until daylight. On Saturday Butler steam fire engine company, No. 3, furnished a splendid dinner, which the company did ample justice to. They left on the 2:45 P. M. train for Salem, and were taken to the house of steamers 1, 2 and 3, where a collation was spread. After some fine music by Harlow's band, all hands were escorted by the foreman of Wm. Penn to the hose house, where their whistles were moistened in good style.

On arriving home the Dearborns were met at the depot by Sagamore and Kearsarge steam fire engine companies, Nos. 2 and 3, and after marching through some of the principal streets, made a halt at Sagamore's engine house, where they were welcomed by Wm. W. Cotton, Esq. After a few minutes' stay, the line was taken in charge by Ira C. Seymour, foreman of Kearsarge, his company doing escort with torches, and taking another short march, were escorted to No. 1's hall (the "Sarges" having taken possession of it on account of their own being too small. Here both companies (1 and 2) were welcomed by Capt. Seymour in behalf of Kearsarge No. 3, the table being furnished in first-class style. After doing justice to the repast, speeches were made by Mayor Marvin, Chief Engineer Marston, Engineers Waterhouse and Ham, the companies cheering their officers enthusiastically.

CARD OF THANKS.

The officers and members of Kearsarge-Engine Co. No. 3 desire to return their sincere thanks to Mrs. I. N. Cox, Lewis G. Davis, W. M. Gray, Geo. Hayes, Frank Jones, J. L. Martin, G. H. Rundlett, H. L. Scott, A. H. Tucker, and Mrs. Ward, for donation of bouquets; also to all others who assisted them in any way upon their reception tendered to Dearborn Engine Co., No. 1; also to Sagamore Engine No. 2, for courtesies shown. Per order.

WM. S. HAZEL, Clerk.

Poultry Speculation.

Some weeks ago a gentleman residing in the outskirts of the city went to bed one evening and left a flock of about forty-six brahma hens in his poultry coop; that night he slept the sleep of the just, and next day he found that he was bereaved of more than half his flock, only about twenty remaining. The gentleman's wife and her sister were both awakened in the night by a stir among the hens, and distinctly heard the coop-door open and shut; but supposing the noise to be occasioned by some member of the family they failed to arouse any of the men in the house, which was particularly unfortunate, as one of the men, whose chamber window commands a fine view of the hen-coop, had three different kinds of pistols (two revolvers and a derringer) at hand, all big ones and all loaded, and is confident that he could have rendered himself very objectionable to the poultry thief had he been informed as to what was going on. He has been troubled ever since by a succession of bad colds, contracted by frequently getting out of bed at unseasonable hours of the night and sitting by the open window in classic costume and with a revolver in each hand, waiting for the hen merchant to come along and have a little fun; but the hen man has not yet happened along at just the right time, and the watcher begins to fear that he won't get a chance to empty his pistols profitably until next 4th of July.

Golden Wedding.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Batchelder, of North Hampton, was celebrated last Wednesday at their pleasant residence near Little Boar's Head. The children, grandchildren and one great-grandchild were present, to the number of about thirty. At 2 o'clock the company sat down to dinner and, after the substantial meal had been disposed of and the table cleared, the party again assembled in the large dining room. A capital presentation speech was made by Mr. E. H. Marston, of Boston, and a number of valuable and elegant gifts were then bestowed upon Mr. and Mrs. Batchelder. In behalf of his parents Mr. H. E. Batchelder of Haverstraw, N. Y., replied to the speech of presentation in a few well chosen words. The exercises were concluded with singing and a short prayer.

"Water, water all around, and not a drop" in the pump! And Monday was washing day, too? Does our over-grown monopoly intend to drive the people to distraction? or has the new temperance movement created such an enormous demand for water that the supply has run short for that reason?

A couple of young gentlemen not unknown to fame in the line of amateur histrionics are just now burning the midnight kerosene in the adaptation of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet to burlesque opera. The play is a perfect mine of undeveloped richness, and it is now in hands that will make the most of its possibilities. Before many moons wax and wane, we hope our citizens will have an opportunity of witnessing the production of this new comic opera.

Death from Eating Toad-Stools.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from Darien, Conn., says:—

This community has been in a state of excitement since Monday, occasioned by the sudden death on that day of a well-known and respectable lady, long a resident of the town. The circumstances of the case are as follows:—On Sunday morning last Mr. Albert Brush, a lawyer practising in Norwalk, son of A. C. Brush, and Miss Lillie Brush, his sister, went into a tract of wood, near Norton depot, close to the line of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, to gather mushrooms. Their object in this was to present a rare treat to their father on his return from church. They obtained a peck basketful of what they supposed were mushrooms, but which proved to be toad-stools—a deadly poison when taken into the stomach. They returned home very happy in their success; had the mushrooms dressed, and Mrs. Brush cooked them with great skill. Mr. Brush came from church at one o'clock, and at once the family sat down to dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Brush and their son ate heartily of the mushrooms. The daughter simply tasted, but did not swallow any of them. During the afternoon more than once the conversation turned upon the delightful meal they had enjoyed, and how thankful they should feel that children could exercise so much forethought in behalf of their parents. At one o'clock Monday morning the three who had eaten of the mushrooms were taken deadly sick. Each rose and began vomiting, at the same time suffering excruciating pains in the stomach. Medical aid was called, but little could be done to alleviate their pain. Mrs. Brush, being in delicate health, was completely prostrated. A counsel of physicians was called, but it was of no use. She lingered until the afternoon of Monday and then died. No post-mortem was held. Dr. Dockwood, of Norwalk, and Drs. Hoyt and Hurlbutt, of Stamford, were in attendance, and have been persistently attentive to the wants of the survivors. The son is yet a great sufferer, and doubts are expressed as to his recovery. His symptoms are very unfavorable, so much so that Dr. Lockwood has deemed it expedient to retain a council of physicians. The father's condition is little, if any, improved, and only by the greatest care can he be restored.

—A young lady just from Europe remarked to a veteran politician the other day, "It is of very little consequence," she said, "what kind of men you send out as foreign ministers. The thing of real importance is, they should have the right kind of wives. Any man can sign a treaty, I suppose, if you tell him what kind of a treaty it must be. But all his social relations with the nations to which you send him will depend on his wife."

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.

No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talents and ability as his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Daily Chronicle.

The Right Kind of a Wife.

I had just returned from two years in Europe, and was sauntering down Tremont street in the golden September morning, when I saw my friend Tom Foster get out of a horse-car a few steps in advance of me. I knew him in a moment, though we had hardly met since we were at Exeter Academy together, ten years before—roommates and blithe companions until we parted—I to go to Harvard, and he to enter his father's store, the well-known house of Foster & Co., Pearl street. He was a merry, hearty, practical fellow, clear-skinned and robust as an Englishman, self-reliant and enterprising as New Hampshire birth and Boston training could make him. I always liked him; but he plunged into business and I into study, and so, without meaning it, we had almost lost sight of each other. He was an only child; his parents spent their summers at their homestead in Greenland, near Portsmouth, and their winters in Boston.

As I said, I knew him in a moment. He had grown tall and stout, but the boy was still in his face, and, with a flush of early feeling, I sprang forward and caught him by the arm.

"Tom, how are you?"

He looked puzzled for a moment, and then, bursting into a laugh, he seized my hand in his strong grasp, and exclaimed:

"Why, John Ralston, is this you? Where did you come from? I'm so glad to see you, my boy. Why, I haven't set eyes on you since we made that trip to Nahant in your Freshman year. The truth is, father was so poorly for a long time then, that I had everything to see to, and felt as if the world was on my shoulders. I did hear, though, about your college honors and your going to Germany, and I've often thought of you lately, and wished to see you. Why, Jack, in spite of my weight, and your beard and broad shoulders, I can't realize that ten years have gone since we were at Exeter together. We must talk over old times and new. When did you get back, and what are your plans?"

"I came back yesterday, and shall stay in the city, on account of a business matter, until next Tuesday. Then I am going home."

"Well, now, this is Saturday, and you can do nothing after three o'clock. Come and spend Sunday with me in the country. I want to show you my wife."

"Your wife! are you married, Tom?"

"Married nearly a year," said he, with a smile.

"You don't look very solemn over it."

"Solemn! It's the jolliest thing I ever did in my life. Meet me at the Eastern depot at four o'clock, and I'll tell you all about it on the way down."

We parted at the Winter street corner—he to his store, and I to the Parker House.

"How handsome Boston has grown," said I, glancing at the fine buildings and the Common, beautiful in the September sun.

"We think it a nice town," he replied, speaking with the moderate words and the perfect assurance of the Bostonian, to whom his city is the sum of all excellence and delight. "Remember, four o'clock." And he disappeared in the crowd.

"Tom married!" I said to myself, as I walked along, "I dare say it's to his father's pretty ward, Clara Maitland, whom I saw when I spent the day there eleven years ago. I remember what long curls she had, and how fond she seemed of him."

Yes, I dare say it's to Clara. I hope, though, she hasn't grown for nothing but to display the latest fashions, and waltz a little, and torture the piano. Better some rosy, sturdy German Gretchen than a poor doll like that. It would be a shame for poor Tom, with his physique and vigorous brain, to be tied for life to such a woman. And then turning down School street, my thoughts wandered off to a blue-eyed girl I had loved for many a year—a girl who was not satisfied with the small triumphs of the croquet ground, but who could send an arrow home to the mark; and could climb the hills with me, her step light and free as the deer's in the glades below; and hold a steady oar in our boat on the river; and swim ashore, if need be; and then, when our walk and row was over, who could sit down to a lunch of cold meat and bread and butter with an appetite keen as a young Indian's after a day's hunt; yes, and who knew how to be efficient in the kitchen, and the rarest ornament of the parlor. How impatient I was to see her, the bewitching maiden a prince might have been proud to marry. And again I said to myself, as I went up the Parker House steps. "I do hope Tom hasn't made a fool of himself."

Four o'clock found me at the station; and a moment later in walked Tom, carrying a basket filled with Jersey peaches.

"They don't grow in Greenland," said he, tucking the paper down over the fruit. "Come this way."

"Now for the story, Tom" said I, as we crossed the bridge, and caught the breeze cool from the sea. "But I can guess, beforehand, the girl you married. It was Clara Maitland."

A shadow passed over Tom's face.

"Clara has been dead four years," said he. "She inherited consumption from her mother. We all did everything for her—took her to Minnesota and Florida, but it was no use. She did not live to see her eighteenth birthday."

"Poor Clara! She loved you dearly. Then I suppose you chose some Boston girl of your acquaintance?"

"Jack, you couldn't tell who Mrs. Tom Foster was if you should try from now till morning. I shall have to enlighten you," and moving the basket to one side, and settling himself in his seat, he went on:

"You know I have the misfortune to be an only child. After I was twenty-one, father and mother began to talk about my marrying. I have plenty of cousins, you know, and we always had young ladies going in and out of the house; but while Clara lived she was company enough for me, and after she died I was full of business, and didn't trouble myself about matrimony. To tell the truth, Jack, I didn't fancy the girls. Perhaps I was unfortunate in my acquaintances; but they seemed to me all curls and flounces and furbelows, and I would as soon have thought of marrying a fashion-plate as one of these elaborate creatures. I don't object to style; I like it. But you can see fine gowns and bonnets any day in the Washington street windows; and my idea of a woman is one whose dress is her least attraction.

"Do you recollect father's former partner, Abram Lane? He's a clever old gentleman, and a millionaire, and father has the greatest liking and respect for him. He has two daughters—one married years ago; and the other, much younger, father fixed upon as a desirable wife for me. I rather think the two families had talked it over together; at any rate, Miss Matilda came to Greenland for a long Summer visit. She is an amiable girl, so petted and spoiled that she is absolutely good for nothing—undeveloped in mind and body. She looked very gay in the evenings, attired in the latest importations. But she was always late at breakfast; she didn't dare ride on horse-back; she couldn't walk without stopping to rest on every stone; and once, when I asked her if she had read the account of the battle of Sedan, she looked up in her childish way, and said, "No, Mr. Foster. Newspapers are so tiresome." Bless me! what should I have done with such a baby?

"A year ago this Summer I was very much confined at the store; and when August came, instead of spending the whole month at home, I thought I would have a little change, so I went down for a fortnight to the Cliff house on —— Beach. It's a quiet, pleasant resort, and you'll always find fifty or a hundred people there during the season. The landlord is a good fellow, and a distant relative of mine. I thought he looked flurried when I went in, and after a few minutes he took me one side, and said: "Tom, you've come at an unlucky time. I had a very good cook, that I got from Boston, at twenty dollars a week; but she's a high-tempered woman. Last evening she quarrelled with her assistants; this morning the breakfast was all in confusion, and now she's packing her trunk to leave by the next train. In two or three days I can probably get another one down in her place; but what we're to do meanwhile, I don't know."

"But, Norton," said I, "isn't there some one near by or in the house who can take it?"

"I doubt it," he replied. "I've half-a-dozen girls from the vicinity doing upstairs work—one of them from your town, the best waiter in the dining room. But I suppose all of them would either be afraid of the responsibility, or think it beneath them to cook; though they would have plenty of help, and earn twenty dollars where they now get three."

"Who's here from Greenland?" I asked, for I knew something of almost every one in that place.

"Mary Lyford."

"Mary Lyford? A black-eyed, light-footed girl, about twenty years old, with two brothers in Colorado, and her father a farmer over toward Stratham?"

"Yes, the very same."

"Why she's the prettiest girl in Greenland—at least I thought so two years ago, when I danced with her at the Thanksgiving party in the village; and I heard last fall that she took the prize at the Manchester fair for the best loaf of bread. But why is she here?"

"Oh, you know farmers haven't much ready money, and I suppose she wanted to earn something for herself, and to come to the Beach, like the rest of us. You said she took the premium for her bread. I believe I'll go into the dining-room and propose to give the cook's place to any one of the girls who would like it, and who feels competent to take it. I must do something," and looking at his watch he went out.

"Ten minutes later he came back, clasping his hands, and exclaimed:

"Mary Lyford says she will try it."

"Hurrah for Greenland," cried I, "Isn't that plucky? by Jove, I hope she'll succeed, and I believe she will."

"You mustn't expect much to-day," said Norton. "Things are all topsy turvy in the kitchen, and it'll take some time to get them straightened out."

"Just then a new arrival claimed his attention, and with a serener face he turned away.

"Dinner was poor that day; supper was a little better. And, in spite of Norton's caution, I began to be afraid that Greenland was going down. But the next morning what a breakfast we had! juicy steaks, hot potatoes, delicious rolls and corn bread, griddle-cakes that melted in your mouth, and coffee that lost none of its aroma in making. Thenceforth every meal was a triumph. The guests praised the table, and hastened to their seats at the first sound of the bell. Norton was radiant with satisfaction, and I was as pleased as if I had been landlord or cook myself. Several times I sent my compliments and congratulations to Mary; but she was so constantly occupied that I never had a glimpse of her till the night before I was to leave. I was dancing in the parlor, and had just led a young lady of the Matilda Jane stamp to her mamma, when I saw Mary standing with the dining-room girls on the piazza. I went out, and shaking her by the hand, told how interested I had been in her success, and how proud I was to find a Greenland girl so accomplished. She blushed and thanked me, and said in a modest way, that she was very glad if all were suited; and then Norton came up and expressed his entire gratification with what she had done. As she stood there in a white pique dress, with a scarlet bow at her throat, and her dark hair neatly arranged, she looked every inch a lady.

"Do me the favor, Miss Lyford," said I, "to dance the next cotillion with me?"

"Ah! Mr. Foster," she replied, looking archly at Norton, "that isn't expected of the help."

"The help!" I said, indignantly. "You are queen of the establishment, and I invite you to dance, and so does Mr. Norton."

"Certainly, I do," he answered. "Go and show the company that you are at home in the parlor as well as in the kitchen." So, smiling and blushing, she took my arm.

"Didn't we make a sensation when we went in? Perhaps there was no fellow there with a better "social position" (you know the phrase) than I; and I had been quite a favorite with the ladies. Some laughed, some frowned, some whispered to their neighbors, but I paid not the slightest attention to it at all, and Mary looked so pretty, and went through the dance with grace and dignity, that before it was over I believed all regarded her with admiration. I didn't wait for comments, but escorted her out as if she had been the belle of Boston.

"Good-night, Miss Lyford," I said, when we reached the hall. "I am going in the morning, but I shall see you again when you get back to Greenland."

"Good-night, Mr. Foster," she replied; "I thank you for your kindness." Then she added, laughing, "Have you any orders for breakfast?"

"Why, yes; I should like to remember you by a plate of muffins such as we had yesterday."

"You shall have them, sir," she said, as she disappeared in the doorway. And have them I did.

"Three weeks later Mary came home to Greenland, with more than a hundred dollars in her purse, and a fame that was worth thousands. I went to see her at her father's house." I found her every way excellent and lovely; and the end was that at Christmas we were married."

"Glorious!" I exclaimed. "Give me your hand, Tom! I was afraid you had been taken in by some Matilda Jane."

"Do you think I'm a fool," said he.

Then I told him of my own choice, and I was still talking when the train stopped at the Greenland station.

We soon arrived at his hospitable home. His wife was all he pictured her; a refined, intelligent, handsome woman, who would develop and grow in attractiveness every year of her life. After a merry evening in their pleasant parlor, I went to bed and dreamed that the millenium had come, and that all women were like my blue-eyed girl and Mrs. Tom Foster.

CRAWFORD HOUSE, WHITE MTS., } Saturday, Sept. 13.

The Portsmouth party of trampers and campers left for North Conway on the 10.10 A. M. train, Friday, arriving at 1.45 P. M., and immediately chartered a team for the Notch. At Bartlett, however, on account of the jealousy of the stage drivers, we were transferred to a stage and arrived at the Crawford House at 9 o'clock. Travellers through the mountains are told on arriving at North Conway that the fare by rail, over the Portland & Ogdensburg R. R., to Bartlett, and the stage fare beyond is $8.50 for the round trip, but our party did it for $3 each, and learned that if passengers do not buy a through ticket from North Conway, they will be called on to pay 75 cts. only, to Bartlett, and $3.22 to the Crawford. Queer figuring, isn't it? The cheapest way of travelling is to engage a special team of Mr. Levi Wheeler, of the Orient House, North Conway. Those of the party who were carefully robed in garments of heavy texture to protect them from the chilliness of these mountain regions had reason to regret their extremely cautious preparations, as the temperature was 80 degrees in the shade, considerably higher than at the seashore.

The Portland & Ogdensburg railroad is completed to Bartlett, and the cars run to within 15 miles of the Notch. The individual who held the ribands which guided the six-in-hand that drew the coach which held the baggage and "the fellows aloft," informed us that next year it is probable the road will be extended through the Notch—which news we received with 50 per cent. discount, and wondered if Prof. Wise and the Graphic balloon had gone "up among the little stars, sailing 'round the moon." The contractors for building the road, Fuller & Harding of New York, have a large part of it graded and ready for the rails to within twelve miles of the Notch. The engineer of the road has finally located it on the side of Mount Willard instead of Mount Webster, the rise for eight miles being 117 feet to the mile on an average. The grading on the other side of the Notch will be about the same.

The party have gained a day by coming direct to the Crawford and will make the ascent of Mount Washington to-morrow, going from there to the Twin Mountain House.

G. W. M.

TWIN MOUNTAIN HOUSE, } Carroll, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 14.

At the Crawford House, Saturday morning, the party divided, Mr. Stavers and yours truly coming by stage to this famous hostelry, which is full, every room being engaged. The camp equipments we expected to find had not arrived, though four days on the road, a warning to people wanting merchandise in good season not to have it sent by freight. The question before the party now is, "Will the tent arrive to-morrow?" An unfinished house was engaged through the courtesy of Mr. C. O. Burbank, for the use of the party, and we were obliged to go to Littleton for supplies. A rain set in, however, Saturday afternoon, and as Messrs. Norton, Dow, Hazlett and Rand did not arrive from Mount Washington until 9.45, the party are now at the Twin House, waiting for fair weather and the tent. The three-legged bear, a young cow and "ye yackass" are the principal objects of amusement here. No exciting adventure has befallen us thus far, unless the retreat of two of the "jolly six" from the charge of two cows from a pasture be deemed worthy of mention.

Those who went to Mount Washington after going down the Notch to see the curiosities, walked 25 miles before reaching here—the last ten miles in a drenching rain and darkness that could be felt. They borrowed a lantern at the White Mountain House, which probably saved them from broken limbs. They ascended Mount Washington by the bridle path over Clinton, Franklin, Pleasant and Monroe, a distance of nine miles, amusing themselves by rolling heavy boulders into Oakes Gulch, which went plunging down thousands of feet. The view was very fine until within half a mile of the summit of Mount Washington, where they entered the clouds and encountered a heavy wind. At the summit, the thermometer indicated a temperature of 52 degrees.

After remaining an hour they took the track for Marshfield, footing it down the railway and path in two hours, rain setting in as they neared the base. Just after leaving the Marshfield House for the Twin, a violent storm set in, putting the road in a very bad condition for travel. They reached the Ammonoosuc Falls at 6.05 and had the satisfaction of finding torrents of water tumbling over the fall. By this time, hunger brought them to a rude hut occupied as a boarding house for road laborers, where they partook of a hearty supper at a price so low that it is too ridiculous to mention. The supper, however, was excellent. A veteran stage driver, of thirteen years' experience, Mr. G. S. Oakes, says they measure miles here by starting a rabbit in the road with a hound after him:—when the rabbit is found dead they erect a mile stone in his memory. The party are prepared to believe this statement, and think the hound was slow footed, for they opine they travelled about ten leagues, up and down, most of their stepping being done in the air.

As they entered a road through the dense woods they were obliged to walk hand-in-hand to avoid falling off the bridges. At the White Mountain House, they obtained a lantern of Mr. Colburn, proprietor of the House, who placed the party in grateful remembrance by courteous attendance and suggestions. The closing four miles to the Twin was walked in ninety minutes and the four wearied travellers were greeted by their waiting comrades like the returning prodigal—minus the veal.

To-day the "six-in-all" arose in time to attend religious services in the parlor, which was filled to hear Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, and well were they repaid. The reverend gentleman preached from Luke 10, 38-42, and made practical adaptations of the illustrations afforded by the difference in character of Martha and Mary.

Here at Carroll, the party are indebted to Mr. A. L. Clark and Mr. G. S. Oakes, for afternoon's pleasure and the opportunity afforded for drying clothing.

We leave here to-morrow and shall camp at Franconia, Monday night; the Flume Tuesday night; Thornton, Wednesday night; Plymouth, Thursday night; Centre Harbor, Friday night; and return Saturday, via Winnipesaukee Lake and the Eastern Railroad.

The propeller Ironsides foundered during a terrible gale on Monday, in Lake Michigan, off Grand Haven. The roughness of the water prevented any aid from the shore, and some of the propeller's boats were swamped and the occupants drowned. The power of the new cannon produced in Germany, is shown by their shot piercing iron plates—eleven, twelve, fourteen, and even fifteen inch iron armors. These heavy guns are to be used in the coast defence service. It is believed that the stoutest iron-clad in existence, the British ship Devastation, with its fourteen inch armor, would not withstand the shots of Krupp's new cannon.

The growth of the orange this summer is startling, says the Savanah Advertiser; never was there anything like it. Owners of orange groves at a distance will be astonished when they return in the winter and find the advance of their golden investments. The rapid growth of orange groves this summer is attributed to the uniform regularity of the season.

Col. George H. Pierce, one of the Pierce family of Dover, whose death occurred on Saturday, was a marked man in New Hampshire and one of the ablest in the State. He was a large-headed and large-hearted man, and had hosts of friends. His death was occasioned by corosis of the liver. His age was forty-four years. He was the youngest brother of Thomas W. Pierce of Boston, and Andrew Pierce, Jr., who is at the head of $30,000,000 of railway in St. Louis. Col. Pierce had been from boyhood engaged in railroad affairs. In 1850, he built the road from Farmington to Alton Bay. The European and North American railway, from Bangor to St. John, was one of his contracts, amounting to $7,500,000. He had also been connected with the building of the Sackett's Harbor & Saratoga railroad in New York, the Little Rock & Fort Smith railroad, and the Vineland railroad in New Jersey. At the time of his death he was engaged in the construction of the Portsmouth & Dover railroad.

Pistols and Paniers.

[Memphis Appeal, September 8.]

J. E. White, yesterday afternoon, escaped from the county jail, where he had been placed on the charge of horse-stealing. His escape was an adroit maneuvre, and was so sudden that the jail officials were utterly confused. To render White's escape the more interesting, it was due to the devoted ingenuity of his wife, and was accomplished in the following manner: Yesterday afternoon Mrs. White proceeded to the jail and asked permission to see her husband. This request being granted, she was allowed to converse with him in the reception-room, where she remained some time conversing upon affairs of a domestic nature. None of the jail officials suspected that the devoted wife and imprisoned husband were arranging a plan by which to secure the latter's escape. Unobserved, Mrs. White (so said) gave her husband a pistol which she had concealed in her clothing and carried there for the purpose of accomplishing his escape. While conversing upon family matters they found time to devise the scheme which resulted in the liberty of the prisoner. Upon leaving the jail White was allowed to go with his wife as far as the entrance steps, which are located a few steps from the iron railing of the yard. This railing has a large, massive iron gate. Just as Mr. Murray unlocked the gate, Mrs. White said to him, "Please tell me what time it is." Mr. Murray being a courteous gentleman, could not refuse to impart the desired information, more especially as the request was so softly made by the distressed wife. As he pulled out his watch to tell her the time, White sprang toward him with a drawn pistol, which, being cocked, he presented at the turnkey's head, at the same time remarking, "I want to go out." Mrs. White at this moment seized Murray round the body, and commenced screaming as if terrified. She declared Murray must not, should not, kill her husband. That was an affecting scene, a hazardous piece of acting, and withal somewhat ludicrous. The devoted wife still clung to the astonished turnkey, and White quickly ran out of the unlocked gate. He mounted a horse standing a few yards distant, where it had been left by a friend, and fled at full speed down Auction street toward Fourth. One of the officials, seeing what had occurred, ran out of the building and fired at White, who fell to the opposite side of his horse as gracefully as a Comanche Indian when making the battle circle. The shot failed to hit the speeding animal or the escaped prisoner, who turned down Fourth street by the brick church in Chelsea, and then turned into the Randolph road. When last seen he was crossing the Wolf River bridge, his horse being urged to full speed. Pursuit was made as quick as possible by Detective Curley McCune, Sheriff Doyle with his deputies, Captains Cranmer and Murphy. Detective McCune went out eight miles, but nothing had been seen of the fugitive.

Business Notices.

There is scarcely any disease in which purgative medicines are not more or less required, and much sickness and suffering might be prevented were they more generally used. No person can feel well while a costive habit of the body prevails; besides, it soon generates serious and often fatal diseases, which might have been avoided by a timely and judicious use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—35 cents by Druggists.

Out of Health.

In this common expression is comprehended an immense amount of bodily and mental suffering. It is not necessary to be affected with positive disease in order to experience unutterable wretchedness. A person out of health is weak, languid, low spirited, incapable of much exertion, nervous, irritable, and is sensitive to every change of temperature as the mercury in a thermometer. What such a person requires is invigoration, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will supply it. No need of applying to a physician in such a case. The fee would be thrown away. At the nearest drug store may be had the most efficient and healthful vegetable tonic that the world contains. Twenty-five years' experience has established the fact that among all the stomachics and alteratives known to modern pharmacy this powerful restorative stands supreme, unapproached. Every bottle of Hostetter's Bitters contains more blessings than there were curses in Pandora's box.

Sano Corpore. The influence of the stomach on the brain should be carefully heeded. Let the stomach be in slight degree disturbed, and the entire nervous system becomes a sufferer. Bring the stomach to a healthy tone, and the nervous machinery promptly resumes its perfect running order. Happily, there is no necessity for any long disarrangement of the functions of the stomach, since in AYER'S PILLS we have so perfect a combination, admirably adapted for relief. They have stood the test of years, and have exhibited stomachic properties most wonderful. Their wise use, by keeping the system in perfect order, promotes longevity, and, what is far better, ensures the full enjoyment of the time spent here. We use them and know their value.—[Florence (Kans.) Pioneer.]

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and lead into troublesome disease. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be cast from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of the same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose structure they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucborrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

The Singer Still Triumphant!

At the Vienna Exhibition, the SINGER received the Medal of Merit, the Medal of Progress, and three other Medals for superiority of productions. These are the highest Sewing Machine Awards at Vienna. The SINGER received all the medals awarded to either of the competing machines, and two medals more than any other obtained. Then, in the name of Truth, what is it that prompts people to claim recommendations for the Diploma of Honor? The fact is, no Diploma of Honor has been given to any Sewing Machine Company.

But immeasurably more valuable is The World's Award as shown by sales—proved by sworn returns to the owners of the principal Sewing Machine Patents—which last year amounted to TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN THOUSAND, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-EIGHT (219,758) machines, nine out of ten of them being for Family Use. This is over 45,000 more Sewing Machines than were sold by any other company during the same period, and over One Quarter of all the machines sold in 1872. These enormous sales are owing to the long-tested merits of the Singer Machines, which meet the wants of the public in superiority and simplicity of construction, and capability for great variety and excellence of work. That the users of Sewing Machines find these desirable qualities in the Singer beyond all others, is shown by the sales above given, aside from the awards of International Juries, either at home or abroad.

Lost at Sea.

Among the vessels lost in the recent disastrous gale on the coast of the British Provinces was the schooner Eldorado, of Cape Ann, Capt. Abraham Dearing, with her crew of seven men, all belonging in Kittery. The names of the crew were as follows: Abraham Dearing, master, who leaves two children; Edwin Dearing, the captain's son, unmarried; Erastus Locke, leaves wife and child; Clarence Fernald, son of Wm. Fernald, wife died some months ago, leaving one child; Augustus Tobey, Jr., unmarried, son of Augustus Tobey; Josiah Patch, unmarried, son of William Patch; Furber Fletcher, unmarried, son of Lorenzo D. Fletcher. No particulars have been received by the friends of the seamen, relative to the loss of the schooner, other than the information of her total loss with all on board; and it is supposed she foundered at sea during the gale.

No wreck resulting in such loss of life to citizens of Kittery has taken place since the loss of the schooner Harvest Home, of Kittery, Capt. Richard Seaward, in the great gale of April, 1851. The Harvest Home sailed for the Western Banks on the day before the gale came on, having a crew of nine men all told, and all residents of Kittery, and was never heard of after.

Thoughtlessness.

As the passenger train which arrives here from Boston at 3 o'clock in the afternoon was entering this station on Tuesday, the air brakes were applied as usual, but for some cause failed to hold and consequently the heavy train went through the depot at quite a high rate of speed. There was nothing very bad in this except as it might indicate that the Westinghouse air brake is not infallible. But the other part of the story is as follows: A good looking young lady, whose name we failed to learn, seeing the place of her destination being passed, and being intent upon getting off at Portsmouth, made a rush for the platform, and while the cars were moving at a rate of at least eight miles an hour, jumped from the steps and in an instant lay stretched upon the ground by the side of the track. Several ran to her assistance, but she soon recovered herself from the shock of the fall, and spurning all offers of aid hurried away, looking rather mortified at the result of her foolish haste. This comparatively harmless accident should serve as a warning to persons—especially females—who are inclined to jump from a moving train.

Campo Bello Again.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Sept. 16, 1873.

Messrs. Editors: I saw an article in the last issue of the Portsmouth Journal, yesterday, purporting to come from Chas. Emery of Boston, the late Treasurer of the Pewabic and Franklin Mining Co., with reference to the ownership and agency of the Admiral Owen estate on Campo Bello. I doubt the authenticity of that article, as Capt. Emery was acting as my agent in negotiating for that estate, and the article that appeared in your columns last week from me was submitted to the Hon. John J. Robinson Owen and approved of by him as being correct. Respectfully, your obedient servant, J. M. HILL.

Laconics.

The steamer Major makes a trip to Gloucester to-day.

We notice that the Times office is now located over the Conservatory of Music.

And now the season of the acidulous barberry has come, to set everybody's teeth on edge.

The ledge of granite on which the Rockingham Bank building rests is being blasted to make room for a heating furnace.

The liquor-sellers keep on their illegal traffic with as much placidity as if the new temperance movement betokened no breakers ahead.

Did you ever know a liquor-seller who did not declare that his sales were always heaviest under a rigid enforcement of the prohibitory law? And did you ever know one who did not act as if he thought such enforcement would break up his business?

Second Assistant Engineer Robert Crawford has been detached from the steamer Fortune and ordered to report for examination for promotion to the grade of First Assistant Engineer, preliminary to being ordered to the Monongahela, now fitting for sea at this navy yard.

On Monday night a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen was held to hear the arguments for and against the opening of the new highway on Freeman's Point. A. R. Hatch made the argument for the railroad and S. H. Goodall for the abutters. No conclusion was arrived at, the board laying the matter on the table and reserving its decision.

The new ship Frank Jones, now building at Kittery Foreside, near the navy yard bridge, is to be launched early next week. She will be one of the finest specimens of marine architecture ever sent out of Portsmouth harbor. Her dimensions are as follows: Length of keel, 190 feet; length over all, 212 feet; breadth of beam, 39 feet, 2 inches; depth of hold, 25 feet, 9 inches; number of tons, 1,400. She is owned by Daniel Marcy, John Neil, William Ross, and others. Her builders are Neil & Matthews, and she will be commanded by Capt. Ross.

Merrimac Encampment, No. 7, I. O. of O. F., of Newburyport, will visit the city on Friday, as guests of Strawberry Bank and Mount Simi Encampments. They will arrive at 10 A. M., accompanied by the United States Naval Band. After marching through the principal streets, and partaking of a collation at the State street ward room, the whole party will take carriages at Wibird's Hill for Rye Beach, dining at the Farragut, and returning to the city in season to attend a dance at Congress Hall. The visitors will return to Newburyport by special train on Friday night about 10 o'clock.

The Salem Observer thus speaks of an exhibition concert given last week by the pupils of the Salem Conservatory of Music: "The programme, consisting of a choice and classical selection of organ, piano-forte and vocal pieces, was rendered in an artistic manner, showing that the Conservatory is not an institution of high repute alone, but one of intrinsic value, meriting all the commendation that has been bestowed upon it. The dignity, ease and unassuming manner of those who took part, and the perfect order that attended the rendering of the entire programme, were worthy of note. Each piano-forte pupil that played gave evidence of having received good instruction. Several pieces upon the organ were rendered with precision and characacter, while the vocal pieces, without exception, were executed with a finished exactness. To hear Prof. Metcalf's pupils sing is to be convinced that his system of voice culture does indeed 'perfectly fashion, symmetrically develop, and highly cultivate the voice.'"

The Burning of Columbia, S. C.

Gen. Sherman continues his controversy with Wade Hampton as to whether Columbia, S. C., was burned by the advancing Union army, or the retreating rebels. Gen. Sherman now brings forward the statement of soldiers of a small detachment of the 17th Corps, which was first in the city. They are positive they saw rebel soldiers ripping open and setting fire to bales of cotton turned into the street by Hampton's orders, and also plundering stores on Main street. Gen. Hampton admits that he made preparations to destroy the cotton, but desisted because he was afraid of burning the city with it. Gen. Sherman maintains that no matter what Hampton's orders were, either his rear guard, or rebel stragglers, did the mischief.

—Gopher, or prairie squirrel, is said to be very plentiful in parts of Wisconsin this season. When other provisions are scarce the inhabitants go for gopher.

Why do Summer Roses Fade?

[Long Branch Cor. Philadelphia Press.]

The melancholy days, the saddest of the year to hotel keepers and hack-drivers, are at hand, though not yet actually here. Heaped on the floors of halls and piazzas the yellow and gray trunks of the wayfarers stand waiting for checks and the express man. Ambulant mountains of baggage stagger slowly down the avenue. Carriages flit past in ghostly mimicry of their former state, close swathed in shrouding draperies, dressed for travelling and hastening homeward. Parlors and piazzas are tenanted by stray groups that linger the last of the throng, and who watch with earnest interest each departing comrade, knowing well that the place so left vacant will not again be filled this season.

The fragile ties of summer friendships and seaside acquaintances are to be broken, in many instances never again to be united. Like travellers that meet in mid ocean or on a mountain-top, we have paused for brief greeting, a few pleasant words, an exchange of mutual civilities. And now the end has come. Hands lightly clasped must sever, never perhaps to press palm to palm again. Hearts half won must be wholly disunited, and wide miles of land and ocean must part many of those who have laughed away these bright summer hours in careless and gay companionship. "Ichabod" is written over all things. I quote from the sweetest poem of our latest poet:

The feast is ending, the guests are going,
In house or singly they quit the boards,
The torch is paling, the flutes stop blowing,
The meat is eaten, the wine is poured.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Kidney Diseases, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs.
No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents."
